Area Antlers Collect High Contest Scores

He notes that even though next year's deer classic is over a year away, in April, 1985, he is willing to score antlers free of charge, at any time. "It's a lot easier on me if I can spread the work out so I don't have to do it all in the last two weeks before the show," he admitted.

RIVER VALLEY

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Stucy were visitors and coffee guests at the Jack and Clara Radniecki home recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Omer Nesland, Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Stolaas and Mr. and Mrs. Orlan Stolaas attended the funeral of Mrs. Selma Breiland at Our Saviour's Lutheran church in Thief River Falls on Thursday. Our deepest sympathy is extended to the family: Oscar, Donald, Mildred and Ruby and their families.

A joint birthday party was held for Mrs. Korydon Chervestad and daughter Abegail on Sunday. Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Brad Nelson and family, Robert Flaten, Danny and Duane Nelson, Orlando and Helen Chervestad. Happy birthday Carol and Abby.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Klove of Detroit Lakes were Thursday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Orlando Chervestad in Detroit Lakes along with Robert Flaten and Danny Nelson.

Orlando and Helen Chervestad stopped over to visit with Sherman and Jean Knutson on Sunday evening.

CARD OF THANKS

No words can adequately express our sincere feeling of gratitude for all the acts of kindness shown us in our time of sorrow. A special thank you to Fathers Stan Bourasso, Dave Super, Keough Patnode for their comforting words. To Sister Caroline and her fifth grade class for all the prayers they offered for us during this past year. To the Circles that served the evening meal and the noon lunch at church. We would like to express our sincere thanks to Dr. Heinrichs and the staff at Northwestern hospital for the excellent care they gave Sid during his trying times. The nurses staff in the I.C.U. unit and the second floor nurses for always giving excellent care and for caring so much. To all our friends and relatives for all the love, prayers and concern that has been expressed. For those who brought food to our home, for the beautiful floral bouquets, the Masses, cards, memorials, and to Green funeral home for their kindness and understanding. Thank you all for your throughtfulness and may God bless you.

ATTEST: Kenneth Olson,
Ex-Officio
Clerk of County Board

Glenn Tasa, Chairman
Pennington County
Board of Commissioners

Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
February 14, 1984

Pursuant to adjournment, the Pennington County Board of Commissioners met in the Commissioner's room of the Courthouse in Thief River Falls on Tuesday, February 14, 1984, at 10:00 a.m. Members present: Hoffman, Koop, Stenberg, Tasa and Granbanski. All present.

Sheriff Richards appeared before the Board to discuss the possibility of having an Emergency Service Conference. Also mentioned the 911 telephone system. Sheriff Richards will gather more information on this emergency system.

Robert Pope, Honeywell Representative, appeared before the Board to present a proposal for inspection, adjustment and cleaning of thermostats and testing steam valves and steam traps in the courthouse heating system. Mr. Pope thought a 7-day programer for automatic night setback of temperature was needed. Greg Sandahl, Head Custodian, explained to the Board that he knows of some thermostats that were out of adjustment — one being in the courtroom which has been keeping the temperature in the 80's. He stated that they were capable now of manually setting back temperatures at night but was not being used because it would require someone being here early enough to set temperature back to normal. Honeywell's proposal would cost $1,320.00. County Board approved this proposal.

Roseanne Nelson, clerk-typist from the Motor Vehicle Department, appeared before the Board requesting a classification change from clerk-typist to technical clerk and also asked to change from a 37.5 hour week to a 40 hour week. The reclassification was not granted. Auditor will check into the request for the 40 hours.

Mario Davis, representing Ziegler, gave the Board an overview of new options available on road graders and also an overview of total cost bidding.

Norris Thune, Thune Upham Insurance Agency, presented the 1984 Insurance Package. The premium was down to $23,987.00 from $25,362.00 in 1983. All items are insured at replacement cost for building and contents. A motion was made by Commissioner Grabanski, seconded by Commissioner Hoffman to accept the insurance package from Thune Upham Insurance Agency for the premium of $23,987.00. Motion unanimously carried. This package does not include workman's compensation insurance.

Dave Broten, General Diesel and Equipment Company, Inc., was in to discuss Champion Motor Graders.

County Engineer Olson was in to get times and dates approved for bid lettings.

Motion made by Commissioner Koop, seconded by Commissioner Stenberg, the County Engineer and County Auditor are authorized and instructed to advertise for bids for a motor grader with bids to be opened March 13, 1984, at 1:30 p.m. Motion unanimously carried.

Motion by Commissioner Koop, seconded by Commissioner Stenberg, the County Engineer and County Auditor were authorized and instructed to advertise for gas and fuel oil bids and also for bids for lubricating oil with bids to be opened at 2:00 p.m. March 13, 1984. Motion unanimously carried.

Motion by Commissioner Koop, seconded by Commissioner Stenberg, the Engineer and Auditor were authorized and instructed to advertise for bids for equipment rental for 1984 with bids to be opened March 13, 1984, at 2:15 p.m. Motion unanimously carried.

Motion by Commissioner Hoffman, seconded by Commissioner Grabanski, the Engineer and Auditor are instructed and authorized to advertise for bids to be let at 2:30 p.m. on March 13, 1984, for bituminous overlay and aggregate shouldering on CSAH No. 27 from South county line North to TH No. 1; CSAH No. 3 from River Valley bridge East to CSAH No. 27, and CSAH No. 28 from TH No. 1 and North to North county line. Motion unanimously carried.

Carol Johnson and Al Christofferson, representing Thief River Sports Boosters, were in to discuss the possibility of having pull-tabs at the Lantern. They felt this was a way to raise money for all sporting activities as they do not give to just one. County Attorney Olin indicated they would meet the criteria to qualify under the County Ordinance governing pull-tabs but they would have to work out a rent agreement with the Lantern instead of a percentage of the profits as they had indicated as being agreed to. Commissioner Koop then moved to deny the request of the Sports Boosters to have pull-tabs at the Lantern. Commissioner Hoffman seconded the motion and upon call for votes, voting for the motion were Hoffman and Koop; against — Stenberg and Grabanski. Chairman declared the motion failed. The Board then asked the Sports Boosters to come to an agreement with the Lantern for rent and to come back to the next Board meeting.

Ned Crosby from the Center for New Democratic Processed, stopped in to invite the Commissioners to a meeting at the Northland Community College entitled "How Farming Effects Water Quality in Minnesota". Meeting is at 8:00 p.m. this evening.

Carol Lindquist was in to discuss the Highway Accountant position. This position has been offered to her but she has not officially accepted it. She feels the Board should make some commitment on additional compensation for the added work. No action taken on this.

Olaf Olson appeared before the Board to discuss delinquent taxes on a piece of land in Hickory Township that he is getting back on a concellation of contract for deed. The problem occurred because the parcel he sold on contract was combined with another parcel the buyer already owned. Both Olaf and the buyer will be in to pay off the taxes so the piece can be split again.

A delegation from the Fair Board consisting of Dick Anderson, Norris Thune and Skip Swanson appeared before the Board requesting that the Fair Association have pull-tabs as a fund raiser at Lon's Restaurant & Pub. They were instructed to contact the City of Thief River Falls as Lons is within the City limits.

Don Stewart and Dave Kildahl, representatives from Stewart & Walker, Inc. and the City Planner, Jack Quinlivan, appeared before the Board to discuss the First Street Bridge. In 1979 the bid of Stewart and Walker, Inc. to do the engineering on this bridge was approved. To date, $4,651.16 of these funds have been expended. Due to a change in Federal requirements and extra work now involved, $20,000.00 is now the total amount needed to complete the final plan. Motion by Commissioner Hoffman, seconded by Commissioner Grabanski to approve $19,000.00 ($11,651.16 new money) to Stewart & Walker, Inc. to complete final engineering for the First Street Bridge in Thief River Falls. Motion unanimously carried.

Commissioner Granbanski left the meeting at 4:00 p.m. to attend a solid waste hearing.

Motion by Commissioner Koop, seconded by Commissioner Stenberg and unanimously carried that it shall be permissive for all employees and elected officials who retire from county employment after 10 years or more of service and are between the age of 55 and 65 years, may continue to remain on the county group for Blue Cross-Blue Shield hospital and medical insurance with the condition that said employee must pay the county the current premium rate being charged for said insurance each month before the first day of said month. This also authorized Blue Cross-Blue Shield the authority to set up a Retired Employee Sub-group within our health insurance group.

Moved by Commissioner Hoffman, seconded by Commissioner Koop to approve a gravel pit lease as presented with Henry & Myrtle Lund located in the NE¼ Section 21, Township 150 Range 39. Motion unanimously carried.

Moved by Commissioner Hoffman, seconded by Commissioner Koop to authorize and instruct the County Engineer and County Auditor to avertise for part-time seasoal help for the County Highway Department. Motion unanimously carried.

A petition for cleaning of CD No. 77 was filed and approved by the Board.

The following resolution was introduced by Commissioner Stenberg and moved for adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED as a member of the Minnesota Counties Insurance Trust, we elect not to cover our employees under the Minnesota Worker's Compensation Act, while they are participating in a ridesharing arrangement as defined under Statute 1982, Sec. 169.01.

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Hoffman and upon vote, unanimously adopted.

11 Local Piano Students Win State Contest

Eleven piano students of Marcia Knuttila were winners in the Minnesota music teachers association (MMTA) state piano contest held Saturday, March 17, at Normandale community college in Minneapolis.

Contest preliminaries were held in February with 4,565 students from throughout the state competing. From these, 1,838 advanced to the contest finals at Normandale, competing in eight categories set up according to age level. As part of the MMTA curriculum, which integrates theory and performance, a designated theory test level was required in some categories.

Winner in the Junior-A category (9-10 years of age) was Ellen Olson, daughter of Gina and Ron Olson, Thief River Falls. A fourth grader, this was Ellen's second time as a state winner. She performed "Morning Mist" by Everett Stevens, earning a score of 96. Alternate winner in Junior-A was Brian Lehrer, son of Karen Rud and Mike Lehrer, Thief River Falls. Brian is a fifth grader and performed "Minuetto" by James Hook, earning a score of 95.

Winners in the Junior-B division (11-12 years old) were John Wallberg, fourth grade son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wallberg, Thief River Falls; and Jason Heinrichs, seventh grade son of Dr. and Mrs. Rick Heinrichs, Thief River Falls. Jason performed "Two Landler" by Franz Schubert, earning a 96. This was John's fourth consecutive year as a state winner. Alternate winner in Junior-B was Kia Anderson, seventh grade daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Anderson, Thief River Falls. She performed "Sonatina Toccata" by Denes Agay, earning a 95.

Winners in the Intermediate-A division (13-14 years old) were Brenda Ode, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Ode, and Karin Tyler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Tyler, all of Thief River Falls. Karin performed "Air" by Franz Joseph Haydn, earning a 96; and Brenda performed "Sonatina In A-Minor" by G. Horvath, earning a 96. This was Brenda's fourth time as a state winner. Alternate winner in Intermediate-A was Anne Gobell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lon Gobell, also of Thief River Falls. Anne performed "Sonatina in B-Flat Major" by Anton Diabelli, receiving a score of 96. All three girls are eighth graders.

Winners in the Intermediate-B division (15-16 years old) were Kevin Anderson, tenth grade son of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Anderson, Thief River Falls; and Jennifer Cyr, ninth grade daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frankie Cyr, Oklee. This was the second year as a state winner for both. Kevin performed "Air" by Bela Bartok, earning a 96; and Jennifer performed "Italian Polka" by Serge Rachmaninoff, receiving a 96.

Winning in the Senior-B division (19-20 years old) was Sandra Rustan, 11th grade daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rustan, Oklee. Sandra performed "Sonata in F-Major, First Movement, Allegro" by Ludwig Van Beethoven, earning a 96. This was Sandra's fifth year as a state winner.

After each competition, winners are automatically moved into the next division, which explains why some of the students competed against students older than themselves.

Other piano students who competed in the state contest after winning district competition included Jami Dehnert, second grade daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Doug Dehnert, St. Hilaire; and Karlace Johnson, fifth grade daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Johnson, Thief River Falls.

Winners in the state competition have earned the honor of performing in the 49th annual state honor student concert to be held at 7 p.m. June 2, at Northrop auditorium in Minneapolis. Philip Brunelle, music director for the Minnesota opera and the Plymouth music series, will conduct the 700 winning students in 31 different compositions for ensemble piano. If any of the winners are unable to participate, their designated alternates may replace them.

Stumpf, Sparby Wouldn't Raise Drinking Age

Special To The Times
by Jim Robins
Northern Star
New Service

Despite suffering an early setback, supporters of raising the drinking age from 19 to 21 continue to push for passage of their bill this year.

After losing 3-1 in Senate subcommittee just before the beginning of the year's session, the bill was believed to be dead.

However, proponents of the 21 drinking age have been emphasizing that no bill can be entirely eliminated from consideration before the session ends. They indicate that there is a strong possibility the bill will be renewed on the floor of the House or Senate.

"If it was a flat-out vote, a single issue — which I doubt it will be — I would have difficulty in strictly supporting the change," said Sen. LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer. "But I think there are some other things we can do to tighten up the laws regarding driving and possession."

One possible solution, he said, would be revoking the license of a teenager ticketed for possession of alcohol. "One thing about teenagers is that their license is very important," Stumpf said. "You have to have a good rationale for taking it away."

The Legislature must make sure that if stiffer penalties for teenage DWI are enacted, the guidelines must be precise, he added. "Just to say alcohol in the bloodstream is not good or needed," he said. "We can't be violating their rights, either."

Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls, objects to efforts to make major legal changes without thorough legislative committee action. "I don't like to see that happen," Sparby said. "It isn't fair to the proponents or opponents."

The bill is not likely to be heard in the House after its Senate committee defeat. With that in mind, Sparby would not like to see an effort to attach it to another bill on the House floor.

"It should go through the hearing process," Sparby said. "That's how we do it with all major bills."

He feels the effort would be futile, anyway. "I don't hear a lot of support for it in the House," he said.

Three key arguments are used to push for the increased drinking age. First, some studies link reduced auto accident rates with raising the drinking age. Michigan is most often cited as an example.

The 'trickle down' theory was a persuasive argument used when the state raised the drinking age from 18 to 19 in an effort to keep liquor out of the hands of high school students.

The one year jump hasn't been effective, proponents claim, but a raise in the drinking age to 21 should take care of the problem.

Some studies also indicate that alcohol may have more adverse affects on teenagers than people who have reached 21, by altering still maturing growth glands.

Opponents claim that both the health and accident studies are inconclusive. They point out that drunken driving laws have been toughened and existing laws are available to punish alcohol abusers, but the 21 drinking age would penalize the majority of young people who would drink sensibly.

In addition, opponents argue that better education among families and in schools is the most effective way of reducing alcohol abuse.

Many legislators, especially those representing border communities, are concerned that changing the drinking age could promote 'border-hopping.' The greatest concern is along the Wisconsin border. That state has a drinking age of 19, but is unlikely to hike the age to 21.

The border-hopping problem would be eliminated by setting the drinking age at the federal level. A federal proposal, setting the age at 21, has been widely discussed recently. Several legislators, on both sides of the state issue, see the federal solution as the best way to go.

Other related proposals are under consideration in St. Paul. There appears to be strong support for a proposal that would automatically suspend the license of anyone under the drinking age caught driving with any level of alcohol in his or her system.

MANUFACTURING firm of Independent Machine Service was welcomed to Thief River Falls as a new business recently by Chamber Ambassadors Bill Duckworth, left, and Dwight Tangquist, who extended congratulations and a first dollar of clear profit to co-owner Darrell Magner. Located in the former Puetz Cabinet building along the airport road, the business prints and cuts self-adhesive labels for price-marking equipment.

Federal Signal On White Earth Plan Expected

In a meeting with Interior Secretary William Clark last week, Congressman Arlan Stangeland secured a pledge that the Reagan administration will send a clear signal to the Minnesota legislature before it considers a proposed compromise on the White Earth land disputes in Becker, Clearwater and Mahnomen counties.

"Secretary Clark said the interior and justice departments are expediting their consideration of the overall proposal," Congressman Stangeland said. "He pledged that the administration will take a firm position on the proposal in time for the state legislature to act during its brief March-April session."

Leaders in St. Paul want guarantees from the federal government that it will uphold its share of the proposal if Minnesota approves its share of the $20 million plan.

Congressional leaders have indicated they will support the plan if the state legislature passes its portion and the compromise is generally acceptable to parties involved in the dispute. But Minnesota leaders also want the Reagan administration to agree to the plan.

"The federal and state governments are responsible for those 100-year-old problems," Congressman Stangeland said. "The U.S. interior department failed as the Indians' trustee and Minnesota and county governments seized lands that should not have been taxed. It is up to those governments to make restitution to the Indian heirs and to clear the land titles of current owners who bought and worked the land in good faith."

Under a proposal discussed in Washington on March 1 all current titles to disputed lands would be cleared. In return, Minnesota would provide $3 million or approximately 10,000 acres of state and county land near the reservation to the White Earth Band. The federal government would pay $12 million in compensation and would provide $5 million in administrative funds.

Minnesota Attorney General Skip Humphrey, Senate majority leader Roger Moe, and House majority leader Willis Eken are working on the state's portion of the plan. The federal share is based on legislation (H.R. 2246) written by Congressman Stangeland. Minnesota's U.S. Senators Dave Durenberger and Rudy Boschwitz are backing the federal part of the compromise in the Senate.

"If this compromise can be passed and questions of ready access and jurisdiction for non-Indians can be answered, we could solve long-standing problems and revive the economy in the three counties," Congressman Stangeland said.

Simplicity vs. Deere & Sears.

ASK ABOUT OUR RETAIL FINANCING PROGRAM

Call us for a complete feature-by-feature comparison of our 16 hp. Garden Tractor with other leading brands. (Unless a phone is only a reach away, keep reading. The following are a few of the reasons why we feel a [illegible] is a better buy.)

The Cut. Strictly a matter of personal taste? Not really. Our reputation for the industry's best cut is no accident. Our deck is mounted on the front axle, not the frame, and it floats up and down on full-width rollers at the rear for a more even cut, minimizing the possibility of scalping. A deep housing creates maximum uplift. And grass dispersion is excellent (fewer of those clumps we call "windrows"). Deere doesn't have this combination of features, nor does Sears.

The Seat. Hi-backed and deep-cushioned, with unique adjustable spring suspension for a more comfortable ride. Seat adjustable fore and aft. Springs easily adjust to driver's weight for maximum comfort. Sears and Deere don't have this combination of features.

The Engine. A twin-cylinder, Industrial/Commercial Briggs & Stratton. With cast iron liners, oversized muffler, and Stellite* valves and seats, you can look forward to many seasons of comfortable, quiet rides. John Deere's engine has a single cylinder.

Sealed Beam Headlights. An important safety/convenience feature when snowthrowing early in the morning, or mowing at dusk. Sears and Deere don't use sealed beam headlights.

A Tighter Turning Radius. A compact 24" for trimming around trees, fences and flower beds. Gear and pinion steering assures light, precise handling.

Controlled Traction Differential. Reduces traction loss due to wheel spin. No one else has it. Another important feature: a heavy-duty cast iron transaxle, with full ground engaging capability. Designed and built by Simplicity. Variable speed drive, standard.

Braking/Clutching. All in one step. Single foot action declutches, then brakes. Gives quick, convenient response.

Front and Rear PTO. A Simplicity exclusive: a built-in rear power take-off shaft. No special drive kit is needed to hook up the tiller. Front, center and rear attachments can be changed in minutes with our Quick Hitch* "pins 'n clips" system.

The Hood and Grille. All steel. Deere's hood is fiberglass. Sears, plastic.

Starting Indicator Lights. Another [illegible] exclusive. Two dash-mounted indicator lights let you know controls are in proper position, ready to start.

Wide Turf Tread Tires. Wider tires have a bigger "footprint" to distribute vehicle weight. Optional agricultural tires provide better traction for tilling, plowing and grading.

FASCINATING FISHES

"See! See!" Amy cries, using one of her new-found words. Her voice trembles with wonder, and suddenly the fish Bob brought her become more than ordinary. They're magical creatures, slashing through the water with a flick of their tails, golden gleams of fascination.

How thrilling is a baby's world — changing, growing. Every day brings a new experience, some added lore to shape the growing personality.

Bob and I know how important these days are in Amy's development. Her acquaintance with the world now will affect her life greatly. That's why we take her to church every Sunday. We want her to learn of God's love from earliest remembrance.

God is the light of the world. His Church offers you and your family the opportunity to make His presence a joyous reality in your lives.

Sunday Psalm 93:1-5
Monday 1 Corinthians 10:1-11:1
Tuesday Exodus 20:1-17
Wednesday Psalm 19:7-14
Thursday Luke 13:1-9
Friday Romans 5:1-11
Saturday 1 Samuel 16:1-13

Program subject to change without notice.

Two ways to protect your crops from drought, hail, fire, pests, and other natural disasters.

2. PCA All-Risk Crop Insurance

Good luck charms don't pay any bills in the event your crops are devastated by Mother Nature.

All-Risk Insurance, on the other hand, not only protects you against natural disasters, it works to minimize your losses as well.

And that's good risk management. Because when you're protected against major losses, your basic net worth is more secure. And, when borrowing money, that's a more important consideration today than ever before.

All-Risk premiums are 100% tax deductible, too. And, PCA markets several insurance programs for the flexibility farmers require.

All-Risk Insurance.

It's a lot better than good luck because you can always depend on it.

Call your local PCA for more information.

Alaska Snow Crab Puffs — Simple, Convenient Hors d'Oeuvres

Simplicity is often the key to the most popular hors d'oeuvres. That's why Alaska Snow Crab Puffs have great appeal. Another plus — they can conveniently be prepared the night before and completed just before serving.

For preparation, you can assemble the topping, which features Alaska Snow crab complemented with mayonnaise and Parmesan cheese, onto toast rounds. The appetizers can be refrigerated for one hour before broiling and serving.

Or, prepare the Snow crab topping, refrigerate it overnight and assemble the appetizers the following day.

To serve, broil Alaska Snow Crab Puffs until light brown and puffy. Be creative with the garnish; try fresh parsley and sliced green olives.

For those who want a lower calorie appetizer, try Alaska Snow crab chilled and served with lemon or lime or a zesty red dipping sauce.

Alaska Snow crab is noted for its delicate, almost sweet flavor. It's available, frozen, in clusters, cocktail claws and split legs, year-round.

Alaska Snow Crab Puffs

1 to 1-1/2 pounds Alaska Snow crab clusters, thawed if necessary
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1/8 teaspoon ground pepper
2 egg whites
30 2-inch toast rounds*
Parsley
Sliced green olives

Rinse crab under cool water; crack and remove meat. Measure 1 cup meat; sprinkle with lemon juice. Combine crab meat, mayonnaise, cheese and pepper. Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form; fold into crab mixture. Top each toast round with generous tablespoon of crab mixture; place under broiler until lightly browned.

Garnish with parsley and olives.

Serve hot. Makes 30 appetizers.

*To toast bread rounds, place on cookie sheet; bake at 450 F. 4 minutes or until lightly browned.

Do Ahead Tip:* Alaska Snow Crab Puffs can be refrigerated up to 1 hour before baking, filling can be made up to 12 hours before topping onto toast rounds. If mixture separates; gently fold until well-mixed before using.

Does Planning Pay?

To put an opinion right up front, we have never been much of an advocate of long-range planning. That opinion may seem like heresy to many officials in both public and private agencies and businesses, and we would certainly listen to anyone who could convince us otherwise.

Two things bring planning to mind at this time: (1) A news release on a meeting of the American Planning association's national planning conference in the Twin Cities and (2) the Thief River Falls city council's recent dilemma regarding zoning changes.

James Bellus, director of planning and economic development for St. Paul, said the conference is being conducted in the Twin Cities because they are "nationally recognized as a leader in planning." He said tours are scheduled to show off the central downtown areas, riverfront development, Summit Hill and Irvine Park, renovated neighborhoods, St. Paul's energy park, examples of historical preservation, recycling centers, public-private partnerships in neighborhoods, parks, farming enterprises, Control Data Corporation facilities and the cities of Red Wing and Stillwater.

As we think about the Twin Cities areas mentioned, we wonder how much involved long-range planning and how much simply envolved out of necessity or was created out of short-term expediency or opportunity. Our experience has been that deviation from the plan is more the rule than adherence to the plan.

We remember back a few years ago when Hodne & Associates was involved in creating the long-range plan for Thief River Falls. There were a number of meetings and lots of local involvement and an effort to coordinate thinking with a view to the future. And we remember Tom Hodne stating at one of those meetings, ". . . .and if you don't want to follow the plan down the road, you can always change it."

How interesting, we thought. How valuable is a plan that needn't be followed? How good a guide is a model that constantly changes? Indeed, why plan when the future is totally unknown and circumstances dictate what will happen in years ahead?

Neither Hodne, nor his associates, nor the local people who worked with him had any idea that Arctic Enterprises would boom as it did. And when the boom came, how valuable was the plan? Not very. That is just one example.

Over the years since the city planning commission has been established, it has frequently studied, deliberated, struggled and recommended only to have its determinations ignored, rejected or overruled by the city council. In some cases it would appear that the planning commission's recommendation is seriously considered only because it would shift the heat from the council.

The most recent situation involving a move to establish commercial housing in a single residence housing zone is a case in point. Zoning and long range planning must be viewed in the same perspective. Both seek to provide for an orderly progression and a maintenance of stability. The more exceptions are made, the less effective are the constraints.

In our estimation, if long range planning is to have any positive or appreciable affect, it must be given first consideration. If it is only viewed as incidental to the current situation, and secondary to expediency, it ranks in worth with Confederate currency. And the question may be legitimately asked, "Why bother?".

Man Against War

Following column was written by David S. Broder in the Washington Post:

Something has come into my hands that I think is worth sharing. Prof. Fred I. Greenstein of Princeton, author of "The Hidden Hand Presidency," a study of President Eisenhower, has called my attention to a letter Eisenhower wrote 27 years ago which he says has never been published in full.

With the permission of the president's son, retired Gen. John S.D. Eisenhower, I am giving it circulation through this column. I think it is as important a statement on nuclear war as I have ever read.

Richard L. Simon, president of the publishing firm of Simon & Schuster, had written Eisenhower on March 28, 1956, calling attention to a column by Joseph and Stewart Alsop on the Soviet military threat, and urging "that a crash program for long-range airpower and missiles" be given the highest priority, as they recommended.

This is the Eisenhower reply of April 4, 1956:

"Dear Dick:

"Thank you for your letter, which brings up subjects too vast to be discussed adequately in a letter. Suffice it to say here that I doubt that any columnist — and here I depend upon heresay as I have no time to read them — is concerning himself with what is the true security problem of the day. That problem is not merely man against man or nation against nation. It is man against war.

"I have spent my life in the study of military strength as a deterrent to war, and in the character of military armaments necessary to win a war. The study of the first of these questions is still profitable, but we are rapidly getting to the point that no war can be won. War implies a contest; when you get to the point that contest is no longer involved and the outlook comes close to destruction of the enemy and suicide for ourselves — an outlook that neither side can ignore — then arguments as to the exact amount of available strength as compared to somebody else's are no longer the vital issues.

"When we get to the point, as we one day will, that both sides know that in any outbreak of general hostilities, regardless of the element of surprise, destruction will be both reciprocal and complete, possibly we will have sense enough to meet at the conference table with the understanding that the era of armaments has ended and the human race must conform its actions to this truth or die.

"The fullness of this potentiality has not yet been attained, and I do not, by any means, decry the need for strength. That strength must be spiritual, economic and military. All three are important and they are not mutually exclusive. They are all part of and the product of the American genuis, the American will.

"But already we have come to the point where safety cannot be assumed by arms alone. But I repeat that their usefulness becomes concentrated more and more in their characteristics as deterrents than in instruments with which to obtain victory over opponents as in 1945. In this regard, today we are further separated from the end of World War II than the beginning of the century was separated from the beginning of the sixteenth century.

"Naturally, I am not taking the time here to discuss the usefulness of available military strength in putting out 'prairie fires' — spots where American interests are seriously jeopardized by unjustified outbreaks of minor wars. I have contented myself with a few observations on the implications of a major arms race.

"Finally I do not believe that I shall ever have to defend myself against the charge that I am indifferent to the fate of my countrymen, and I assure you that there are experts, technicians, philosophers and advisors here, who give far more intelligent attention to these matters than do the Alsops.

"With warm regard, sincerely, Dwight D. Eisenhower."

The letter was marked "personal and confidential." But if ever there was a message that echoes across the decades to our own time, it is this one.

In eight short paragraphs, the remarkable man who led the Allied armies to victory over Hitler and served the nation as its last two-term president, distilled a lifetime of wisdom.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Two American ministers traveling in Germany felt moved to attend a church service although they couldn't understand the language. They also decided to follow the example of the young man seated in front of them in an effort to overcome the language barrier.

During the service the pastor was making announcements. When the young man rose to his feet, the visiting ministers also arose, only to be met with gales of laughter.

Later they discovered that the pastor had announced the birth of a daughter to a couple in the congregation and asked the father to stand.

Did you hear about the senior citizen's group who elected a junior vice president who was 98 years old and then couldn't find a senior vice president?

---

"Who invented tap dancing," the teacher asked her students.

"Nobody invented it," one youngster replied. "It started in a family with six kids and only one bathroom."

---

Asked the secret of his long life, the centenarian replied: "When I work, I work easy. When I sit, I sit loose. When I start to worry, I go to sleep."

MONEY MANAGEMENT

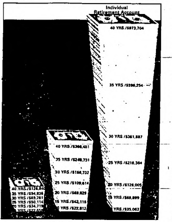

Graphic Source: Changing Times; George Shaffer, artist

These piles of money speak for themselves. The two small piles show that if you take the after-tax value of $2,000 and invest it every year in an investment paying 10 percent annually, taxes eat away at both your initial investment and your earnings. The higher your tax bracket, the bigger the tax bite — and the less you get. But an IRA (an Individual Retirement Account) allows the full $2,000 to go to work for you up front and lets your earnings grow tax free. The big pile shows what a difference that makes. The only time you pay tax on an IRA is when you withdraw money. In most cases that will be after you retire and you'll presumably be in a lower tax bracket.

Is the 10 percent in this example a reasonable return to expect? Well, look at common stock mutual funds, one of the most popular IRA investments. Common stocks do go up-and-down but over the long haul these funds have returned, on average, just a little under 10 percent annually. In the last ten years, incidentally, it's been over 14 percent per year. In any event, a prudent investment in an IRA can add up to a lot of money.

FU Requests Congressional Investigation

Following a recent FmHA decision to release only $50 million of a total $600 million in USDA's Farmers home administration economic emergency loan program in direct loans to farmers, Minnesota Farmers union president Cy Carpenter recently called for two immediate corrective actions. The remaining $550 million is being reserved to cover guarantees on more expensive commercial loans, he said.

This decision is significant because farmers across the U.S. had to go to court to win release of the $600 million, which had been appropriated three years ago. Now, even after winning release of the funds, farmers are being told they will not receive most of the money in direct loans, as congress intended. Instead, many applicants for the program are told to apply for guaranteed loans through commercial lenders. In many cases, banks are reluctant to make guaranteed loans because of the red tape involved in FmHA approval. In most cases, guaranteed loans are made at interest rates one to two per cent higher than the direct emergency loans.

Carpenter called for the removal of two top USDA officials responsible for the program and asked for a congressional oversight investigation into USDA's handling of the program and office of management and budget director David Stockman's interference with the loan program.

Stockman ordered the approval of direct loans for only eight per cent of available funds, withholding the rest. It is possible that none of the remaining $550 million will ever be dispersed, since it would only be spent in the event of a farmer defaulting on a guaranteed loan.

Nationwide total of $600 million was appropriated for the economic emergency loan program in 1981, but was not released until December of 1983 after a federal district court judge ruled that Agriculture Secretary John Block had abused his discretion in not dispersing the loan money. Block argued the program (designed to provide loans to farmers caught in a squeeze between high production costs and low farm prices and unable to obtain other credit) was unnecessary.

"This loan program was clearly designed to help farmers already facing an emergency situation. This abuse — withholding more than 90 per cent of the money available instead of directly loaning it to farmers — is clear violation of the intent of congress," Carpenter said.

"That is why I must demand the removal of two top officials — Undersecretary for small community and rural development Frank W. Naylor and FmHA director Charles Shuman. Both Naylor and Shuman are charged with the responsibility of using FmHA to help farmers. Instead, they have shirked that responsibility by listening to Stockman's direction rather than following the needs of farmers and direction of congress. We ask that their irresponsible actions be stopped and they be removed."

Carpenter also said a complete congressional oversight investigation into USDA's handling of the economic emergency loan program and Stockman's interference is needed to answer the urgent questions of farmers.

"If FmHA is truly the agency to carry out this and other important programs for farmers, we need to be sure their officials will do the job. An investigation is necessary.

"First this administration would not release any of the funds congress wanted to loan to farmers. Now they are making it extremely difficult for farmers who won the right to that money to receive loans," he said.

He specifically asked that the House agriculture subcommittee on conservation, credit and rural development, chaired by Rep. Ed Jones (D-Tenn.), hold the oversight investigation. In addition, Carpenter said he will contact all members of the Minnesota congressional delegation and ask for their support for the investigation.

In Minnesota, many farmers who tried to apply for the direct economic emergency loans were told their applications could not be submitted because the agency had in less than one month surpassed the $50 million limit nationwide. Instead, they were told to apply for the more expensive guaranteed loans.

Economic emergency loans carry an interest rate of 10.25 per cent for production loans and 10.75 per cent for capital loans.

"It is important to remember that this is a loan program, and will be repaid with interest. It is just one program that is needed to stop the flood of family farmers being forced off their land by economics," Carpenter said.

Infant Death Rate Drops Two-Thirds

Infant death rate from birth defects has dropped by about two-thirds during the last 30 years, according to a new report by the state center for health statistics.

Birth defects remain the second leading cause of death among Minnesota children aged one to four, the report notes, and they account for one fifth of all infant deaths. But the number of birth defects in relation to live births has been declining since 1965. An estimated 2,070 children were born with birth defects in the state during 1982.

To be formally released in early March, the report attributes the decline in birth defects to a number of factors — better diagnostic and reparative procedures before a child is born; more effective medical attention after delivery; the use of genetic counseling and other preventive measures, made possible by improved knowledge about birth defects; and the impact of both spontaneous and induced abortion on birth defect statistics.

Birth defects are a "rare event" in Minnesota according to the report, occurring about 12 times per thousand live births. Since 1967, problems of the skeletal system have been the most common type of defect, followed by defects of the genital organs, the lip and palate, and the circulatory system. Down's syndrome is a relatively uncommon problem, accounting for less than five per cent of all birth defects.

The report also cites a number of factors which are associated with increased risk of birth defects. They include:

+ Low birth weight — Infants weighing less than 1,500 grams are eight times as likely to have birth defects as those weighing more than the "normal" minimum of 2,500 grams (about 5½ pounds). Infants weighing between 1,500 and 2,500 grams run twice the risk of infants who weigh more.

+ Ethnic background — Black infants face a 23 per cent higher risk than white infants of having birth defects. The risk for American Indian infants is 21 per cent higher.

+ Age of the mother — Infants born to women under 20 or over 40 run a higher than normal risk of having birth defects. The risks are especially high for women over 40, who are eight times as likely as women under 40 to have a child with Down's Syndrome.

+ Gender — Boy babies generally run a higher risk of birth defects than girl babies.

An estimated 60 per cent of all birth defects occur for unknown reasons, according to the report. Another 20 per cent are attributable to some combination of heredity and other, unknown factors. The remaining 20 per cent are accounted for by genetic mutations, chromosome abnormalties and environmental factors.

Rules On Use Of Contact Lenses Listed

Dr. Mark Fisher, president of the Minnesota Optometric association, said that there are five basic rules to follow when it comes to insuring proper eye care with contact lenses.

First, it is important to determine if contact lenses are right for the user. Contact lenses are the preferred vision correction method for severe near and farsightedness, irregular astigmatism, and problems faced by those who have had a cataract removed.

When ophthalmic preference is not indicated, a person's lifestyle or occupation can be the determining factors in the decision concerning contact lenses vs. eyeglasses. Persons who are outside a great deal, especially in winter, like the fact that contact lenses do not fog up. Older people can now consider wearing contact lenses since bifocal lenses are available.

People who previously disliked the inconvenience of daily lens removal and cleaning can now often opt for the new extended wear lenses which can be worn continuously for a period of from two weeks to 30 days.

The second rule on contact lenses, according to Fisher, is for the patient to obtain a thorough eye examination before lenses are purchased. This examination should include not only a determination of the patient's vision problem, but also an evaluation of health in general. By giving a complete exam, an optometrist can determine the correct type, power and size of lenses to be worn by the patient.

Since contact lenses can't be made directly from eyeglass prescriptions, this exam is essential to insuring that the patient receives the correct fit for his or her lenses, even if they have had eyeglasses previously.

Third, Fisher advises consumers to insure they receive unlimited follow-up visits included in the total cost of the lenses. These visits are necessary because the eyes take a certain amount of time to adapt to the lenses. Most doctors recommend visits annually for hard contact wearers, every six months for those with soft contacts, and every two or four months for patients with extended wear lenses. This does not mean that patients should restrict themselves to these scheduled visits, particularly if problems with the lenses arise.

Fourth, potential contact lens buyers should be wary of low-cost lenses and fittings, according to Fisher. These often tend to be more expensive in the long run since lenses that don't fit well cannot be worn.

"Millions of dollars are wasted annually on contact lenses that don't fit," Fisher said. "Contact lens materials cost all doctors about the same. What the patient is paying for in the fitting charge is the skill and experience that leads to a proper fit and correct treatment of the vision problem."

Finally, Fisher noted, it is important to care for the lenses to derive the longest possible life from them. Contact lenses must be handled carefully because they are very delicate and can break, chip and scratch easily. Cleaning is also important in order to avoid infection and insure the best possible performance.

Since there are many methods and solutions used for the cleaning of contact lenses, only the one recommended by the optometrist should be used. The patient should also make sure that the optometrist takes the time to show him or her how to correctly handle the lenses.

Knowledge Bowl Catches On With Area Students

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

"In the plantation stories of Uncle Remus, who was the personification of mental agility and craft by which Br'er Fox was vanquished?"

"A sofa was marked for sale at $270. This was a discount of 25 per cent on the original price. What was the original price?"

"The tribunals established in the middle ages for seeking out and punishing the heretics were collectively known as the:"

If you knew that the answers to these questions were Br'er Rabbit, $360 and the inquisition, you would be a welcome member of a Knowledge Bowl team. Knowledge Bowl is an interdisciplinary academic contest which is rapidly growing in popularity among area schools. And because much of the contest is oral, spectators can easily become involved as they try to out-think the competing teams.

In District 32 of the Minnesota state high school league, all 18 schools are participants in the program. They include Argyle, Badger, Baudette (Lake of the Woods), Greenbush, Grygla, Hallock, Humboldt-St. Vincent, Karlstad (Tri-County), Kennedy, Lancaster, Middle River, Newfolden (Marshall County Central), Roseau, Stephen, Strandquist and Warroad.

Next Monday at Middle River each of these schools will have two teams entered in district competition and seven other schools from districts in which there is no district competition will join in the event. Maxine Penas, who has supervised the Knowledge Bowl teams at Middle River, is in charge of the district event. Joining the District 32 schools will be teams from McIntosh, Climax, Halstad and Blackduck.

Knowledge Bowl is modeled after the College Bowl television program which ran for several years. During the contest, three teams of four students each compete on the basis of their ability to recall information relating to practically all areas of learning typical of secondary educational programs.

The competition is seen as an academic alternative to COMPUTER HOOK-UP is an integral part of the Knowledge Bowl competition which has gained great popularity in a number of area schools. Competing teams have a signal strip at their tables which is connected to the central computer. When a team member thinks he or she knows the answer to an oral question and touches the tape, it signals the computer, which records the answer sequence. Connie Dahl, a senior at Middle River high school, operates the computer above during a triangular meet involving Middle River, Grygla and McIntosh. Reading questions is Doug Johnson of McIntosh (standing) and judges (seated at left) are Don Kroecker of Grygla and Maxine Penas of Middle River. Thirty-nine teams from District 32 and other area schools will compete in a regional competition at Middle River school next Monday.

Tax Delinquency Down .02 Per Cent For 1983

Despite the recent farm crop disaster years and the general sluggishness of the local business economy, Pennington county taxpayers had a slightly smaller percentage of delinquency on their 1983 taxes than they did in 1982. That's the good news provided by A. E. Jorgenson, Pennington county treasurer.

The bad news is that the 1982 delinquency was the highest in 31 years and the 1983 delinquency was only two-hundredths of a percentage point lower.

Jorgenson's records show that 1983 tax delinquency was 5.09 per cent on Dec. 31, 1983, compared with 5.11 per cent in 1982. Payments made between January 1 and March 1 of this year on 1983 taxes have reduced the delinquency percentage to 4.08 per cent. A year ago the payments between January 1 and March 1 cut the delinquency percentage to 4.15 per cent.

In 1951 the tax delinquency was 5.60 per cent, following a delinquency of 5.65 per cent in 1950 and 5.64 per cent in 1949. Record delinquency for the county was set in 1938 at 15 per cent, followed by 13.5 per cent in 1939, 11.75 per cent in 1940, 11.5 per cent in 1941, 9.6 per cent in 1942 and 7.0 per cent in 1943.

Smallest percentage of delinquency ever was 1.40 per cent in 1976, followed by 1.55 per cent in 1977, 1.74 in 1975 and 1.8 per cent in 1958.

Change in the levy is very evident from looking at the records. When the delinquency was 5.60 per cent in 1951, the total levy was $677,610. In 1983 the total levy was $7,152,845 taxes paid were $4,695,740 and the amount delinquent on December 31 of $364,666 was more than half of what the total levy was in 1951.

Furthermore, although the 1983 tax delinquency was a smaller percentage than in 1982, the amount of dollars delinquent was higher. Delinquency in 1982 was based on a total levy of $6,772,245 while the 1983 levy was $7,152,845. When the highest delinquency percentage of 15 per cent was set in 1938, the total levy of $326,078 was less than the amount delinquent in

Cutting Costs Of Farming Is Topic Thursday

Stretching 1984 crop production input dollars will be the topic of a meeting planned for 8 p.m. in the Pennington county courthouse meeting room, Thief River Falls.

County extension director Terry Courneya will discuss a least-cost approach to achieving reasonable yields in 1984. Alternatives to be considered in primary tillage and seed bed preparation, seeding rates, fertilizer application and weed control will be compared.

"The concept of placing your limited capital resources where they are likely to produce the highest return is going to be crucial for survival for many, if not most farmers this year," Courneya said. "While this concept is always important in business of any kind, it is especially important in farming for 1984," he added.

Discussion type format will be used that includes remarks from experienced farmers and extension agents.

EAGLE SCOUT court of honor for Brian Casavan was conducted recently at Zion Lutheran church in Thief River Falls. Casavan is shown with Jim Hoks, scoutmaster of Troop 59 at Zion, who gave the welcome for the special program and presented the Eagle charge to Brian.

Brian Casavan Has Eagle Rank

Brian Casavan received his Eagle scout award at special ceremonies last Sunday at Zion Lutheran church in Thief River Falls. Scoutmaster Jim Hoks gave the welcome, the Eagle charge and comments on Brian's scouting career.

Glenn Johnsons 25th Anniversary Noted At Babbitt

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Johnson of Babbitt celebrated their 25th weding anniversary recently at St. Pius Catholic church at Babbitt.

Hosting the event were the couple's seven children, Charles, Gregory, Joseph, Mitchell, Susan and Angela all of the Babbitt area; and their four grandchildren.

The celebration began with the Marriage Blessings by Rev. Partiko.

Special guests were the original attendants: Mrs. Jim Hill of Babbitt; Mrs. Orvin Sunsdahl, Goodridge, and Charles Lacari, Biwabik. Junior Sunsdahl of Blaine was unable to attend.

An open house in the church dining hall followed. Centering the head table was an arrangement of white roses, tipped in pink, and accented with white carnations, miniature stephantos and babies' breath. The tiered anniversary cake, was also decorated with pink-tipped roses, matching the corsages worn by the couple and their honor guests.

The cake was cut and served by their daughter, Susan Johnson and daughter-in-law, Lucia Johnson of Babbitt.

Following a social afternoon an evening dinner was served at the Johnson home, where the gifts were opened and viewed. Highlighting the evening was a mock wedding with members of the family participating.

Those attending from this area were Mr. and Mrs. Oscar W. ## Call Toll-Free For Info. On Lupus Disease

Systemic lupus erythematosus — lupus for short — sounds like a serious disease, and it can be, according to the arthritis foundation. Lupus is regarded as one of the arthritic diseases because it attacks the connective tissues, as does rheumatoid arthritis. But it is an extremely complex disease that may damage the kidneys, the heart or lungs, as well as the central nervous system. There are about 500,000 victims of lupus in the United States, most of them women in their middle years.

The arthritis foundation reports that recent advances in diagnosis and treatment have made control of the disease much more effective. But early diagnosis is important to successful control. Symptoms of lupus include a butterfly-shaped rash across the bridge of nose, like a wolf bite, from whence the disease derives its name. Other symptoms include fatigue, weight loss and anemia.

During April a message on lupus may be heard by calling the Arthritis Foundation's toll-free message center, 1-800-552-1278. Free literature on the disease may be requested, as well as other information on arthritis. The message center is one of the foundation's many services made possible in most Minnesota communities by United Fund support.

Delinquent Tax Percentage Is Down In 1983

"I think there is a commendable effort by Pennington county residents to pay their taxes despite some real economic set-backs," Jorgenson said. "The amount of taxes paid after December 31 in both years is significant and makes an appreciable difference in the total delinquency."

Jorgenson also noted that Polk Centre township had no tax delinquency on March 1 this year, with $3,918 in taxes delinquent on December 31 being paid after January 1. Several other townships had substantial reductions in delinquency between January 1 and March 1. Cloverleaf township cut its delinquency from 17.90 to 4.50 per cent, Highlanding reduced its delinquency from 10.18 to 3.15 per cent and North township cut its delinquenty from 7.54 to 4.08 per cent.

St. Hilaire taxpayers paid an additional $1,300 in taxes since December 31 to reduce that community's tax delinquency from 5.0 to 3.88. Goodridge made no additional payments since December 31 and remains at a delinquency figure of 4.68 per cent with $723 in taxes unpaid. Amount delinquent in St. Hilaire as of March 1 was $4,460 and in Thief River Falls was $132,053.

Greatest percentage of delinquency remaining in Pennington county as of March 1 was 8.74 per cent in Star township, followed by 8.71 in Goodridge township and 7.72 in Norden township.

Say Knowledge Bowl Gains In Pupil Interest

athletic competition among school districts. Non-participants can observe their favorite students in competition and match wits with the contestants. Little financial outlay is required of school districts to participate in the program since it utilizes computer equipment which is now available in most schools.

Since any students are eligible for the teams, selection is conducted in a number of ways. Try-outs may be held, principals or teachers may appoint members, students in gifted programs may elect their representatives, tests may be given with the four high scorers making the team or other methods may be employed. Because points are not deducted for wrong answers and speed in answering is an integral part of the game, aggressive students who are not too concerned with making mistakes usually make the best team members.

Most schools in the competition use the Apple Microcomputer which has a program that does the timing, scoring and determination of which team registers in first as each question is asked. A reader to ask the questions, judge to determine if answers are correct and operator for the computer are needed to conduct this program.

Subject areas for questions include logic, geography, literature, sociology, art, journalism, speech, health, grammar, geometry, mythology, sports, library science, construction, current events, quotations, oceanography, business, music, astronomy, geology, meteorology, botany, algebra, proverbs, probability, drama, typing, psychology, poetry, folklore, government, crafts, physics, chemistry, first aid, zoology, trigonometry, bases other than 10, auto mechanices, home economics and outdoor education.

First phase of the competition is a written test of 60 questions which must be answered in a time limit of 50 minutes. One point is awarded for each correctly answered question. Teams work together to answer these written questions, an advantage to students who may not do well in oral rounds.

Sixty questions are also asked in the oral round, which provides the real basis of the contest. The readers asks the question orally and teams press the tape hooked to the computer if they feel they can answer the question. Team members can discuss their answer with one another before providing the judge with the answer. The appointed spokesperson should answer all questions for the team, allowing another team member to answer only if he or she feels unable to pronounce a word properly. Scratch paper is provided and may be used in answering some questions, including mathematical questions.

Teams signalling they believe they can answer a question will be given 15 seconds to answer. If two teams register in before the question is read in its entirety and fail to answer correctly, the third team can ask to have the question read in its entirety. Fifteen seconds will again be awarded in which to give an answer.

Additional information on the District 32 competition will be provided in the Wednesday edition of the Times.

Farm Vehicles Force Drivers To Be Cautious

According to the Minnesota department of public safety, this is the new season when farmers begin moving wide slow moving farm vehicles as they traverse the back roads and highways of the state traveling from field to field plowing, planting, spraying and fertilizing.

"It has been a few months since drivers have had to cope with farm vehicles on the state's highways," says Col. Roger Ledding, chief of the state patrol. "Farm vehicles move at about 15 miles per hour," cautions Ledding. "Drivers in seeing farm tractors or wagons ahead of them often find they are on top of these vehicles before they realize it," Ledding warns.

State law requires every self-propelled unit of farm equipment to display at least one white or amber light visible to the front and a red lamp visibile to the rear when traveling upon a public road between sunset and sunrise. This holds true for combination farm vehicles including self-propelled and towed units. Lights should be mounted as close as practical to the far left part of the implement's extremity. Red reflectors must also be displayed on the rearmost unit of the farm equipment during the affected hours.

Additionally, state law requires the display of the slow-moving vehicles emblem visibile to the rear of the farm equipment. The emblem is required to be displayed at all hours of the day and night. The emblem is triangular shaped, yellow orange in color with red reflective material on the outer edges.

Col. Ledding says the most often seen accident involving automobiles and farm vehicles occurs when a farm vehicle operator makes a left turn across a lane of traffic just as the car behind it has started to pass. "Courtesy and patience can't be emphasized enough," says Ledding, "by both the farm vehicle operator and car driver."

World Record Puzzle Project Begun By 4-H

Local fund-raising efforts began last week for a joint project to benefit both state and county 4-H programs and the Community Program of Arts and Sciences (COMPAS).

Project is also intended to gain entry in the "Guiness Book of Records" as the world's largest jigsaw puzzle, to be constructed six feet wide and 40 feet high against the east wall of the State Fair Coliseum for the 1985 Minnesota State Fair.

Overall puzzle will be in the shape of the state of Minnesota, with pieces shaped like each individual county.

Each county will recommend a design to be painted within the piece, intended to be representative of the county. Although the pieces will be designed by county 4-H members, actual artwork and construction of the puzzle will be done by COMPAS artists.

Fund raising is being done by county 4-H members by selling buttons which state "I Puzzled In 1984." For each $1 button sold, Pennington county 4-H will receive 25 cents, with the remaining 75 cents going to the state 4-H program and COMPAS.

First buttons sold in the county were purchased by Pennington county extension committee from members of the 4-H Ambassadors. Extension committee members also initialed the effort for the Guiness World record ledgers. They include Glenn Tasa, Orlan Stolaas, Lois Swanson, Richard Parnow, Janice Olson, County commissioner Roger Hoffman and County Auditor Ken Olson.

Buttons will be available from county 4-H members through September. Further information may be obtained by contacting the county extension service, phone 681-2116.

REFLECTI NS

There is nothing more magical than being loved. The secure knowledge that you are cared for deeply gives you an inner peace, that no other emotion can match. Let the people you care about know they are loved. It is the most precious gift you can bestow and it provides an inner strength that helps cope with hard times. Love is indeed the most magical of gifts . . . bestow it generously.

MOTIVATIONAL SPEAKER Dr. Jim Knight stressed effective teaching methods at a workshop for Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute instructors Thursday afternoon at Lon's restaurant in Thief River Falls. He used illustrations and examples to show how educational cliches can be misinterpreted to the detriment of students. Example: "We're constantly being told we have to 'cover the material'," he said. "Cats cover material; teachers teach students." His presentation was a point-by-point outline which covered a number of areas including consideration and motivation of the so-called non-traditional student. A professor at Ohio state university, he is on loan to the Minnesota department of education's vocational division.

Homes Sought For French H.S. Students

Homes for 160 French students, ages 15-18, and their chaperones who will arrive in Minneapolis on July 1 for a four-week visit to Minnesota communities, are being sought by Nacel summer hosting program.

All families are eligible to apply for this program. It is not necessary to speak French because the students have studied English for a number of years. The students, who come from all parts of France, wish to learn more about the American way of life by living with a Minnesota family.

The Nacel organization provides medical and accident insurance and the students bring their own spending money. The students will have opportunity to develop greater fluency in speaking English and to establish lasting American friendships. Frequently American teenagers are invited by the family of their French visitor for a French homestay the following summer.

Nacel cultural exchanges is a participant in the President's international youth exchange initiative. The initiative reflects the belief that exchanges of young people are perhaps the best long-range means to ensure close relations and mutual understanding among future generations. Purpose of the Nacel cultural exchanges is to promote international understanding through an experience in American family living.

The program is widely supported by French teachers in the United States and teachers of English in France. Allen and Clare Hibbard, educators in White Bear Lake, are coordinating the efforts to find homes. Persons interested in hosting a student may write to them at 4043 Birch Knoll Drive, White Bear Lake, MN 55110 or telephone (612) 429-7130.

Kay Wedul Is Featured In Publication

Kay Wedul of Thief River Falls was one of two district representatives featured in the spring issue of the Bond, a publication of Lutheran Brotherhood Insurance company for its membership and having a circulation of 530,000.

Kay worked in partnership with her husband Jerry from 1980 until his death last year and since then has pursued her career alone, placing in the top four per cent of all district representatives nationwide in 1983 sales.

"As a beneficiary of life insurance, I realize how important life insurance is to keep a family going," she is quoted as stating in the article. "A lot of the grief process is financial worry. If that concern is eliminated, people have less to worry about when misfortune strikes."

In developing her career, Kay has participated in three week-long home office training schools and plans to attend another this summer on estate and tax planning. She said she received encouragement from her husband, her children, general agent and fellow district representatives.

In 1983 she helped branches in her area conduct two disaster relief projects which helped families with medical problems. She serves as the fraternal branch consultant in northwestern Minnesota.

Also featured in the issue was a district representative from Bismarck, ND, who is being assigned to the Denver, CO, area.

Whose Interests?

We have learned over the years to be cautious in listening to speakers who represent any particular cause. For the most part their biases rule out objective presentations and often the material they present as fact is highly questionable.

We find this is particularly true among militant or semi-militant organizations whose purpose seems to be to generate heat rather than create light. Minnesota COACT fits that category. But the messages carried by spokesmen for these groups should not be dismissed as only efforts to inflame the emotions. Usually there is a reason for the cause being undertaken, and reasonable people would do well to listen and observe.

For that reason we publish the following comments by Steve Brittle, toxic taskforce chairman for COACT, as they were presented recently in the Bemidji Pioneer:

It was not a real surprise to see the Rochester paper line up to sympathize with 3M and try to justify 3M's worries about being held liable for the chemicals it dumped in the past. The same line of thinking, to identify with business interests and not the public's best interests, is the root of the toxics problem.

3M has made many contributions to this state, but it fears about its bad contributions — including irresponsible handling of its toxic chemicals — projects an attitude that says it had the right somehow to do these things. In all fairness, the public shouldn't be charged anything for the clean-up and 3M should pay for it all. Clean-up costs are many times higher than the actual prevention of pollution, and if 3M had devoted a small percentage of its profits all along to this problem, it wouldn't be facing them now.

Short-sightedness in business planning has its penalties, however. 3M has employed people and has helped Minnesota's economy for years, but those benefits are canceled out if the public has to pay that much back to clean up 3M's mistakes or if workers and-or the public are poisoned by 3M's chemicals.

Perhaps 3M should contact Louisiana Pacific. Louisiana Pacific is pulling out of Wisconsin and building waferboard plants in Minnesota because Wisconsin wants them to reduce by two-thirds the emissions of a known carcinogen, formaldehyde, from their factories' smoke-stacks. Louisiana Pacific asserts that Minnesota wants the jobs (more than clean air). And 3M might be in for a rude awakening in Texas, too. Texans might disagree with the social contract offered by 3M — we give you jobs and toxics, or nothing at all.

Similar to this locally is the issue of worker exposure to chemicals. In one local waferboard plant, workers who have allergic reactions to toxics present on the job site are given cortisone to counteract the body's natural warning that it is being poisoned. At another local waferboard plant, workers learn to live with stinging eyes, bleeding noses, congestion, constant headaches, fluid in the lungs, eczema and rashes, liver dysfunction, and a host of chronic reactions that warn the body is being damaged, perhaps beyond repair.

It doesn't have to be this way. Other nations deem it appropriate to protect workers (and the public). The workers and the public must realize that their inaction and non-involvement can only cost them their lives and might cost them their future — many chemicals cause birth defects as well as cancer.

It Ain't Rudy's Fault

Following editorial is from the Ely Echo:

Governor Rudy Perpich lashed out last week against criticism of the Minnesota business climate, noting that he was tired of working almost non-stop in an attempt to attract business to Minnesota while others paint the state as a poor place for business to operate. The problem seems to be that Rudy feels the criticism is personal. And in a political sense, it is. Whoever happens to be in charge is going to get the heat from the party out of office. When Republican Al Quie was governor, the DFL laid every ill in the state at his doorstep. Anyone with a dime's worth of intelligence knew that Al Quie did not cause the Recession, did not close the mines, and create unemployment . . . but he got the blame. It is not surprising that the Republicans are going to lay the blame for every problem in the state at the door of Governor Perpich. Political parties are not known to praise opponents.

However, Rudy has been around long enough to know this is all a game. The underlying problems are not a game, but the political accusations are. The real problems go back a long time. Some of them are the result of not well-thought-out legislative action, some were simply mistakes, some were the results of outside forces and some simply could not be avoided under any conditions. All Governor Perpich can do is deal with what is there, give it his best shot. That's all the voters ask. . . . give it the best shot. Progress is being made in improving the business climate, perhaps not fast enough for some people, but it is progress, nevertheless.

Rudy has got to loosen up a little. We might suggest that he plan to take a few days off this spring and come up to Ely for a little fishing and a few laughs. The fish don't care if you are from the DFL or the IR.

Creeping Capitalism

Following editorial is from the Olympia, WA, "Olympian":

In a recent interview. Sen. Dan Evans emphasized he believed defense spending could be brought under control if we exercised smart buying. One of Evans' colleagues, Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, agrees and calls his legislative approach to the problem "creeping capitalism."

The examples of stupid buying on the part of the defense establishment are legion:

— The Navy has been logged spending $437 for a 12-foot measuring tape of the same kind Ben Bean of Olympia Supply will sell you for $10 or so.

— The Air Force is on record paying $400 for a door knob the size of a golf ball sawed in half.

— Defense contractors have billed the government up to $3,300 for an hour's labor that would cost private business $35 to $50.

Sen. Grassley says such outrages have occurred because the Defense Department has ruled competition obsolete. In its place, he says, the Defense Department has substituted "incestuous" contract negotiations. It is taxpayers who have been victimized.

Sen. Grassley's answer is a bill that would require the Defense Department to increase by five per cent each year the percentage of contracts awarded by competitive bid until 70 per cent of all defense dollars are so spent. It is this push for competitive bidding that the senator terms creeping capitalism.

Difficult as it is to believe, at the present time only six per cent of our defense contracts are awarded on the basis of competitive bids. The remaining are negotiated with a handful of prime contractors who are far too cozy with Pentagon purchasing officers.

Contracts that are negotiated at what might be reasonable prices are jacked up by military buyers who authorize often unnecessary high technology design changes that increase costs and prolong production time, further increasing costs.

Sen. Grassley's bill also would force greater accountability by requiring that contracts be formally advertised and rebid at least once every three years. In addition, all project cost data and the names of contract negotiators would for the first time be made a matter of public record. Finally, if the Pentagon tried to circumvent the legislation. Congress would freeze funds for all negotiated contracts.

Sen. Grassley's knowledge of the workings of the defense bureaucracy stands out in his provision to give the Pentagon clearly defined goals it must achieve and 13 years to learn how to operate with competitive bidding as most American businesses do.

The senator is correct when he says the problem is not the excessive amount paid for the door knobs and measuring tapes, shocking as that is. It is the pervasive mind-set of Pentagon officials who insist on dealing out of sight of both Congress and the American people and in an irresponsible manner that serves the interests of neither.

Creeping capitalism is going to have to go some to get the jump on that.

Borrowed Nonsense:

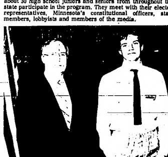
The new bride complained to the grocer about the small size of the eggs. Assured that the selection was what the producer had provided, the bride pouted, "That's the trouble with those farmers. They're so anxious to make a lot of money they take the eggs off the nest too soon!"

Young Man: Inflation has really brought our family closer together. We've had to rent a smaller house."

Secret formula for a carefree old age: "If you can't recall it, forget it."

STATE SENATOR LeRoy Stumpf met last week with Michael Sparby, Thief River Falls high school student, to discuss the duties of his office and the workings of the state legislature. Michael was visiting the State Capitol as part of the Urban Concerns Workshop's PROJECT 120 program. The participating students study state government by spending a week observing the governmental process in St. Paul. Each week about 30 high school juniors and seniors from throughout the state participate in the program. They meet with their elected representatives, Minnesota's constitutional officers, staff members, lobbyists and members of the media.



REP. WALLY SPARBY of Thief River Falls received a visit from his son Mike last week while Mike was participating in the Project 120 program at the State Capitol in St. Paul. Mike, a high school student in Thief River Falls, also had an opportunity to sit in on legislative committee meetings, House and Senate floor debates, and view the Minnesota supreme court. "I never get to see him at home anymore, so I was pleased to have him visit me during session," Rep. Sparby said. "Project 120 does indeed provide a great opportunity for young people to see how state government works." Project 100 is a non-partisan, political education program which each year brings more than 400 high school juniors and seniors to St. Paul to study state government.

Conference Slated On Waste Disposal And Groundwater

"We hear a lot these days about our groundwater, and about how wastes, in many locations, are endangering drinking water supplies and the public health. In Minnesota and elsewhere in the nation it seems as if we frequently hear of new cases where waste spills have contaminated sensitive drinking water sources," states Robert Dunn, chairman of the Minnesota waste management board.

"The problem is complex widespead, and difficult to measure. But it's important, first of all, to separate the facts from the misunderstandings, the unfounded fears from legitimate concerns. Citizens must be aware of the nature of groundwater resources; local officials must know how to monitor the impacts of waste disposal on groundwater and the public health; and society must manage its wastes properly to eliminate threats to groundwater in the future," he said.

Separating out those facts, and constructively addressing the problem, will be the aim of a special day-long conference, "Groundwater and Waste Disposal: What's the Health Connection?" to begin at 8 a.m. April 25 at the Hilton Inn in Minneapolis. Registration fee for the conference, which is open to the public, is $40.

The conference is co-sponsored by the waste management board and six other environmental, health or medical associations and agencies. It will be of special interest to public health professionals, local government or environmental officials, educators, physicians and any citizens concerned about protecting the public health and interested in learning more about the need to protect groundwater resources.

The conference will illustrate the connections between groundwater, waste disposal and the public health. Speakers will discuss the health implications of wastes in groundwater, and new research in diagnosing the impacts of chemical wastes on the public health.

While the problem is of special concern to Minnesota, it is nationwide in scope, and nationally - renowned researchers and experts will discuss connections between waste materials and health problems. An official of the centers for disease control will discuss that federal office's work in assessing the impacts of toxic substances on human health.

In a special luncheon address entitled 'Facts vs. Fear," a national expert on risk assessment will discuss the factors involved in assessing risks to the public health, and the information the public needs to know in assessing — and perceiving — such risks.

And, while attention is often focused on the dangers of hazardous waste contamination, the conference will point out how other wastes — including the garbage in local landfills, agricultural wastes, or even the human wastes in sewer systems — can pose threats to groundwater supplies.

"While it's important to detail and discuss these problems and threats, solutions are being developed, and important steps are being taken to eliminate the threats," Dunn said. Members of a conference panel will discuss what professionals, local officials and citizens can do to deal with the problem in the future. Representatives of the waste management board will discuss measures this state is taking to properly manage its solid and hazardous wastes and eliminate the problems that have resulted from improper waste disposal."

This conference will provide an intensive and authoritative look at many of the problems the board and concerned citizens are working to solve.

To register, or for more conference information, contact the University of Minnesota's department of conferences at (612) 373-5325.

For further information on the waste management board's activities, contact the board at 7323 58th Avenue North, Crystal, MN 55428 or call 1-800-652-9747 toll free.

Lincoln Spring Sports Openers

Lincoln high school spring sports seasons will get underway Mon., April 9, when the Prowlers face Crookston and Detroit Lakes in a 2 p.m. Triangular tennis meet at the Grand Forks Tennis Center.

Home opener for the tennis team will not be until Thurs., April 26, however, when the Prowlers host Mahnomen and Moorhead in a triangular.

Season opener for the Lincoln boys and girls track teams will be Fri., April 13, in an indoor invitational at the Winter Shows Building in Crookston. The Prowlers' annual Quent Jones invitational for boys will be held Tues., May 1; and the Thief River Falls invitational for girls will be held Tues., May 8.

Lincoln baseball team opens its 1984 season Fri., April 20, at Red Lake Falls. Thief River Falls' home opener will be Thurs., April 26, vs. Middle River.

Golf season for the girls will get underway Thurs., April 26, at East Grand Forks. Golf schedule for the boys hasn't been announced yet.

Football Schedule Addition

Lincoln high school football team is expected to pick up Melrose as an opponent to complete its 1984 schedule.

A game at Melrose would replace the Prowlers' series against Mahnomen, which came to an end after the 1983 season when the Indians joined the Heart 'O lakes Conference.

Thief River Falls will not play Breckenridge this fall, either, but with the new state-wide sectional playoffs to be implemented for the first time in 1984, teams will be playing eight-game and not nine-game regular season schedules.

Thief River Falls' 1984 football schedule, once the game with Melrose is finalized, will find the Prowlers with home games against Grand Forks Red River, Fergus Falls and East Grand Forks, plus road games at Detroit Lakes, Melrose, Crookston, Moorhead and Bemidji.

Lincoln high school is still without a head football coach following the resignation of John Schmitz at the end of the 1983 season.

Miscellaneous

+ While Northland community college continues its search for a new hockey coach following the recent resignation of Tony Dorn, Jr. from that position, Rainy River community college of International Falls announced that John Sirotiak will succeed Terry Thompson as Voyaguers' hockey coach. Thompson stepped down at the end of the 1983-84 season to continue his education. Sirotiak is a graduate of Concordia who later played semi-pro hockey at Green Bay, Wis. He coached Rainy River during the 1974-75 and 1975-76 seasons before Thompson took over for the 1976-77 season and won the national junior college tournament title. Sirotiak spent four years in the army after leaving Rainy River and is currently part of an International Falls area insurance agency. He said he hopes to recruit hockey players from a 100-mile radius of the college and said that he plans to establish Rainy River as the Borderland's college hockey center.

+ Several Minnesota Community College Conference (MCCC) baseball teams made use of the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis this spring, including Brainerd, a Northland Northwest Division rival. Itasca also played there, along with Lakeville and Golden Valley Lutheran, a team that scheduled three tripleheaders and two doubleheaders in the dome. Schools pay $200 an hour rental, $270 with lights. "We're thrilled about it," said Golden Valley Lutheran coach Bill Lundquist. "We split the costs with the opponents we are playing," explained Lundquist, who has an operating budget of $5,000 to work with this year.

Successful Basketball Program Continues At MCC High School

A very sound basketball program produced another solid basketball season in 1983-84 at Marshall County Central high school in Newfolden.

And more of the same can be expected in the future, according to head coach Ron Ueland of the Nordics.

It was a 15-9 season for the Nordics, who reached the District 32 tournament semifinals.

"We had hoped to do better," admitted Ueland, "but we did play a tough schedule. We felt we could have won the tournament, but the field was awfully strong this year."

With just three seniors on the roster this winter, 1984-85 looks promising.

"We're looking forward to a number of pretty good years in a row," confirmed Ueland. "This will be one of our better teams next year."

Those three graduating seniors were among eight Nordics who shuffled in and out of the lile-up on a regula basis, with 6-1 Ken Krohn among the team's most productive performers with an 11.3 scoring average and 141 rebounds in 24 games. Fellow seniors Brent Magner and Ross Olson also successfully filled their roles, noted Ueland.

Among the underclassmen, 5-8 junior guard Chad Swan and 5-11 junior forward Kevin Boe joined Krohn in double figure scoring averages as Swan scored at a team-leading 13.4 clip and Boe averaged 10.5 points per game.

Scott Gustafson, a 6-0 junior guard, led the team with 81 assists. Randy Dahl, a 6-2 junior center, edged Krohr for team leadership in rebounds 143-141.

Dahl also had the team's best field goal percentage as he made 47 of 89 attempts for a 52.8 clip. Swan, meanwhile, was also the leading free throw shooter among the regulars as he made 42 of 64 attempts for a 65.6 per cent showing, and led the team with 58 steals.

Jay Nelson, a 5-9 junior forward, rounded out the Nordics' top eight.

While obviously optimistic about the talent returning next season, Ueland issued a word of warning by noting, "We have the same schedule next year. There probably won't be as many strong teams in the district, but the top ones will be stronger. We're going to be hard-pressed to duplicate this year's record."

In addition to the District 32 schedule, where Kennedy is expected to be a power and Argyle will undoubtedly be strong again, the Nordics will have to contend with the likes of Warren, East Grand Forks and Class AA Thief River Falls.

"We have some good kids coming up, but they face the same problem this team did: lack of size," noted Ueland. "But they're good shooters and they have good quickness. I don't see us changing our style of play at all."

During the 1983-84 regular season schedule, Marshall County Central defeated Badger 83-27 and 91-40; Stephen 69-61; Roseau 74-60 and 66-53; Middle River 95-58 and 54-27; Thief River Falls 42-4[illegible]; Strandquist 82-38; Warroad 66-42; Grygla 75-58; Tri-County 73-51; and Hallock 43-40. The Nordics lost to Argyle 61-46 and 49-32; Thief River Falls 47-45; East Grand Forks 67-43; Lake of the Woods 67-49; and Kennedy 63-55.

In District 32 tournament play the Nordics beat Humboldt-St. Vincent 82-41; and Tri-County 68-59 before losing to Kennedy 53-45 in the semifinals and Argyle 51-42 in the third place game.

The 1983 Minnesota State Legislature passed new changes in the transportation and shipment of fish that a resident fisherman should be aware of.

A resident licensee may fillet and ship or transport fish lawfully taken and possessed to any point within the state when consigned to himself only, provided fish can be identified, counted and size determined when length limit applies. Except for those fish prepared by a fish packer, and bullheads. All fish must be packed and wrapped in such a way as to be unpacked, unwrapped, separated and counted. Filleted fish shall not be reduced to more than two single fillets per fish. All dressed fish and fillets except bullheads, sunfish and crappies shall retain a one inch square patch of skin with scales intact on the body other than the belly, when so dressed saugers are counted as walleye. Undressed fish must be packaged and frozen separately so as to be counted and identified. Fish with length limits shall be transported or shipped undressed with heads attached. A resident licensee may ship out of state one undressed fish during open season or five days thereafter, provided a proper permit is obtained from a Conservation Officer.

Boating

With the beginning of spring, boaters should be aware of the licensing regulations regarding motorized watercraft operation.

All motorized and some non-motorized watercraft must be licensed by the Department of Natural Resources. The types of watercraft that must be licensed include, but are not limited to, motorboats, rowboats, sailboats, rowing shells or sculls, all-terrain vehicles used in the water and inflatable craft. Register your new watercraft in person at any Deputy Registrar of Motor Vehicles.

When you register for the first time, know its length, manufacturer, type of hull material (wood, metal, or plastic), type of propulsion, model, year, and serial or hull identification number. After you apply, you will receive a temporary permit to operate your boat until your license comes in the mail. Place the validation decal to the stern or rear of the license number within four inches of the license number.

Remember, only the current decal must be visible. Either remove the expired decals or place the current decal directly over the old ones. No other number, letter or design may appear within 24 inches of the license number or decal. The letters and numbers must be at least three inches high, of a block character, and contrast with the background. They should read from left to right and must always be legible. All watercraft licenses expire on December 31.

Lehnus To Address Goodridge Group

Annual Goodridge high school awards banquet, sponsored by the Goodridge Lions Club, will be held Thursday at the new gym, starting at 7 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Darryl Lehnus, University of North Dakota assistant basketball coach.

Tickets, priced at $4.50 per person, may be obtained at the elementary school office or at the Goodridge Cafe. The menu will include swiss steak and all the trimmings. Community members are urged to attend the event and support the students in their achievements. Those planning to attend are asked to purchase tickets early so that plans can be made accordingly.

Lehnus, who was named a fulltime assistant coach at UND in July 1978, came to the Sioux after serving as head basketball coach at Ithaca (N.Y.) college five years, where his teams competed on an NCAA Division III level. In 1976-77 his Ithaca team won the Independent College Conference title and played in the NCAA Division III Eastern Regional tournament.

He is a 1963 graduate of Kankakee (Ill.) high school, where he lettered three years in basketball and baseball. He enrolled at Anderson (Ind.) college, where he lettered four years in basketball and baseball. He was an all-conference selection in both sports and was named the school's outstanding senior athlete.

Lehnus received a Master of Arts degree from Wayne (Neb.) State in 1968 and coached the freshman team there to a 13-2 record. Sioux head coach Dave Gunther was head coach at Wayne State at the time.

Lehnus then moved to Grant Park (Ill.) high school, where his basketball teams amassed a record of 37-16 and his baseball teams were 26-9 before he returned to Wayne State as an assistant basketball coach in 1972. He moved on to Ithaca that same year.

DNR NEWS

Fish Monitored

A committee comprised of representatives from the departments of Health, Agriculture, Natural Resources and the Pollution Control Agency has been established to monitor fish in order to check for hazardous levels of environmental contaminants.

The committee is responsible for collecting and evaluating the data used by the State Department of Health to prepare advisories cautioning the public to limit consumption of fish from certain waters.

A list of these locations and the health advisories that apply is available from the Minnesota Department of Health (612) 623-5555, the Pollution Control Agency (612) 296-7373, and the Department of Natural Resources (612) 296-2835.

A notice concerning the advisories is found on Page 5 of the synopsis of the "1984 Minnesota Fishing Regulations" issued by the DNR and available from all license agents.

Officials said that analysis of fish for contaminants has been conducted in the state for the past several years.

Water Permits

High volume users of state waters have been reminded that their water withdrawal activities must be consistent with permits issued by the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

In general, a permit is required to withdraw more than 10,000 gallons in any day or 1,000,000 gallons per year of Minnesota's surface or ground water resources. Failure to obtain a permit is a misdemeanor.

Larry Seymour, Director of DNR's Water Division, reports that there are about 6,000 water users now under permit who are authorized to withdraw more than the minimum amount of water. However, he believes that as many as 500 irrigation operations and 750 industrial and commercial users who need permits are not in compliance, for the following reasons:

1 — They once were exempt, but no longer are because of legal changes.

2 — Non-exempt users who never obtained the required permits.

3 — Users who obtained permits, but are in violation of its terms because the permit has expired, the required annual water use reports and fees were not submitted, the permit has not been officially transferred to the new owner, or a major modification of the operation was made (increased pumping rate, additional wells, etc.) without written approval by the DNR.

Water appropriators who do not have permits for their current operations are urged to immediately contact the Division of Waters for instructions and the necessary forms to apply for them.

All water appropriation permit holders must submit "Annual Water Use Reports" to the DNR. The reports for 1983 were due on February 15, 1984. Seymour said that failure to submit these reports with the required fees will result in termination of the permits.

In that case, withdrawals would be restricted to less than 10,000 gallons per day or 1,000,000 gallons per year.

"The annual report fees have assumed new significance under 1983 legislation whereby the revenue is utilized for an expanded program of water resources monitoring with emphasis on groundwater quantity and quality concerns," said Seymour.

For further information, contact the Water Allocation Unit of the DNR Division of Waters at 612-296-4800.

New Football Coaches Clinic Hosted By U-M

As part of the 1984 spring football practice session at the University of Minnesota, new head football coach Lou Holtz has planned an elaborate two-day football coaches clinic.

Scheduled at the U of M Friday and Saturday, April 6 and 7, the clinic will feature lecture sessions, question and answer periods, on-the-field practice observation sessions and social gatherings.

Workshop conducted through the cooperation of the Minnesota High School Coaches Association, will get underway at 8 a.m. on Friday, April 6, with registration in the Williams Arena lobby. Holtz will welcome clinic participants at 9 a.m. and the lecture periods will begin at 10:05.

Scheduled to speak Friday or Saturday are Ron Scott, Minnesota high school Coach of the Year from Coon Rapids on Cardinal Defense; Butch Nash, assistant coach at the U of M, defensive football; John Gutekunst, U of M defensive coordinator, defensive and play; Phil Elmassian, U of M assistant coach, secondary technique and fundamentals; John Palermo, U of M assistant coach, defensive ine drills; Pete Cordelli, U of M assistant coach, wide receiver drills; Jim Strong, U of M assistant coach, running back fundamentals; Larry Beckish, U of M offensive coordinator, schooling the quarterback; Jim Hueber and George Stewart, U of M assistant coaches, development of offensive line.

A luncheon sponsored by the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce, will be held in Williams Arena Friday noon, and Friday evening a "snack and fellowship" session will be hosted by G. Heileman Brewing Company at the Schmidt Brewery in St. Paul.

Friday and Saturday afternoon all coaches attending the clinic will be invited to observe the Golden Gopher spring practice sessions at Bierman Field. Friday's workout is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. and Saturday's at 1.

Another innovative addition to this year's U of M spring practice session will be what Holtz terms, "coaches' visitations" or periods when area coaches will be able to meet with U of M staff members.

During the first two weeks of spring practice, Holtz will make his offensive and defensive staff members available, on a rotating basis, from 7 a.m. until 9 p.m. daily for visiting coaches.

Those visitations will take place in the Bierman Building and are designed to permit coaches from throughout the area an opportunity to observe, participate and exchange ideas with members of the Golden Gopher staff.

For further information about the spring football clinic, spring practice or the coaches' visitation opportunities, contact the football office, Bierman Building, 516 15th Avenue SE, U of M, Minneapolis, MN 55455; phone 612-373-4306.

Whooping Crane Is Subject Of TV Show

North America's whooping crane has teetered for decades on the edge of extinction. Now, in a remarkable effort as complex as a jigsaw puzzle and as urgent as a rescue mission, U.S. and Canadian scientists are working together to save this magnificent bird.

Story of the crane and the men who work to save it is told in a new National Geographic Special called "Flight Of The Whooping Crane," scheduled to air on Prairie Public Television at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, April 4.

"Flight Of The Whooping Crane," like the other National Geographic Specials on Public Television, is produced by National Geographic Society and WQED-TV in Pittsburgh. The narrator is John Huston.

Whooping cranes soared in the skies of North America for thousands of years — before the arrival of early man. But in the last 200 years man has destroyed much of cranes' natural habitat and often hunted and killed the giant birds. By 1941, only 21 cranes were known to exist in the wild. It became clear that the snowy-white whoopers, with their fierce, fiery eyes and javelin-like bills, would soon fade from existence.

Alarmed, many individuals and groups responded to the plight of the cranes. But perhaps the most successful — and imaginative — efforts were mounted under the auspices of the U.S. and Canadian governments and the National Audubon Society. Viewers of the new special see a sampler of those efforts, including:

First-time-ever tracking of whooping cranes as they migrate northward. The largest flock of wild whooping cranes spends the winter on the Gulf coast of Texas at the Arkansas National Wildlife Refuge. Each spring, they fly 2,500 miles to their summer home and nesting grounds in northwestern Canada's Wood Buffalo National Park. In 1983 crane specialists from the U.S. and Canada, accompanied by a National Geographic film crew tracked a family of three whoopers on their long journey north. The chick in the family had been fitted with a tiny, battery-and-solar powered radio transmitter, and the air and ground tracking teams used sophisticated radio telemetry gear to help stay in contact with the trio. The new special records the tensions and joys of the trip as the trackers, traveling in a single-engine plane and several ground vehicles, followed the cranes as they sweep through sun and storm across the rich tapestry of North America's landscape.

A crane "Foster parent" program. Whooping cranes usually lay a clutch of two eggs, but ordinarily just one chick survives, in effect, one precious egg is lost. Early experiments in which the "extra" egg was taken from the nest and hatched in an incubator met with only moderate success. But now an innovative U.S.-Canadian program uses the whooping cranes' more abundant cousins, the sandhill cranes, as "foster parents" to hatch extra eggs and rear young whoopers as their own.

"Flight Of The Whooping Crane" takes viewers along on one intricate cycle of egg collecting and placement on sandhill nests. At Canada's Wood Bubbalo National Park, biologist Ernie Kuyt braves clouds of voracious mosquitoes as he wades through the marshes collecting whooper eggs. By helicopter, charter plane, and commercial aircraft, he carries the delicate eggs to Grays Lake National Wildlife Refuge in southeastern Idaho, nesting grounds for a large flock of sandhills. At Grays Lake, he traverses the marshes in an airboat with biologist Rod Drewien. Into sandhill nests he has carefully preselected, Drewien gently places the Whooper eggs. Soon the unsuspecting sandhills hatch the butterscotch-colored balls of fluff that will one day become statuesque whooping cranes.

A genetic reach into the future. All the whooping cranes alive today are direct descendants of the few alive in 1941, so the cranes' gene pool is small, leaving the species susceptible to inbreeding that leads to other genetic problems. An imaginative program at the Patuxent Wildlife Research Center in Maryland helps counter those potential problems of freezing semen from Whooping cranes and storing it in liquid nitrogen. Decades — perhaps even centuries — from now scientists can enrich the gene pool of the crane population by reintroducing genes from the cranes's long-dead distant relatives.

International efforts to save the whoopers seem to be working, but progress is slow. Today, there are only about 140 whooping cranes, all of them in North America. But even their future is not assured. The ecology of the Texas winter habitat is delicate and susceptible to oil spills and destruction by coastal boat traffic. The cranes themselves are sometimes killed by predators or from flying into power lines when migrating in bad weather. And a single natural disaster along their migrating route or in any place the cranes gather could spell doom for the species.

But the people laboring to preserve the stately bird believe that their work is worthwhile — despite the odds. In the new special, National Audubon Society field biologist David Blankinship puts it this way: "If we lose the whooping crane, we've lost something of great beauty. . . forever."

Sports Show To Open On April 5 In Grand Forks

Largest area sportsmen's show of 1984 will bring an impressive exhibit of outdoor recreation equipment, vehicles and boats to the Grand Forks arena for four days when the Grand Forks Sportsmen's Boat, Camping and Vacation Show opens Thursday, April 5.

Sponsored by the Grand Forks Kiwanis Club, the show is entering its 17th year.

Show visitors will find a full line-up of 1984 model RVs and boats, and the latest in fishing tackle, camping equipment and vacation information. Daily stage shows add an extra dash of excitement with performances by top-rated family entertainers.

A complete range of RV models, including truck campers, tent campers, fifth wheelers and luxury motorhomes will fill the arena. Representing one major current trend will be the new lightweight minivans and travel trailers, which are expected to account for up to one-fourth of this year's RV market nationwide.

Water lovers can indulge their warm weather fantasies at the extensive display of shiny new watercraft. As with the RVs, many of the new designs show a trend toward more streamlining and lighter materials.

At booths lining the arena, tips on the best vacation spots will be available from representatives of hundreds of resorts, campgrounds, hunting and fishing lodges, and other recreation areas in the United States and Canada.

Fishing tackle and camping gear will be displayed in many locations.

Because of surging consumer interest, recreational vehicles are expected to make an exceptionally strong showing this year. Last year was the best for RVs since 1979. Producers anticipate 1984 will be even better, largely because of a surprising phenomenon, the reappearance of first-time buyers.

Show producer Nick Cenaiko said exhibitors have been excited by the appearance of this new market, which has been attracted by innovative and versatile RV designs, as well as by a returning confidence in the economy that has released a pent-up desire for vacation equipment.

Stage shows featuring The Great Wallendas, the comedy team of Williams and Ree, ventriloquist Bob Trent and Victor the Rasslin' Bear will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday, at 3:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Saturday, and at 3:30 p.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday.

Doors to the arena will be open for the Sportsmen's Show from 5 p.m. to 11 p.m. Thursday and Friday (April 5-6), from noon to 11 p.m. Saturday (April 7) and from noon to 8 p.m. Sunday (April 8).

Admission will be $3 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12, with pre-school children admitted free. Stage shows are included in the price of admission.

Deer Hunting Meeting Being Planned By DNR

Meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the small gymnasium at the Karlstad school.

Anyone with concerns or ideas about the deer season is encouraged to attend. If time allows, other items may be discussed.

Snake venom is not only being used to aid people bit by snakes, it's becoming a valuable substance to make new drugs, reports National Wildlife magazine. Viper venom, for instance, is being used to make anti-coagulents that can dissolve blood clots. It's even proving effective in treating coronary heart failures where a clot is blocking the arteries that supply blood.

STRAIGHT TALK

— by —

Albert D. Hottis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

Dusty is a Bearded Collie. Beardies are similar to English Sheepdogs, with long thick hair. They come in many colors. Dusty is a light brown and white. He runs, jumps, has three legs (He doesn't recognize his disability, and neither do any of those who watch him!), and watches TV.

Dusty selectively views programs he likes. Those programs he dislikes cause him to jump from his chair and find a comfortable snoozing spot under a table. Dusty enjoys Love Boat and Fantasy Island. He will not watch A Team, T. J. Hooker, Simon & Simon, or other violent action shows. His taste in newscasters is interesting. He will watch Dan Rather (CBS). He will not watch Tom Brokow (NBC), Peter Jennings (ABC) or the MacNeil Lehrer report (PBS).

After studying Dusty's TV watching habits, I have concluded that Dusty is a non-violent type. He enjoys romance and diversions from the hard facts of life. In fact, Dusty likes the easy life and absolute security. He is not concerned with truth, freedom or responsibility.

Dusty doesn't have a degree from kindergarten, grade-high school or college. He is not a Phi Beta Kappa, Beta Gamma Sigma or Tau Beta Pi. He is accustomed to getting out into the real world under all kinds of weather conditions and surviving. His day starts at 6 a.m. with a morning "constitutional" in his dog pen, followed by a meal of beef-chicken-liver balls in gravy, a soft moist packet of burger, and some hard crunchy flavored meal, with some table scraps thrown in.

All of this is followed by some grooming, another "constitutional" and, in good weather, being out in the real world from about 8 a.m. until 10 p.m. Then he gets under his favorite bench and sleeps on his pillow until morning. Each day and each night is about the same for Dusty.

Dusty has experienced some truma along the way. His mother wrecked his fourth leg growth plate dragging him around on his birth day. His "bosses" decided there were enough puppies on Mother Earth and had him "fixed" early in life. He has been barking about that decision ever since!

I think you get the message. Dusty lives a lifestyle someone else dictates. He makes no decisions. When he barks with a complaint, it is not uncommon for someone to get after him with a newspaper that scares more than it hurts. Dusty is a lot like barnyard animals who have no input into the decisions that affect their lives.

That could explain Dusty's TV preferences. He likes fantasies where he can enjoy the good life without much effort. That's a good description of Love Boat and Fantasy Island, both fluff, with people enjoying expensive vacations, but there is no explanation of what it took in the way of work and savings to purchase a multi-thousand dollar week of pleasure using after-tax dollars.

I understand why Dusty prefers Dan Rather to the competition. Mr. Rather is not really a newsman-journalist. He's a showman. Studies of his newscasts tell the story. He never permits the facts to interfere with his biases. His predecessor, Walter Cronkite, admitted recently that Rather spends more time with "creative news" than "straight news."

It was interesting to watch both Dan and Dusty when a report showing the best inflation news in 20 years was released. 1983 had the lowest wholesale price inflation since 1963, well under one per cent for the year. Explaining the significance of this news should have been the priority for the day. That would have meant patting the president on the back for this achievement, since Dan spanks him, rhetorically, for everything that goes wrong. Dan glossed this over and didn't even mention that employment had risen to its highest level in our nation's history. It took some doing, but Dan-boy dug up something disturbing to keep his "confidence chipping away at the President" campaign going strong.

That digging reminds me of Dusty, too. That's one of his bad habits, even with his handicap. That made me realize that Dan is handicapped, too. Sure he has his arms, legs and eyes, but his biases are like blinders and filters, keeping him from having a balanced perspective.

Dusty would probably nominate Dan Rather for the Emmy Award for best actor of the year in a dramatic series. Dan probably deserves that award. I can't go along with Dusty's recommendation on our prime time newscaster. Maybe, in time, with fewer human watchers and more dog watchers, none of whom can buy any of his advertiser products and all of whom live in a world without freedom, Mr. Rather will learn that you may be able to fool the dogs all of the time, but it is difficult to fool the people some of the time.

That's Straight Talk!

CHORUS OF HOWLS is provided by this group of dogs, played by the fourth grade class at Newfolden elementary school, for a musical play, "Monsters" which will be presented at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the school auditorium. MICHELLE CONTOS, a first year student at Northland community college, was recipient of an American Legion auxiliary scholarship at a presentation recently at the college. Presenting the check are Senora Skay (left) and Marilyn Winter.

AMONG more than 200 Watkins products dealers, the Watkins Store operated by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wold finished in first place in sales during a contest operated from July of 1983 through February of 1984. The award included $250 in cash and a set of four folding director's chairs. Paul Wold is shown at left accepting the awards from Al Scherek, district distributor from Lawton, ND.

MINNESOTA NEWSPAPER IN EDUCATION SUMMER WORKSHOP

July 22 — August 3, 1984

If you're an elementary, middle or high school teacher, or an instructor of adults, we want to ask you: What will encourage you to go back to school for two weeks in the summer?

Three semester hours of graduate level continuing education credit?

A study of new ways to motivate your students?

You'll get both of these rewards if you're selected to attend the 2nd annual Minnesota Newspaper in Education Summer Workshop.

Held for the first time this year at the College of St. Thomas in St. Paul, the workshop is sponsored by the Minnesota Newspaper in Education Committee of the Minnesota Newspaper Foundation.

Through "hands-on" experience, guest speakers and projects, the workshop provides a better understanding of the role of the American press in our society, and strategies for using the newspaper as a classroom tool.

Ann Goodwin, education writer for the St. Paul Pioneer Press/Dispatch and a former college instructor, will lead the seminar.

Graduates of the 1983 class state:

"This workshop is the most practical one I have attended: excellent teacher, good speakers, conscientious students, and it is delightfully challenging and fun."

"A beautifully blended group of enthusiastic teachers came together as strangers through MNIE. In splendid style they learned the ins and outs of newspapers in education. Thoroughly convinced of the merits of NIE, they parted as lasting friends."

"The MNIE Workshop was interesting and informative. I hope other teachers have the opportunity to participate in the workshop next year."

"The time for use of our newspaper, our lifetime text, is now."

SCHOLARSHIPS ARE AVAILABLE

You may be eligible to obtain a 3-credit scholarship, sponsored through your local newspaper. Total course fee without scholarship will be $380. ($280 for commuters).

GARAGE SALE

How To Do A Little Business On Your Own...

Holding a garage sale is a fun way to do a little business on your own... but is takes a bit of planning.

Like you'll want to decide what to sell and how much to charge for each item... and then you'll need price tags so other people will know what you're charging.

And you'll have to be able to make change for all your customers... so that means you should have lots of one dollar bills and an assortment of coins.

Then you'll want to advertise your sale to attract that crowd... You can do it with a sign or signs in your neighborhood... but you'll want a bigger crowd than that... so you'll run an ad in Classified which tells the time and place of your sale to a host of potential buyers.

Garbage Recycling Business Planned

FUEL BRIQUETS which are manufactured from trash were displayed by Rick Nordhagen at a press conference held last night to announce intentions to start a new business in Thief River Falls. Utilizing newly developed machinery, Future Fuel Inc. will take garbage collected from the surrounding area and separate it into various components for recycling, with intentions of eventually eliminating the need for sanitary landfills. Paper and combustible trash, which currently comprise approximately 60 per cent of municipal wastes, would be compressed into fuel briquets which would be sold for use as a heating fuel.

With over 32 years in the business of hauling garbage in the Thief River Falls area, the family of Lester Nordhagen, owner of Les's Sanitation Service, announced this week that they intend to start a new business in Thief River Falls.

That business, Future Fuel Inc., appears to have the potential to solve a number of serious problems for area residents and government officials, while creating jobs through private enterprise.

Present members of the corporation are Rick and Mary Nordhagen, Rodger and Shirley (nee Nordhagen) Borgen, Steve Nordhagen and Denise Wold.

Stated objective of the company is to provide an alternative to santiary landfills, while providing an economical fuel source, primarily for commercial and institutional use. They propose to do this by using a separation system to reduce garbage into its various components, which would be sold for recycling. With a goal of eventually being able to recycle 100 per cent of the garbage brought to the company's plant, the project could completely eliminate the need for sanitary landfills, solving a sticky problem for government officials who must deal with the expense and lability of disposing of solid wastes.

According to Rick Nordhagen, who acted as primary spokesman for the company, studies indicate that over 60 per cent of municipal wastes are composed of combustible materials, primarily paper and cardboard, which can be burned as fuel. By using a densifying system to compress these materials, they can be turned into briquets of a uniform consistency which can be sold as a fuel source.

Preliminary combustion tests conducted by the University of Minnesota, indicate that the briquets provide somewhat more heat than wood chips, while producing lower creosote levels and remaining competitive in price.

Maximum output of the densifying machine, which is manufactured in Cherokee, IA., is approximately 10 tons per hour. According to Jon Bolen, who has been conducting marketing studies, the potential exists to sell the entire output of the plant within the 60-mile radius to be serviced by the company.

Several schools in the area have already converted to burning alternative fuels, such as wood chips, experiencing approximately a three-year payback on the over $50,000 cost of conversion.

Garbage from Pennington county alone would be nearly sufficient to keep the plant operating eight hours per day, and Nordhagen says that other surrounding communities are being contacted, with many expressing interest in utilizing the company's services for disposing of solid wastes.

While a number of surrounding counties have signed agreements of support for a mass burning plant proposed at Bagley, Nordhagen says he feels his company's proposal offers distinct advantages over mass burning, which does not recover any recycleable materials.

Of the remaining 40 per cent

Kindergarten Round-up Set At Newfolden

Marshall county central school district 441 will hold its annual kindergarten roundup Wednesday, April 18. Any child residing in the district who will be five years old by Sept. 1, 1984 is eligible to attend kindergarten during the 1984-85 school year.

Letters to parents of all known eligible children are being sent out. Any parents of an eligible child, who does not receive a letter by April 11, should call the Newfolden elementary school at 874-8805.

GROUP ACTIVITIES such as this musical program with the use of a hand puppet are part of the training students receive in Suzanne Steidl's special education class at Mark Twain elementary school. Mrs. Steidl has taught the multiple handicap class since 1981 and this year has nine students ranging in age from four to 11.

Suzanne Steidl Is T.R.F. '84 Teacher Of The Year

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

TEAM APPROACH is used in working with students in the multiple handicap program at Mark Twain elementary school in Thief River Falls. Instructor Suzanne Steidl and one of her students are shown with Steve Young, physical therapist at Northwestern hospital; who visits the school three days a week to work with direct therapy. Mrs. Steidl has been selected as teacher of the year for School District 564.

"Having been an educator, coordinator and consultant working in eight different states, I have had the pleasure of working with hundreds of teachers in regular and special programs. . . The rare and exceptional teacher, whose talents and sensitivity fall into the category of outstanding and bordering, at times, on unbelieveable, never seems to leave one's consciousness. Suzanne Steidl is this type of teacher and person."

This comment by Don Gregory, educational consultant, is typical of the statements of support provided for Suzanne Steidl's nomination from School District 564 for Minnesota teacher of the year.. Mrs. Steidl teaches the multiple handicap program at Mark Twain elementary school and has been selected by the Thief River Falls Education association as local teacher of the year.

"What makes her so unforgettable, so influential, so very special?" Gregory asks. "Is it dedication? Is it because she teaches special needs children? Is it integrity and honesty? Is it spending extra time with children and-or program development? Is it special training? Since she has all of the aforementioned qualities in extra measure, what makes her a candidate for teacher of the year?

"Perspective and sensitivity," Gregory answers his own question. "Suzanne has the rare gift of feeling and understanding the tremendous needs of her students, those of her families, as well as those of the myraid of professionls with whom she must work in concert. Yet she manages to meld all of these needs in order that the first priority, student need, is met with precision and balance mixed with an extraordinary sense of cheerful caring."

It would be easy to say Gregory is given to overstatement, but the thoughts penned by other professionals, parents and former students indicate not. The main theme of thought is that it takes a special person with special abilities to handle the job of teaching multiple handicapped children well, and Suzanne is that special person.

Although a teacher in School District 564 for only three years, Mrs. Steidl is no stranger to teaching. She helped organize and served as director for the Thief River Falls nursery school for eight years, gradually increasing her knowledge of and involvement with children with special disabilities. For four years she was teacher and assistant director at the Falls day activity center for the mentally handicapped, organizing and teaching the pre-school program there. Earlier in her career she taught elementary school in Grand Forks, ND and Perryville, Alaska.

A graduate of Jamestown, ND, high school in 1960, Suzanne earned her bachelor of science degree from Valley City state college in Valley City, ND, in 1964. She has two children, 16-year-old Chris and 13-year-old Liesl. Her husband John, who was a teacher at Northland community college, is deceased.

Beyond her school work to obtain her degree she has

MATHEMATICS TRAINING is included in the program for special education students taught by Suzanne Steidl at Mark Twain elementary school. Mrs. Steidl is shown assisting a student through use of a SIBIKI, a portable display board which can be used to hold charts and displays, written on and erased, adjusted for angle to accommodate students with various handicaps and have clearance in the frame so that students in wheelchairs can reach to write on it. # Medical Lab Week Fixes Attention On Hospital

Although the laboratory at Northwestern hospital services in Thief River Falls has not been drawing blood from donors on a regular basis for several years, it is still an active part of the hospital with an important role to play in medical care, according to Dan Shafland, medical technologist who has been the lab supervisor for the past 10 years.

Because the lab's role as collector of blood from volunteer blood bank members has reduced contact with the public, Shafland feels his department has a bit of an exposure problem. The hospital is now affiliated with United Blood Services which draws blood from volunteer donors over a wide area and provides member hospitals with needed blood components.

"The week of April 8-14 is national medical lab week," Shafland said, "and it is an opportunity for us to tell the public a little more about our department. While they may not have direct contact with us, virtually all patients admitted to Northwestern hospital will have some work done through the laboratory. Many will be involved with several procedures."

While blood work is often the

REFLECTIONS OF SPRING are visible in the Red Lake river in Thief River Falls since the ice quietly went out on Monday. Northwestern hospital is reflected in this photo taken this morning near the First street bridge. Only a narrow shelf of ice remains along the southeast side of the river. Ice out this year is about two weeks ahead of normal. Even the anticipated ice jams which cause water to temporarily back up into low lying areas failed to materialize. Temperatures have risen into the upper 40's and low 50's during the past several days and there has been no precipitation for several weeks.

Williams And Davidson Vows Said At Williston

Marriage vows were exchanged at Williston, N.D., on March 17 by Cynthia Williams and David Davidson, both of Williston.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Williams of Great Falls, Mont. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Davidson of Thief River Falls.

The ceremony took place at 7:00 p.m., at the Gloria Del Lutheran church with Carole Montgomery, a friend, as organist. Roxanne Oylve and Gwen Sweet, friends of the couple, sang "Follow Me."

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a white satin gown with a Chantilly lace empire bodice, accented by satin collar and cuffs. A cluster of fresh red and white roses held her veil of bridal illusion. She carried an off-white fan, topped with fresh red roses.

Zehlian Club Meeting Includes Varied Program

Financial aid for the Gifted and Talented children was discussed at the recent Zehlian meeting held at the home of Margaret Saetre.

Presenting the information to the group was Diane Krepp, president of the Northwest chapter of the Minnesota Council for the Gifted and Talented (MCGT). In reporting on the financial aid needed by the group, she compared the funds alloted to the handicapped to the .001 per cent provided by the state for educating the gifted and talented.

Mrs. Krepp said that the gifted students can become behavorial problems in classrooms if their talents aren't challenged. It is believed that broadening education will lower the high drop-out rate, drug abuse, and suicide associated with students in that group.

Mrs. Krepp also encouraged greater participation in the local chapter. Those interested in membership were asked to contact her, Polly Edington, 681-3311 or Joan Wilson 681-1752.

The three-point program which followed included a slide presentation on multiple sclerosis (MS) by Deb Ernst of Northwestern hospital. She was accompanied by Steve Soiney, an MS victim, who shared some of the problems encountered. Both stated they are available to speak to groups on the various aspects of MS.

Also present and giving an Oriental Art presentation was Mrs. Min Gunnarson of Warren. She displayed several items acquired by her brother, Sterling McGrath, who taught at the American University at Beirut and had government assignments in Teheran and Tokyo. Large crates of his purchases, stored in Warren for 30 years, had recently been opened. The items had been appraised and sold in the Warren area, Thief River Falls and Grand Forks. Included in his collection were antique Japanese porcelains from Kyoto, 18th and 19th century wood block prints, handmade Chinese rugs, camphor chests, cabinets and nested tables.

Assisting Mrs. Gunnarson in displaying some of the art objects was Mrs. Jerry Kruger, president of the Warren Woman's club.

The program concluded with a discussion on "Spring Moon," a novel about China, written by Bette Bao Lord.

During the business meeting, it was announced that the district convention will be held April 28th at Breckenridge. Members expressed their disappointment in learning that the student art exhibit will not be included in this year's convention.

Thirteen members and four guests attended the meeting.

Mike Trudeau Named "Artist Of The Month"

(Thief River Falls community arts council features an area artist each month whose work is placed in a public exhibit for the month. People who would like to recommend an artist to be featured should contact the council at 228 North Crocker Avenue, Thief River Falls, or by calling 681-2980 evenings).

April "Artist of the Month" is Mike Trudeau, art instructor at Northland community college. Examples of his work will be featured in the display case at Northwest regional library in Thief River Falls through the end of the month.

Trudeau has been teaching in the art field for 20 years. In addition to teaching at the college, he has had experience as an art instructor of elementary, junior high and senior high school students, and has also worked with mentally handicapped and emotionally distrubed children on the elementary school level. He has also served as art coordinator for a system of seven elementary schools containing approximately 900 students.

Trudeau says that as an art educator, his ability to be a prolific artist is limited, since his energies must be directed to the classroom through a variety of classes. These may include painting, drawing, graphics, ceramics, art history and introduction to the visual arts. In fact, many of the drawings and paintings in the library exhibit were developed as examples for his classes.

Although time available for personal expression may be limited by his vocation, Trudeau views working with students as a good learning experience for the teacher as well as the student.

He expresses the belief that visual arts are an important segment of the school curriculum, offering the student an opportunity for self-expression in a variety of media. He further notes that it is one area of the humanities in which, the student can absorb the basics and develop his abilities within a relatively short time and for a comparatively low cash outlay.

One area which Trudeau says is, too frequently neglected in art education, however, is in providing definitive descriptions of the types of employable positions available in the art field. A talented student or someone interested in the arts should feel confident that there are jobs available, he says.

MIKE TRUDEAU, art instructor at Northland community college, has been chosen as April's "Artist of the Month" by the Thief River Falls community art council. Examples of his work will be on exhibit through the end of the month in the display case at Northwest regional library in Thief River Falls.

JOHN ABEL and his wife Ruby, who serve on the mission field in Brazil, will be featured during the mission conference next Tuesday through Sunday at Our Saviour's Lutheran church of Thief River Falls. # State Tax Protesters Can Go To Jail

Minnesota revenue department is stepping up its efforts against self-proclaimed tax protesters through its relatively new Writ of Mandamus procedure, which provides that tax protesters can be confined to jail until they file proper state income tax returns, Minnesota revenue commissioner, Art Roemer, reported recently.

In a lawsuit filed in Anoka county, Charles J. Petersen earned $25,844, and Karen J. Petersen earned $22,441 in 1982 while employed by Deluxe check Printers. They both claim the money they earn is money for personal services, as opposed to income and is not subject to taxes. They further claim that the money they receive is in federal reserve notes, also not subject to taxes. Unless the Petersens file proper, court-ordered tax returns, they could be held in contempt of court and confined to jail until these returns are filed.

These same arguments were used by David H. Nichols, in a Minnesota tax court case decided in January. Not only did the tax court reject Nichols' arguments as "groundless," it also charged him $500 for court costs and attorneys fees, in addition to the tax, penalty and interest charged by the Minnesota department of revenue.

Commissioner Roemer wants to remind Minnesotans not to believe those who are selling gimmicks to avoid state and federal income tax. Roemer said, "The Minnesota revenue department will be using this Writ of Mandamus procedure primarily in organizers and participants in these fradulent tax schemes, and several more actions are planned in the future."

Nordhagens To Reclaim Fuel From Garbage

of municipal garbage which would not be converted to fuel briquets, approximately 17 per cent is composed of glass, metals and other materials which can be extracted and sold outright for recycling. The remaining 23 per cent is classified as "wet garbage," which would be hauled to a landfill, at least for the first several years.

According to Rick, the company intends to eventually buy a machine called a pyrolator, which would further reduce this organic material to methane gas, (which could be burned as fuel), and crude oil (which could be sold). That purchase would effectively make the company a landfill-free operation.

Advantages which the company would provide for the community would include elimination of sanitary landfills and the inherent liability which goes with them; conservation of natural resources and energy by recycling fuels and other materials; added employment of 17 to 33 people; added revenue; social status of having the first such plant in the state; and perhaps most important, reduced disposal costs.

Although people dumping garbage at the plant would still be charged for that privilege, Nordhagen said that dumping fees would be equivalent to rates for dumping at landfills; which is currently $3.90 per cubic yard at Gentilly. Costs of transportation would be reduced considerably. In addition, rates would not be expected to increase rapidly, as landfill fees have been doing.

Life expectancy of the Gentilly landfill is estimated at 20 years, and fees to help cover costs of monitoring and maintenance of the site are expected to rise further as it nears a full condition. In addition, pollution control legislation has made finding of new landfill sites a very expensive and nearly impossible task.

Nordhagen stated that the company currently planned to locate within the enterprise zone in city limits, and was negotiating on several sites. He stated that concern over odor or other problems should be minimal, since the operation would be completely enclosed under one roof and conducted on cement floors. Trucks would be driven inside the building and unloaded, with garbage fed into the separator with a forklift. Wet garbage would be hauled away on a daily basis, and the fuel briquets are odor free.

He further notes that a resource recovery plant in Dade county Florida, which handles over 500 tons of solid wastes per day, is located within one-fourth mile of the Doral Country Club, and produced a letter from the vice president and general manager of the club, stating: "since the commencement of operation over two years ago. . . we have not encountered or observed any environmental problems, particularly in regard to smoke or odor." The letter concluded, "We consider the plant a 'good neighbor' and wish it continued success."

Accountant Russ Christianson stated that he considered the new business to be a viable one, based on marketing potential for its products and tipping fees to be charged for dumping.

Costs of getting started were estimated at $645,000 for equipment, with an additional $275,000 for building and land. Nordhagen said that they were pursuing both private and public funding. Since the business involves reduction in both pollution and energy costs, he said it had been received very favorably by government officials, including Governor Rudy Perpich; Mark Dayton, commissioner of energy and economic development; and Senator LeRoy Stumpf and Representative Wally Sparby.

If financing is approved as planned, the company hopes to be in operation by the next heating season, according to Rick. "We're excited about the potential of this business, and everyone we've talked to has been very supportive."

He noted that they had received a lot of help from city planner Jack Quinlivan, Terry Courneya of the county extension service, Jobs Incorporated, and members of the city council, county board and regional development commission. "The response we've received is overwhelming and very encouraging."

Delegates representing potato growers from throughout the United States elected Jerry Larson of Climax the 1984 president of the National Potato council. As chief elected officer of the organization, Larson will serve as the council's executive committee chairman and chairman of the council's 35 person steering committee.

In earlier years, he had served on the executive committee of the council and as the chairman of various council committees.

During the convention, Larson's wife Carole was elected by the council's women's auxiliary as president of that group during 1984. The Larsons, who produce certified seed potatoes in the Climax area, have three children: Nathan, Daniel and Benjamin.

Change Your Driving Habits In Spring

Warm daytime temperatures and nighttime cooling may sound great for sleeping but they are not so great for driving. This is the time of year when bright sunny days are starting to return to the North Star state and can lull drivers into thinking road conditions can be taken for granted. Not so, says the Minnesota department of public safety.

Daytime temperatures that rise under sunny conditions melt snow and ice residue which runs onto streets and highways, often freezing when the sun goes down with resulting slippery conditions for drivers. Frost forced out of the ground due to warming temperatures or found on roadways on an early spring morning or evening can bring about disastrous results for the unwary.

Most drivers are familiar with the precipitation that has been around in the form of snow since before Thanksgiving. Now that spring is here so are the rains. The first spring rain can spell trouble for drivers who are not alert. The first rains will mix with winter's dirt and oil discharged from traffic causing a slippery mixture of trouble.

If you've ever reached the sudden and horrifying awareness while driving in the rain that you have no control over your car, you know the definition of "hydroplaning".

As your car moves along the wet roadway, water penetrates between the tires and the pavement. Pressure increases with increased vehicle speed and supports more and more of the tire. At a critical speed, the tire is completely suppored by water and is actually floating. At this point you have lost control. Your car becomes a giant waterski.

To avoid the danger of hydroplaning drive on good tires with deep tread, so water can escape and not build up in front of the tires. The balder the tire the better its skis.

Fog this time of year is another concern for drivers. Warm air hanging lazily over still frozen or cold ground creates fog and reduced visibility. When this occurs drivers should slow down and beam down — that is turn on their low beam headlights so their vehicles can more easily be seen by oncoming traffic. At night low headlight beams in fog will help the driver see better; high beams only results in increased glare and further limits visibility.

VA Estimate 18,000 Female Vets In Minn.

Veterans administration said recently an estimated 18,000 female veterans live in Minnesota. Of that number, 4,500 served during the Vietnam era, and another 5,800 served in the military during peacetime.

Morris Nooner, Jr., director of the St. Paul VA regional office-insurance center, said that detailed information on female veterans was collected for the first time in the 1980 census. That information provided "a set of baseline statistics from which future projections have been prepared," he said.

VA's office of reports and statistics has found that the number of female veterans continues to grow slowly but steadily. Women veterans living in the United States and Puerto Rico as of March 31, 1984, were estimated at 1,150,000, or 14.1 per cent of all living veterans.

Nooner said the total was about 39,000 or 3.5 per cent higher than the 1980 census figure, an increase he described as "representing an upward trend not characteristic of the male veteran population."

He said that as the number of female veterans grows, and as more move into the older age groups, their needs will increase correspondingly. The new information about female veterans will assist those involved in the planning for future demands, he said. Last year, the administrator of veterans affairs appointed an 18-member advisory committee on female veterans to assist him in addressing the needs of this group of veterans.

Latest figures show that in Minnesota, an estimated 6,300 living female veterans saw service in World War II, and another 200 served in the military during World War I.

Minn. Farmers' Income Drops Again In 1983

Preliminary estimates on 1983 cash receipts from farm marketings indicate that Minnesota farmers experienced the second drop in gross farm income in the past three years, according to agriculture commissioner Jim Nichols.

Minnesota's gross marketing receipts for last year are estimated by the U.S. department of agriculture at $6,528,400,000. That represents a decline of $143.8 million compared to 1982, the sharpest one year income drop since the $624.7 million plunge from the year before in 1975.

In 1981, Minnesota's gross marketing cash receipts dipped by $89 million from the 1980 level.

Cash receipts from crops marketings last year dropped to $3,005,500,000, the lowest gross since 1979 and a $126.1 million drop compared to 1982 crops sales.

Livestock dairy and poultry marketings by Minnesota farmers in 1983 grossed an estimated $3,522,900,000. The modest $17.7 million drop compared to 1982 receipts masked the actual corrosive impact of a third straight year of heavy net losses for the bulk of Minnesota livestock agriculture, long the foundation of this state's total farm economy.

Commissioner Nichols said these new market receipts estimates are another evidence of the farm depression that is of state, regional and national concern and created the strongest demand for operating and debt refinancing loans in at least 50 years.

He pointed out that the $143.8 million drop in cash flow from farm marketings is only part of the problem that has been intensifying for more than three years and now is shaking the foundation of the whole rural economy.

Minnesota's total farm assets have dropped in market value by more than $12 billion in just the past three years, with depressed land values the bulk of that decline. The drop in assets value has correspondingly shrunk the line of credit that farmers had for three straight years, forcing thousands of farmers into foreclosures, bankruptcy and voluntary liquidations.

MN. Job Skills Partnership To Seek Proposals

Minnesota job skills partnership is seeking innovative and effective proposals which address the issue of increasing the supply of skilled labor through joint public and private cooperation. Partnership is making available $1,500,000 to education or other non-profit institutions which develop customized programs to meet specific employer needs.

The partnership encourages training in high growth occupations such as clerical, manufacturing, health-related occupation or high technology such as jobs that depend on an understanding of computers.

Proposals may be written to provide entry level training, retraining and advanced level training to individuals who have employment-related needs such as those who have lost jobs due to economic conditions, plant closings, automation or those who are in danger of losing jobs because of lack of updated skills.

Minnesota job skills partnership is a state agency governed by a 21-member board of directors, which represents the employment interests of Minnesota business, labor, government and skills training organizations. Partnership programs funded through matching grants are intended to fulfill short and long-term objectives.

In the short term, employers experiencing skills shortages will be able to employ workers trained to meet those needs. In the long term, it is the goal of the partnership to promote the economic interests of Minnesota citizens through closer cooperation between the state's businesses and the education, employment and training systems of the state.

Employers who are planning to expand their labor force, have a need for additional skilled workers or are changing their occupations through technology and are in need of newly skilled workers should contact Gail Ueland at the Northwest regional development commission for additional information (218) 281-1396.

OPENING SERVICE of the mission conference at Our Saviour's Lutheran church in Thief River Falls Tuesday through Sunday, April 15, will feature Don and Immie Ziemer. The service will be conducted Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Stumpf Bill Gets Approval In Committee

State Senator LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer has introduced a measure into the Minnesota Senate that would allow local hospital districts to provide loans to students who work in health-related occupations or study in educational programs within that district.

"I introduced this measure to give these students the same opportunity now afforded students who are enrolled exclusively in accredited medical school programs," Stumpf explained.

Current state law allows hospital districts to make loans of up to $28,000 per medical student over four years, to be used to cover the cost of their education and living expenses during the time they are enrolled in an accredited medical school as long as they agree in writing to practice medicine in that hospital district for a specified period of time.

"My addition to this law would simply extend this benefit to other health-related students who also are in need of this financial assistance and who may not have any other means of support," Stumpf said.

Under the law, no student may receive such a loan if they already are receiving similar assistance under any other authorized program, or fail to meet certain eligibility criteria established by a resolution of the hospital board.

The bill was passed by the Senate health and human services committee and has been placed on the general orders calendar for a preliminary vote by the full Senate.

Penner Firm Develops As International

Milton Penner, president of Penners Transfer, which has operated out of Steinbach, Manitoba, for the past 60 years, has announced details of a major transformation and expansion program.

"We used to be Penners Transfer Ltd.," Penner said. "We served Manitoba primarily, the other two prairie provinces, and through an American affiliate we reached into the upper northwestern U.S. Our American connection was with Stordahl Truck Lines Ltd., of Minneapolis-St. Paul. We purchased that company outright last year, and since then we have developed the new entity which is Penner International Inc.

"Besides a new signature and new corporate colours, we have introduced a number of marketing techniques, our fleet of vehicles is bigger than it was and our capability for handling export shipments in particular is second to none."

The company has terminals in Winnipeg, Roseau, Minnesota and Minneapolis-St. Paul. Corporate headquarters are located in Steinbach, Manitoba, Canada.

NFO Campaigns Congress For Loan Funds

National Farmers organization (NFO) recently announced an immediate campaign encouraging members of congress to make the full $600 million FmHA emergency loan funds available to farmers in direct loans.

March 22 the U.S. Senate voted to require FmHA to release an additional $350 million for direct emergency loans to farmers for a total of $310 million channeled through the Economic Emergency disaster fund. Congress earlier allocated $600 million for that purpose but the agency, in limited compliance, decided to make $50 million available in direct loans and earmark the balance for guaranteed bank loans.

"That procedure is not serving the needs of farmers," says DeVon Woodland, NFO president. "In changing the Economic Emergency loan program from an insured to a guaranteed loan program, it became a $540 million bailout for the banks.

"The Senate took a major step forward in aid to agriculture with their vote," Woodland said, "but we are urging them and members of the House to make the full $600 million available in direct loans."

Starting March 26 NFO state and local organizations will be asked to organize members in nationwide campaign to contact their representatives in the House and Senate asking them to vote to make the full $600 million available for direct loans.

"Agricultural income is one of the key elements in the economic health of this nation," Woodland said. "It provides a major portion of the cash flow throughout the country because millions of jobs in both business and industry depend on the money, or lack of it, the farmer has to spend. We simply cannot ignore or suppress an industry that important to the people of this country."

HAND AND EYE COORDINATION is one of the skills developed under instruction by Suzanne Steidl in the multiple handicap program at Mark Twain elementary school. Mrs. Steidl has been selected as teacher of the year for School District 564. Organizer and director of the Thief River Falls nursery school for eight years, Mrs. Steidl was teacher and assistant director at the Falls day activity center for four years and has been in her present position at Mark Twain school for the past three years.

Some People Must Estimate Tax Payments

Anyone who receives income that is not subject to withholding of tax or income from which not enough tax is withheld may be required to make estimated tax payments, the Internal Revenue service says.

Such income includes but is not limited to self-employment earnings, alimony, interest, dividends, rent and capital gains.

Estimated tax is the total of expected income tax and self-employment tax (as well as certain other taxes) less any tax withheld and tax credits.

Generally, individuals required to make estimated tax payments may pay all their estimated tax at one time or they may make quarterly installments. These installments are due on April 16, June 15, September 17 and January 15. A payment-voucher from the Form 1040-ES package should accompany each payment and both should be mailed to the Internal Revenue service center for your state as shown in your 1040-ES package.

Anyone paying estimated tax, however, may not use a Form 1040A or 1040EZ at tax time because there are no lines on these forms to show estimated tax payments.

For further information write to the Internal Revenue service for free publication 505, "Tax Withholding and Estimated Tax."

Jogging Is A Sign Of The Season

Spring weather brings out more than the birds and the bees. It also brings out increasing numbers of joggers.

While traffic accidents involving joggers are grouped with all pedestrian traffic accidents, state public safety experts, quoting an insurance study, report joggers are struck most often on public roads while running in the same direction as motor vehicles. In a substantial number of accidents, two or more joggers are involved, and most are male between the ages of 18 and 24.

Blame for a third of the accidents is due to driver error. Joggers are responsible for another third of the accidents and blame is shared equally for the remaining third. Placing blame, however, is of little comfort if someone has been maimed or killed while jogging.

Recommendations for jogger safety include the following:

—Joggers should not run on roads after dark.

—Joggers should run against moving vehicle traffic, not with it.

—Joggers should run on the shoulder of the road far left as possible so motorists do not have to veer around them.

—Joggers should wear clothing that maximizes their visibility to motorists.

—Joggers are required by law to obey all pedestrian traffic signs and should not cross against traffic lights or jaywalk (jayrun?)

—Joggers should also carry some type of identification with them and advise friends or family members which route they are taking and how long they expect to be gone.

Department of public safety cautions drivers and joggers alike that while there may ultimately be a question of right or wrong common sense and courtesy should always be the rule. Remember, a jogger or any pedestrian is no match for the steel in a car; the car always wins and people (driver and jogger) always lose.

Taxpayers Find Changes In Deductions

Taxpayers who itemize their deductions on Schedule A (form 1040) will find that for the upcoming filing season there is a change in the deduction for medical and dental expenses, the Internal Revenue service says.

Beginning in 1983, a taxpayer can deduct only medical and dental expenses that are more than five per cent of his or her adjusted gross income. In addition, the total amount of health insurance premiums paid in 1983 is now subject to the five per cent limit. There is no longer a separate deduction of up to $150 for health insurance premium payments.

Taxpayers who filed a Form 1040 last year will generally receive a Form 1040 tax package in the mail this year. Additional forms and schedules are available at local IRS offices and at many banks and post offices. Copies of reproducible tax forms and schedules, as well as a reference set of ITS's free publications on 61 different tax topics, are available at many local libraries.

THE NORDHAGEN FAMILY, which has been in the sanitation business for over 32 years, has announced its intention to start a business which would recycle solid wastes in Thief River Falls, with the goal of eventually eliminating the need for sanitary landfills. Seated, left to right, are Mary and Rick Nordhagen, Denise Wold and Steve Nordhagen, and Shirley and Rodger Borgen. They were assisted in development and presentation of their plans by: (standing) Jon Bolen of Directional Marketing Associates, city planner Jack Quinlivan, county commissioner Don Grabanski, and Russ Christianson, certified public accountant.

VISUAL TRACKING can be taught in a number of ways and many are used in the special education class taught by Suzanne Steidl, Thief River Falls' teacher of the year. One of the favorites of pupils in the multiple handicap class is blowing bubbles. The sparkling and moving bubbles are an attraction to stimulate visual development.

Kramer, Ose To Attend Model U.N. Assembly

Jacki Kramer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kramer, and David Ose, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Ose, all of Thief River Falls, have been selected to represent Lincoln senior high school and the Thief River Falls Rotary club at the 27th Model United Nations assembly in Winnipeg, Manitoba. Sponsored by the Rotary club of Winnipeg, the event will be held on April 13 and 14. Darwin Boutiette, instructor at Lincoln high school, is in charge of the students' preparation.

This year Lincoln has been assigned to represent the nation of Yugoslavia. The resolutions being debated by student representatives of 150 plus nations deal with: the situation in Grenada where the U.S. used armed intervention, thus violating international law and the principles of the charter of the United Nations; creation of a new international economic order; strategy for international development; and the International Youth Year where the U.N. is intensifying efforts to promote meetings between young people through sports and physical education activities.

Jacki Kramer

David Ose

Objectives of the model United Nations assembly are to give a representative group of students first-hand experience in the workings of the U.N., to establish an understanding and acceptance of the responsibility of the individual citizen for the success of the United Nations, and to make the United Nations a better understood instrument for world peace.

Summer Youth Employment Signup Begins

Preparation is underway for the 1984 summer youth employment programs operated by Inter-County community council at Oklee, Region 1 area. Indications are that funding may be substantially decreased from last year, with the possibility of the federally funded (SYEP) program being reduced as much as 42 per cent.

Under the federal summer youth employment program (SYEP), employers in both the public and private sectors may participate by hiring young workers. Private or public for-profit organizations are eligible for 50 per cent reimbursement of the wages paid during the eight weeks.

Public or private non-profit organizations are eligible for fully subsidized wages for the youth, but due to reduced funding, in some cases it may be necessary for these employers to also contribute a percentage of the youth's wage. All youths employed by the federal SYEP program must be economically disadvantaged.

Under the state governor's youth program (GYP), all youth participants are employed in the public or private non-profit sectors in fully subsidized positions. The hourly wage is $3.35 and it is an eight-week program that is run concurrently with the other summer program. One difference between the two summer programs is that the governor's youth program does allow for a percentage of non-economically disadvantaged youths to be employed, providing it cannot first be filled with disadvantaged.

Applications are now being distributed throughout the Inter-County area. Youths 14-21 years of age may pick up an application at any local high school, at Inter-County, or at the job service offices in either Crookston or Thief River Falls. Applications will be collected by outreach at a later date. Collection sites will be established in each community, and times and locations will be advertised through the schools, newspapers and radio stations.

The summer programs will begin on June 18, 1984. Each participant will work for an eight-week period of time and will be paid the federal minimum wage of $3.35 per hour.

Last Minute Filers Receive Refunds Later

According to the Internal Revenue service, many last-minute income tax filers are due refunds they would receive sooner if they filed earlier.

Returns filed late in the season are often completed hastily and under pressure; the chance of errors increases dramatically in such a situation. But the taxpayer who starts earlier can work at a leisurely pace and still have time to double-check the return before filing.

Because errors will delay processing regardless of the filing date, the last-minute filers who make a mistake on the return can anticipate a longer wait before any refund is received.

Free Seminar Offered In May By MS Society

Minnesota North Star chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis society is offering a free, day-long educational seminar on multiple sclerosis (MS) to anyone with an interest in the disease. Seminar will be held on May 12 at the Alexandria Holiday Inn on Interstate 94 and Highway 29 south from 9:30 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. with registration beginning at 8:30 a.m.

Workshops will be presented by health professionals. Topics include: multiple sclerosis, presented by Dr. Bruce Idelkope, from the Minneapolis clinic of psychiatry and neurology; MS and exercise, presented by Tom Holtackers, R.P.T.; bowel and bladder in MS, presented by Shirley Holt, R.N.; and coping with MS, speaker to be announced.

Seminar is free, however, there is an optional lunch available for $4.78. Lunch reservations are mandatory, and seminar reservations would be appreciated. Call the MS society at 1-800-582-5296.

Alexandria seminar is the second of three being offered throughout the state in 1984.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

On Saturday, March 24, I tried to bring the national and state administrators of the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) to Thief River Falls in order to check the efforts of the disaster team and to personally inspect the damage that five-to-seven years of natural disasters have inflicted on your area.

Because of extremely bad weather conditions, we were not able to land at Thief River Falls in time for the meeting. Our plane was turned away from airfields at Warren and Red Lake Falls. When I asked the pilot to circle, he said we had too little fuel to wait for the fog to lift.

We landed at Grand Forks and tried to use a conference call to the scheduled meeting in Thief River Falls. Unfortunately, the phone connection and equipment proved insufficient.

Charles Shuman, the national FmHA administrator, had to return to Washington, so it was not possible to drive to Thief River Falls at that time. But Mr. Shuman assured me that he now had a greater understanding of the problems weather can create in our area, and would keep the pressure on to provide all possible relief to the area.

I apologize to the 500 people who travelled to the meeting in Thief River Falls. The bad weather, the low fuel, the poor phone connection and Mr. Shuman's schedule all combined to prevent us from attending the meeting.

I would like to assure you that I am staying in contact with the emergency team that is processing all disaster loan applications as quickly as possible. When I was in Thief River Falls two weeks ago, they were hard at work. I will do my best to see that they keep to it.

Again, my thanks to the people who came out to the meeting last Saturday. Your efforts did help to persuade Mr. Shuman of the serious nature of the problems facing our area.

Sincerely,
-s- Arlan Stangeland
Member of Congress

To The Editor:

Your recent editorial, reprinted from the Wall Street Journal, says that comparable worth is "impossible to implement." In fact, the State of Minnesota is already implementing comparable worth for state employees, as a result of legislation which passed in 1982 and 1983.

An outside consulting firm assigned points to state job classes based on the amount of skill, effort, responsibility, and working conditions required for each job. The Commission on the Economic Status of Women did a follow-up study which showed that employees in female-dominated classes earned much less than employees in male-dominated classes rated equally valuable.

For example, clerk typists were ranked the same as delivery van drivers, and registered nurses were ranked the same as land surveyors. Yet the female-dominated typist and nurse jobs paid about $250 less per month.

The Commission found that the total cost of implementing comparable worth — bringing the salaries for female-dominated classes up to the level of male-dominated classes — was only three per cent of the total state payroll. The legislature has appropriated enough money for the first two years of a four-year process, so we will have full implementation by 1987. At that time, every state employee will be paid on the basis of what the job is worth — not on the basis of whether the work is done by men or women.

There have been some concerns about interfering with the supply and demand marketplace system. This has not been a problem for the state's implementation. In addition, our economy has never operated on a pure supply and demand system. As evidence, consider the fact that wages for nurses and clerical workers did not rise during recent periods of shortage in these occupations.

Minnesota is the first state in the nation to take this step, but others are expected to follow. We are fortunate to have avoided the problems of the State of Washington, where they may have to pay out more than $500 million for neglecting the comparable worth issue.

This legislative session, the Commission is supporting legislation to encourage local governments to address the comparable worth issue for their employees. The proposed legislation would apply to cities, counties, and school districts. If your readers would like more information about this proposal, they may call the Commission office toll-free at 1-800-652-9747.

Sincerely,
-s- Carolyn Rodriguez
Representative Chair

Gospel Singer At Newfolden

John Peterson, a country Gospel vocalist from North Branch, will be featured at the Lifeline Christian center in Newfolden April 7 at 8 p.m. The public is welcome to attend.

SPECIAL EQUIPMENT used in teaching students with multiple handicaps needn't be complicated at all. This large ball and mirror are used by Suzanne Steidl to teach a pupil how to reach out for protection during a fall. Teacher of the year for School District 564 in 1984, Mrs. Steidl has nine students with multiple handicaps in her classroom daily at Mark Twain school.

Suzanne Steidl T.R.F. Teacher Of The Year

accumulated a vast amount of post graduate education, including courses at St. Cloud state university, University of North Dakota, University of Alaska, Bemidji state university and Northland community college. Many of the credits have been earned in early childhood education, dealing with various handicaps, methods of teaching handicapped and behavior modification.

She has served on the local parenting advisory committee, chaired the home economics advisory committee, served on the Region I child care advisory council, been a member of the local pre-school screening committee and co-chaired the special education curriculum committee. She has spoken at a number of workshops and meetings, including being a presenter on special education at a workshop sponsored by the Northwest Educational Cooperative Service unit (NWECSU).

Suzanne is a member of Delta Kappa Gamma, the DFL party, Episcopal church and American Association of University Women.

In her philosophy of teaching, Mrs. Steidl notes that the most important requirement for teaching is a genuine concern for the individual student. "It became apparent to me," she writes, "that the philosophies of traditional education and special education ran parallel. Therefore it is not difficult to merge and to justify the need to write individualized educational plans after having worked with children in traditional classrooms.

"Working with individuals with special needs can be a challenge. My primary concern is that the individual must be first. A student in special education needs to be treated as a person just as any other student is treated. The handicap should not be the first throught when approaching the student.

"In special education, a student's needs may be singular or multiple in nature," she continues. "Curriculum begins with a total look at each student and is then individualized to meet priority needs as the student grows and changes. In the individualized program these needs can be met in different skill areas. The four basic skills are vocational, recreational, domestic and community functioning. A student's academic skills, physical development and emotional and social growth can be developed into specific goals and objectives that will merge into the skill areas.

"A least-restrictive program is essential. Students have the right to risk success or failure in their development just as any other student in a traditional program has this privilege. Success and failure are important elements in this society."

Mrs. Steidl said she finds the "transdisciplinary approach" most flexible in dealing with her students. This enables people to address the unique needs of the student with multiple handicaps. Involvement includes parents, special education teacher, physical therapist, occupational therapist and speech therapist in addition to physical education instructor, classroom aides and administrators.

She stresses working together so that the individual program components can be incorporated into the student's entire program, with particular emphasis on parental participation.

"Normalization and generalization of each student is a long-range goal," she writes. "The primary goal of my classroom curriculum is to help an individual become as independent and functional in society as possible."

A parent whose child has been involved in Suzanne's program writes: "Suzanne Steidl has a keen interest in children and has an ability to work with handicapped children which few people possess. Her interest in the education and development of young people goes far beyond the duty and responsibility which might be expected of a classroom teacher.

"Although our daughter is no longer Suzanne's primary responsibility, she continues to show keen interest in her development both physically and mentally. Suzanne's interest in children and their development goes far beyond what might be expected of anyone. She has shown over the years that this concern and ability has made her an excellent teacher."

Don Gregory, whose quotation opened this article, concluded his letter of recommendation as follows:

"Like a very decorative icing on a very special cake, Suzanne tops off (her qualities) with intangibles that cannot be measured in an objective sense, yet permeate all that she does and is. Her inner beauty and strength as well as her love for human kind radiate a caring and brilliant warmth that causes all who know and work with her to realize she is so extra special. Regardless of how far you search, you may find a teacher that is her equal, but you will find none to surpass her."

Medical Lab Week Focuses On Hospital

first thought when the lab is mentioned, it is involved with much more than that. The lab handles frozen sections of tissue which are analyzed by a pathologist who comes to Thief River Falls once a week from Grand Forks. It also works with urinalysis and microbiology, identifying abnormal bacteria and determining the best control rate for use of antibiotics. Spinal fluid and throat cultures are other materials for which the laboratory provides handling and-or testing.

Blood analysis is a big part of the hospital lab's work. The lab has computerized equipment which is capable of conducting 50 tests on a single sample of blood within about 10 minutes' time. Twelve to 15 tests are most commonly ordered with sugar and alcohol the most common tests of all. While such testing would require about half an hour individually if done manually, the computer analyzer can provide accurate numbers quickly, Shafland said.

Although the lab no longer draws blood from donors, it still provides blood components in accordance with patient needs. Through United Blood services, more efficient use is made of blood drawn since it is separated into components for various needs.

"We maintain a sufficient inventory to meet our anticipated needs," Shafland said of the lab's blood supply. "This blood is in the form of packed cells which are rotated in the inventory to avoid outdating. We have access to all kinds of components at United Blood services and can receive them quickly. Using components enables us to give the patient what he or she needs without transfusing whole blood, thereby increasing blood efficiency.

"This is especially helpful in the case of the more rare blood types. There is no longer the worry when an ambulance is called that a donor of O Negative blood will be needed and everyone with that type will be spending the weekend on Lake of the Woods," Shafland said.

He also noted that the practice of providing blood to patients with no charge for the blood itself continues at the hospital. A change is made for cross-matching blood types and administering transfusions.

At present the laboratory has nine employees in addition to Shafland. They include medical technologists Carol Chervestad, 15 years of service; Rose Erickson, six years; Cheryl Grundman, three years; Darlene Kelley, 10 years; and David Mugaas, 10 years and medical lab technicians Elaine Jensen, seven years; Patrick Laroque, one year, Kristie Lee, one year; and Linda Welk, seven years.

Shafland said that laboratory workers are needed throughout the nation since virtually all hospitals and many clinics have some sort of laboratory. Students interested can attend a two-year program to become a medical lab technician or a four-year program to become a medical technologist. They can also specialize in a number of areas of practice including hematolegy, urinalysis, chemistry, microbiology and blood banking.

Shafland said he would be happy to visit with students considering such a career field and review the local hospital laboratory with them.

There is an ever greater degree of interest in good management and cost containment, Shafland said, and emphasis is being placed on efficiency in testing to help keep costs in line. He looks for increasing computerization in the lab field as it also increases in other areas of medical practice.

Senator Asks Accounting For MIAs In Asia

Senator Rudy Boschwitz has joined Senate efforts to renew U.S. investigations to secure a full accounting of Americans captured or missing in Vietnam and elsewhere in Southeast Asia and still unaccounted for.

"The men and women who serve this country deserve a commitment that the U.S. government will stand behind them in securing the best safety possible," Boschwitz said.

"It's been over a decade since our military left Vietnam but 2,490 American servicemen and civilians still remain unaccounted for. Since that time, however, there have been over 200 reported sightings of Americans being held against their will in Southeast Asia which remain unverified."

The resolution calls on the President to:

— Secure from Southeast Asian governments a full accounting of U.S. personnel listed as captured or missing;

— Work for the immediate release of each living POW or MIA and the return of the remains of all American POWs and MIAs who died in captivity; and — Report to Congress on actions taken to date and actions to be taken in the near future to reach those goals.

"There are 46 Minnesotans among the reported MIAs and POWs in Southeast Asia. Their family members face uncertainty and despair with each passing day that their loved ones are not with them. For this reason we must work to get a full accounting of those missing in Southeast Asia," Boschwitz said.

Ehrenstrom To Finish Dental Class At UMD

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

On Saturday, March 24, I tried to bring the national and state administrators of the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) to Thief River Falls in order to check the efforts of the disaster team and to personally inspect the damage that five-to-seven years of natural disasters have inflicted on your area.

Because of extremely bad weather conditions, we were not able to land at Thief River Falls in time for the meeting. Our plane was turned away from airfields at Warren and Red Lake Falls. When I asked the pilot to circle, he said we had too little fuel to wait for the fog to lift.

We landed at Grand Forks and tried to use a conference call to the scheduled meeting in Thief River Falls. Unfortunately, the phone connection and equipment proved insufficient.

Charles Shuman, the national FmHA administrator, had to return to Washington, so it was not possible to drive to Thief River Falls at that time. But Mr. Shuman assured me that he now had a greater understanding of the problems weather can create in our area, and would keep the pressure on to provide all possible relief to the area.

I apologize to the 500 people who travelled to the meeting in Thief River Falls. The bad weather, the low fuel, the poor phone connection and Mr. Shuman's schedule all combined to prevent us from attending the meeting.

I would like to assure you that I am staying in contact with the emergency team that is processing all disaster loan applications as quickly as possible. When I was in Thief River Falls two weeks ago, they were hard at work. I will do my best to see that they keep to it.

Again, my thanks to the people who came out to the meeting last Saturday. Your efforts did help to persuade Mr. Shuman of the serious nature of the problems facing our area.

Sincerely,
-s- Arlan Stangeland
Member of Congress

To The Editor:

Your recent editorial, reprinted from the Wall Street Journal, says that comparable worth is "impossible to implement." In fact, the State of Minnesota is already implementing comparable worth for state employees, as a result of legislation which passed in 1982 and 1983.

An outside consulting firm assigned points to state job classes based on the amount of skill, effort, responsibility, and working conditions required for each job. The Commission on the Economic Status of Women did a follow-up study which showed that employees in female-dominated classes earned much less than employees in male-dominated classes rated equally valuable.

For example, clerk typists were ranked the same as delivery van drivers, and registered nurses were ranked the same as land surveyors. Yet the female-dominated typist and nurse jobs paid about $250 less per month.

The Commission found that the total cost of implementing comparable worth — bringing the salaries for female-dominated classes up to the level of male-dominated classes — was only three per cent of the total state payroll. The legislature has appropriated enough money for the first two years of a four-year process, so we will have full implementation by 1987. At that time, every state employee will be paid on the basis of what the job is worth — not on the basis of whether the work is done by men or women.

There have been some concerns about interfering with the supply and demand marketplace system. This has not been a problem for the state's implementation. In addition, our economy has never operated on a pure supply and demand system. As evidence, consider the fact that wages for nurses and clerical workers did not rise during recent periods of shortage in these occupations.

Minnesota is the first state in the nation to take this step, but others are expected to follow. We are fortunate to have avoided the problems of the State of Washington, where they may have to pay out more than $500 million for neglecting the comparable worth issue.

This legislative session, the Commission is supporting legislation to encourage local governments to address the comparable worth issue for their employees. The proposed legislation would apply to cities, counties, and school districts. If your readers would like more information about this proposal, they may call the Commission office toll-free at 1-800-652-9747.

Sincerely,
-s- Carolyn Rodriguez

Gospel Singer At Newfolden

John Peterson, a country Gospel vocalist from North Branch, will be featured at the Lifeline Christian center in Newfolden April 7 at 8 p.m. The public is welcome to attend.

SPECIAL EQUIPMENT used in teaching students with multiple handicaps needn't be complicated at all. This large ball and mirror are used by Suzanne Steidl to teach a pupil how to reach out for protection during a fall. Teacher of the year for School District 564 in 1984, Mrs. Steidl has nine students with multiple handicaps in her classroom daily at Mark Twain school.

accumulated a vast amount of post graduate education, including courses at St. Cloud state university, University of North Dakota, University of Alaska, Bemidji state university and Northland community college. Many of the credits have been earned in early childhood education, dealing with various handicaps, methods of teaching handicapped and behavior modification.

She has served on the local parenting advisory committee, chaired the home economics advisory committee, served on the Region I child care advisory council, been a member of the local pre-school screening committee and co-chaired the special education curriculum committee. She has spoken at a number of workshops and meetings, including being a presenter on special education at a workshop sponsored by the Northwest Educational Cooperative Service unit (NWECSU).

Suzanne is a member of Delta Kappa Gamma, the DFL party, Episcopal church and American Association of University Women.

In her philosophy of teaching, Mrs. Steidl notes that the most important requirement for teaching is a genuine concern for the individual student. "It became apparent to me," she writes, "that the philosophies of traditional education and special education ran parallel. Therefore it is not difficult to merge and to justify the need to write individualized educational plans after having worked with children in traditional classrooms.

"Working with individuals with special needs can be a challenge. My primary concern is that the individual must be first. A student in special education needs to be treated as a person just as any other student is treated. The handicap should not be the first throught when approaching the student.

"In special education, a student's needs may be singular or multiple in nature," she continues. "Curriculum begins with a total look at each student and is then individualized to meet priority needs as the student grows and changes. In the individualized program these needs can be met in different skill areas. The four basic skills are vocational, recreational, domestic and community functioning. A student's academic skills, physical development and emotional and social growth can be developed into specific goals and objectives that will merge into the skill areas.

"A least-restrictive program is essential. Students have the right to risk success or failure in their development just as any other student in a traditional program has this privilege. Success and failure are important elements in this society."

Mrs. Steidl said she finds the "transdisciplinary approach" most flexible in dealing with her students. This enables people to address the unique needs of the student with multiple handicaps. Involvement includes parents, special education teacher, physical therapist, occupational therapist and speech therapist in addition to physical education instructor, classroom aides and administrators.

She stresses working together so that the individual program components can be incorporated into the student's entire program, with particular emphasis on parental participation.

"Normalization and generalization of each student is a long-range goal," she writes. "The primary goal of my classroom curriculum is to help an individual become as independent and functional in society as possible."

A parent whose child has been involved in Suzanne's program writes: "Suzanne Steidl has a keen interest in children and has an ability to work with handicapped children which few people possess. Her interest in the education and development of young people goes far beyond the duty and responsibility which might be expected of a classroom teacher.

"Although our daughter is no longer Suzanne's primary responsibility, she continues to show keen interest in her development both physically and mentally. Suzanne's interest in children and their development goes far beyond what might be expected of anyone. She has shown over the years that this concern and ability has made her an excellent teacher."

Don Gregory, whose quotation opened this article, concluded his letter of recommendation as follows:

"Like a very decorative icing on a very special cake, Suzanne tops off (her qualities) with intangibles that cannot be measured in an objective sense, yet permeate all that she does and is. Her inner beauty and strength as well as her love for human kind radiate a caring and brilliant warmth that causes all who know and work with her to realize she is so extra special. Regardless of how far you search, you may find a teacher that is her equal, but you will find none to surpass her."

Medical Lab Week Focuses On Hospital

first thought when the lab is mentioned, it is involved with much more than that. The lab handles frozen sections of tissue which are analyzed by a pathologist who comes to Thief River Falls once a week from Grand Forks. It also works with urinalysis and microbiology, identifying abnormal bacteria and determining the best control rate for use of antibiotics. Spinal fluid and throat cultures are other materials for which the laboratory provides handling and-or testing.

Blood analysis is a big part of the hospital lab's work. The lab has computerized equipment which is capable of conducting 50 tests on a single sample of blood within about 10 minutes' time. Twelve to 15 tests are most commonly ordered with sugar and alcohol the most common tests of all. While such testing would require about half an hour individually if done manually, the computer analyzer can provide accurate numbers quickly, Shafland said.

Although the lab no longer draws blood from donors, it still provides blood components in accordance with patient needs. Through United Blood services, more efficient use is made of blood drawn since it is separated into components for various needs.

"We maintain a sufficient inventory to meet our anticipated needs," Shafland said of the lab's blood supply. "This blood is in the form of packed cells which are rotated in the inventory to avoid outdating. We have access to all kinds of components at United Blood services and can receive them quickly. Using components enables us to give the patient what he or she needs without transfusing whole blood, thereby increasing blood efficiency.

"This is especially helpful in the case of the more rare blood types. There is no longer the worry when an ambulance is called that a donor of O Negative blood will be needed and everyone with that type will be spending the weekend on Lake of the Woods," Shafland said.

He also noted that the practice of providing blood to patients with no charge for the blood itself continues at the hospital. A change is made for cross-matching blood types and administering transfusions.

At present the laboratory has nine employees in addition to Shafland. They include medical technologists Carol Chervestad, 15 years of service; Rose Erickson, six years; Cheryl Grundman, three years; Darlene Kelley, 10 years; and David Mugaas, 10 years and medical lab technicians Elaine Jensen, seven years; Patrick Laroque, one year, Kristie Lee, one year; and Linda Welk, seven years.

Shafland said that laboratory workers are needed throughout the nation since virtually all hospitals and many clinics have some sort of laboratory. Students interested can attend a two-year program to become a medical lab technician or a four-year program to become a medical technologist. They can also specialize in a number of areas of practice including hematology, urinalysis, chemistry, microbiology and blood banking.

Shafland said he would be happy to visit with students considering such a career field and review the local hospital laboratory with them.

There is an ever greater degree of interest in good management and cost containment, Shafland said, and emphasis is being placed on efficiency in testing to help keep costs in line. He looks for increasing computerization in the lab field as it also increases in other areas of medical practice.

Senator Asks Accounting For MIAs In Asia

Senator Rudy Boschwitz has joined Senate efforts to renew U.S. investigations to secure a full accounting of Americans captured or missing in Vietnam and elsewhere in Southeast Asia and still unaccounted for.

"The men and women who serve this country deserve a commitment that the U.S. government will stand behind them in securing the best safety possible," Boschwitz said.

"It's been over a decade since our military left Vietnam but 2,490 American servicemen and civilians still remain unaccounted for. Since that time, however, there have been over 200 reported sightings of Americans being held against their will in Southeast Asia which remain unverified."

The resolution calls on the President to:

— Secure from Southeast Asian governments a full accounting of U.S. personnel listed as captured or missing;

— Work for the immediate release of each living POW or MIA and the return of the remains of all American POWs and MIAs who died in captivity; and — Report to Congress on actions taken to date and actions to be taken in the near future to reach those goals.

"There are 46 Minnesotans among the reported MIAs and POWs in Southeast Asia. Their family members face uncertainty and despair with each passing day that their loved ones are not with them. For this reason we must work to get a full accounting of those missing in Southeast Asia," Boschwitz said.

CAPITOL COMMENTARY

by LeRoy Stumpf

State Senator — District 1

This past week, Senate Majority Leader Roger Moe of Ada and I introduced a property tax relief plan for Minnesota farmers into the senate's tax committee. If approved by the Legislature this session, it could provide between $20 and $30 million a year in property tax relief to farmers, especially those living in the Northwestern corner of the state.

This proposal would reduce property taxes for farmers by making two basic changes: first, by changing the computation of the school agricultural mill credit, and, secondly, by cancelling the existing $2,000 cap on farm mill credit put into law by the Legislature during the height of the 1982-83 recession.

What's significant about this plan is that it recognizes the fact that economic hard times still exist on Minnesota farms, particularly in our area of the state. It was estimated during testimony in the tax committee last week that this maximum tax credit impacted 4,000 farmers statewide, many of which are in our area of the state where the size of farms is larger than the state average.

Stumpf indicated that this plan would target tax aid to farmers who received tax increases in their 1984 tax assessments in excess of 20 per cent over 1983 and, according to testimony of the Senate tax analysts, would save farmers an estimated $21 million this year and another $24 million in 1985 if enacted this session and implemented immediately this year.

What was especially clear during hearings on the bill (S.F. 1900) in the tax committee was that a "trickle-down" philosophy is being carried out by the federal government, allowing cuts at the federal level to be handed down to state government which has, in many cases, passed it on to local taxpayers, in the form of property tax increases.

Local taxpayers should be aware of the fact that the state collects no property taxes as such, but spends revenues collected from other sources (i.e. income and sales taxes, license fees) to abate or reduce local property tax burdens. In fact, over 75 per cent of all money spent by the state goes back in some form as local government aid or property tax relief.

Representatives of farm groups testifying to the committee reiterated the call for local property taxes to be based on ability-to-pay and productivity of the land rather than on simple assessed valuations which was outstripped farm productivity by leaps and bounds the past few years.

Jerry Krueger, speaking for the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers, called this bill "the first step in dealing with ag land taxations," which he said has seen "more of the burden being shifted from urban to rural areas."

He also suggested to the committee that future tax levies be tied more closely to farm income. Northwestern Minnesota land is not assessed as highly as southern Minnesota farmland, for example and, therefore, has received proportionately less ag mill credit tax relief from the state.

I was pleased to hear a representative of the state revenue department predict that the assessments on some agricultural property will finally be reduced by as much as $100 per acre in 1984 (for taxes to be paid in 1985) due to the two-year lag on land value and tax assessment balancing.

Other representatives of farm groups placed the improved agricultural mill credit, and a proposed reduction in the school mill levy from 24 to 22 mills, at the front of their legislative priorities, ahead even of the repeal of the 10 per cent income tax surcharge by Jan. 1, 1984.

As we enter the final four weeks of the 1984 legislative session, we will be considering a variety of taxing proposals, which I am hopeful will contain a fair amount of property tax relief for farmers.

If you have any questions or concerns over this or any other issue, please feel free to contact my office at: 306 Capitol Building, St. Paul, 55155 or call (612) 296-8660.

REPORT

From The

Minnesota House of Representatives

by Rep. Wallace Sparby
District 1B

"Many of you don't need convincing. You already know that Minnesota is a good place to do business — a unique environment for innovation, a stable environment for growth."

This expression of praise for Minnesota did not come from elected officials but from editors of "Corporate Report" as a preface to a special Minnesota edition of their magazine. Maybe the flap over Minnesota's business climate is beginning to be recognized for what it is — much ado about nothing much.

Of course we need to continue our efforts to improve the business climate . . . and we are doing that. But what I object to is that it has become fashionable to downgrade the economic advantages of living and doing business here and this negative approach does nothing but harm to Minnesota, which outsiders often refer to as the state that works.

Recent announcements about businesses flocking from Minnesota to other states and about consequent job losses just don't paint a true picture of what is actually occurring. We see front page headlines about the firms who are leaving the state, but seldom read about the new businesses which expand into Minnesota — unless it's in a little article buried somewhere in the back section of the newspaper.

According to the latest figures on jobs from the revenue department, Minnesota is outpaced only by Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Michigan and Nevada in the number of new jobs being gained. There are 41 states which are behind us in the new jobs category. Between 1976 and 1981, Minnesota outdistanced the nation in employment growth in manufacturing, retail and service industries. Between January of 1983 and January of 1984 we gained 72,800 jobs, and that includes even the early part of last year when we were still losing some jobs to the recession.

The old story about tremendous numbers of our residents flocking out of the state just doesn't hold water. Of course we are losing some people, particularly to the sunbelt states, but population projections by the census bureau show that of the northeastern and north central states, only Wisconsin is expected to have a larger population growth than Minnesota by 2000. It is predicted that six states in this area will actually lose population — including South Dakota. There is nothing we can do to stop the shift of population south and west — a shift that has been going on for over half a century. What is obvious is that it isn't due to our taxes.

John F. Johnson, executive vice president of Lamalie Associates Inc., an executive search firm, said recently: "Today, the cities most frequently preferred by executives are Atlanta, Boston, Dallas, Denver, Minneapolis and San Francisco and the Bay Area . . . It's also hard to get people to relocate from these cities if they're already there."

Now, let's talk about taxes. A new study may dispel the myth that Minnesotans pay among the highest taxes in the nation. It was done by the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations which has calculated all major federal, state and local taxes in the largest city of each state for two-wage-earner families. The study shows that the Minneapolis family earning $17,500 ranked 35th in total taxes and the rank is 19th for a family earning $25,000. This study puts the state tax climate in much better perspective than do the figures often quoted for just state and local taxes. You have to look at the whole picture.

It's obvious we have a lot of large business successes to point to in Minnesota, as revealed by the many companies which started here and grew into multinational corporations. The list includes Honeywell, Pillsbury, 3M, Burlington Northern, General Mills, Economics Laboratory and Land O'Lakes. And recently we have seen the creation of numerous new companies specializing in computer technology, including Control Data and Cray Research corporation. In fact, today three of the world's five largest computer firms are based here.

Thriving small businesses are our specialty, because Minnesota offers one of the best environments nationwide for new and expanding businesses. Last fall "INC." magazine ranked Minnesota as having the fifth best climate for small business development. According to "INC.", many of the nation's fastest growing small companies are in Minnesota. It reported that in 1983 we were ahead of all states in this category except California, New York and Texas.

I could go on and on talking about such things as our productive, educated work force, good wages, longevity of life, our good education system, our scenic, clean and natural environment, the multitude of cultural opportunities, and a lot of other things that make up the good life in Minnesota and make it a good place to do business.

As Garrison Keillor, host of the Prairie Home Companion radio show, recently wrote in extolling the virtues of the simple but good life in Minnesota: "Happy to Be Here."

I'm sure happy to be here. How about you?

Bill To Push Out Fishermen Fails To Pass

A bill to accelerate the buyout of commercial fishermen on Lake of the Woods and Rainy lake failed to gain committee approval last Tuesday in the Minnesota senate agriculture and national resources committee.

The measure was sponsored by Sen. Collin Peterson of Detroit Lakes and was the product of an agreement reached by officials from Ontario, Canada and Minnesota over the use of border recreational resources. Approval was given by the committee to another Peterson bill which would allow for the cross-deputization of conservation officers from Minnesota and Ontario

NOTICE
NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS —

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be received at the office of the Middle River Snake River Watershed District, 122 West Johnson Avenue, Warren, Minnesota until 4:00 P.M. o'clock on April 26, 1984 for the rental of fully operated excavation equipment. Proposals are being requested for dozers and crawler mounted draglines or backhoes. The draglines and backhoes may range from ¾ cubic yards and larger and must be equipped with a boom, bucket and counter weights appropriately matched for the type of machine. All equipment must be equipped with a Servis Recorder.

The works to be done consist of but is not limited to the clearing and disposal of trees and brush and the removal of sediment from drainage channels, disposal of rocks and the leveling of spoilbanks. The work required and the locations of the work will be designated by the engineer of the district.

The equipment must be modern and in good operating condition and furnished with capable and experienced operators. Deficient operations or maintenance which results in reduced production or poor workmanship will be cause for contract cancellation.

All equipment proposed will be considered and evaluated based on many factors including but not limited to the following: price, horsepower, machine rating, machine weight, track length, track width, track gauge, buckets available, boom lengths available and counterweights available.

Work will be paid by the hour and payment will be based on the time recorded on the Servis Recorder discs which must be turned over to the Engineer. Payments will be made on a monthly bases. The minimum hours per week will be 40 unless delayed by weather or equipment operating problems.

In addition to the payment for hourly work, the contractor will be eligible for a demobilization payment. The amount will be equivalent to 5 hours rental rate for each type of equipment authorized for use by the Engineer.

Demobilization payment will be included in the last payment for hourly work satisfactorily completed.

The District may cancel the contract at any time without cause by paying the demobilization payment.

The contractor may cancel the contract at any time without cause but forfeits the demobilization payment.

The type of equipment best suited for this project is dependent on the weather and other unknown job conditions. The district intends to rent equipment which in its opinion, will perform the required work at the least cost. Its evaluation factors will depend on conditions expected and the encountered which will likely change along the course of the work. The District will release and rent different equipment from time to time as it deems necessary to economically perform the required work.

The contractor, in making this proposal, promises to furnish the equipment listed for the prices shown subject to its availability. He does not promise to make or keep the equipment available to the district. He understands, however, the equipment availability may be a factor in the district's evaluation of equipment.

The contractor will be required to furnish certificates showing that he has workmans compensation insurance and liability insurance.

The Middle River-Snake River Watershed District reserves the right to reject any and all bids and to award contracts to other than the apparent low bidder.

Coaching Clinic Set Saturday

An excellent response has been received, according to program director Steve Young, for a coaching clinic scheduled to be held Saturday at Northwestern Hospital in Thief River Falls.

Over 30 persons have already registered for the clinic, designed for all area coaches, athletic directors, teachers and others interested in athletic performances.

Meeting in the physical therapy department on the first floor of the hospital, the program will be held from 8 a.m. to 12-noon. There is no charge for the clinic, but pre-registration is required by contacting Young at 681-4240, extension 492. A certificate of completion will be awarded at the conclusion of the program.

Clinic speakers will include Dr. Steve Levinson, a licensed consulting psychologist, who will speak on "Using the Mind to Improve Athletic Performances;" Dr. Jeff Garske, an orthopedic surgeon, who will be speaking on "Evaluation, Treatment and Recovery From Knee Injuries;" along with a joint presentation by physical therapists Steve Young, Charlie Bigelow and Mary Beth Olson, who will discuss "Preseason Athletic Performances."

Broten Leads North Stars' Scoring

Roseau's Neal Broten finished as the leading scorer for the Minnesota North Stars during the just-completed 1983-84 National Hockey League regular season with 28 goals, 61 assists and 89 points, the most scored by an American-born player in the NHL this winter. He was a plus-16 in the North Stars' plus-minus charts, just one notch behind team leader Tom McCarthy, who was plus-17. Broten led the team in that category a year ago. Dennis Maruk was at the other end of the North Stars' charts at minus-17. Meanwhile, Warroad's David Christian finished with 29 goals, 52 assists and 81 points in a banner season with the Washington Capitals. NHL best-of-five playoff openers star tonight, with Minnesota matched against Chicago and Washington vs. Philadelphia.

Mr. Basketball Candidates

Pelican Rapids' Pat Westby, who led his Vikings to the 1984 Minnesota Class A state high school basketball tournament title, became only the third player from northwestern Minnesota to be nominated in 10 years of selecting a Mr. Minnesota Basketball.

Joining Westby, a 6-4 point guard, as finalists for the 1984 competition are Tim Hanson of Prior Lake, Joe Geiger of New Prague, Terry Kuechle of Armstrong and Greg Lawson of Blaine.

Only other nominees for the prestigious award from this part of the state since the contest was launched in 1975 were Chad Sheets of Moorhead in 1980 and Jim Jensen of Bemidji, who won the award in 1978.

Ralph Anderson of the Becker County Record in Detroit Lakes, who covers Pelican Rapids, compiled a list of winners and finalists in each of the nine previous Mr. Minnesota Basketball contests to give readers an idea of how selective it is just to be nominated as one of the finalists:

1975 — Gene Glynn, Waseca (Mr. Basketball); Frank Wachlarowicz, Little Falls; Rockne Johnson, Duluth East; Kevin Mulder, Renville; and Bill Thompson, Mankato West.

1976 — Kevin McHale, Hibbing (Mr. Basketball); Greg Boone, Minneapolis Central; Steve Lingenfelter, Bloomington Jefferson; Doug Pederson, Prior Lake; and Ronnie Henderson, Minneapolis Marshall-University.

1978 — Jim Jensen, Bemidji (Mr. Basketball); Tim Olson, Orr; Steve Nett, Winona Cotter; Ted Struger, Fridley Grace; and Bob Winzenberg, Fairmont.

1979 — Randy Bruer, Lake City (Mr. Basketball co-winner); Greg Downing, Duluth Central (Mr. Basketball co-winner); Todd Swanson, Rocori; Ben Coleman, Minneapolis North; and Mark Wackler, Howard Lake-Waverly.

1980 — Jim Petersen, St. Louis Park (Mr. Basketball); David Gilreath, Minneapolis Marshall-University; Rickey Suggs, St. Paul Central; Brian Hansen, Duluth East; and Chad Sheets, Moorhead.

1981 — Redd Overton, Minneapolis North (Mr. Basketball); Barry Wohler, Bird Island-Lake Lillian; John Anderson, St. Louis Park; Todd Anderson, Armstrong; and Brian Ammann, Richfield.

1982 — Rob Shelquist, Irondale (Mr. Basketball); Dave Dahlke, Chaska; Brad Dudek, Duluth East; Harlan Hill, Minneapolis North; and Tom McDonald, Chisholm.

1983 — Tom Copa, Coon Rapids (Mr. Basketball); Paul Van Den Einde, Willmar; Mark Dusbabek, Faribault; Keith Hasselquist, Chisago Lakes; and Kevin Treanor, Coon Rapids.

Winner of the 1984 award will be announced April 29.

Up To 300 Entries Expected Saturday . . .

Archery Tournament Is Planned At Sports Arena

Thief River Falls Archery Club will host a Spring Fever Shoot Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the sports arena.

There will be three rounds of competition offered for the 200-to-300 archers that club officials expect to be on hand for the event, including shooters from the Twin Cities area and a number of entries from the Winnipeg area.

Registration will be held from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at the sports arena. Registration fees are $6 for adults, $5 for youths and $3 for cubs (ages 11 and under). Spectators are welcome free of charge.

"This is a first-time experience for our club since Grand Forks usually hosts this type of tournament," explained Thief River Falls Archery Club president Fred Olson. "But due to some mix-up in the scheduling, they can't hold it this year, so we're going to try it since so many shooters look forward to this tournament each year."

First of the three portions of competition will be the standard 300 Round normally shot during the winter months of indoor competition by most of the local clubs. The archers shoot a group of five arrows 12 times for a possible score of 300.

Second event will be the American Round, more commonly known as the 900 Round. An archer shoots 30 arrows from each of three distances — 30, 40 and 50 yards. If all of the arrows were kept in the bulls-eye, then the maximum score of 900 is achieved. Current state record is an 881, recorded by Rick Bruggeman of the Thief River Falls Archery Club.

Third offering, the Animal Round, is probably the most fun for the archers and spectators. Competitors will shoot at life-size animal targets at various distances that will closely match actual hunting conditions, including efforts from a tree stand and from a ground blind where the archer will have to place his arrow between trees before successfully reaching the target.

Trophies will be awarded at 6 p.m. Saturday for those shooters who finish in the top three places in their events.

All current Minnesota State Archery Association (MSAA) division and classes will be observed.

For additional information contact Fred Olson at 681-5625.

FATHER-SON combination of Dana (left) and Jon Klos are among the local archery enthusiasts looking forward to Thief River Falls' first Spring Fever Shoot Saturday at the sports arena. Some 200-to-300 archers are expected to participate in the event, and spectators are invited to watch the event, free of charge.

Lincoln Girls Open 1984 Track Schedule Friday

Thief River Falls' 1984 spring sports season will get underway Friday when the Lincoln high school girls participate in an indoor meet at the Winter Shows Building in Crookston.

Scheduled to start at 4 p.m., the meet is an earlier-than-expected season opener for the Prowlers, who were originally planning to make their debut a week later at the same site.

A squad of 27 girls in grades 8-12 is currently working with head coach Tom Schafer, but the group includes just two seniors in Paula Wilkens and Sherry Sabo.

Rest of the roster features juniors Stacie Kruta, Georgia Howard, Jackie Thune, Jessica Solne, Tricia Armstrong, Jenny Olson, Melissa Grabanski and Rosemary Hyland; sophomores Kim Aune, Connie Grovum, Lynell Armstrong, Sue Pfeifer and Michelle Puetz; freshmen Marci Turenne, Michelle Turenne, Bobbi Thompson, Vikki Weigand, Linda Duke, June Wilkenson, Paulie Wegge and Veronica Hamm; plus eighth graders Peggy Cruz, Cindy Kruta, Jackie Smith and Edna Johnson.

Shelli Trontvet and Michelle Kertz are serving as student managers.

Sabo and Stacie Kruta are the Prowlers' co-captains.

It's a good group, noted Schafer. Graduation losses were minimal in terms of top point producers, but will affect the Prowlers' depth and their ability to collect those points in the 3-4-5 places.

"Last year we probably had the best year we've had in a long time here," mentioned Schafer. "We had a lot of sophomores last year who did a lot of scoring for us, but we need to replace those extra points the seniors gave us. This year will be a question mark until we can replace those points."

Still, the Prowlers have some proven point-producers in the likes of Stacie Kruta, Cindy Kruta, Smith and Sabo, with Puetz showing lots of potential in the high jump. The Prowlers should be strong, says Schafer, in the hurdles, the 1600 and 3200 relays and in most distance races. They lack sprinters, he admitted, with Armstrong the only consistant scorer in the shorter races.

Thief River Falls' tentative schedule lists 12 regular season meets, plus the 1984 North Sub-Region 8AA meet Thurs., May 24, at Bemidji and the Region 8AA meet Sat., June 2, at Moorhead. Among the dates, which may be supplemented by outings against Warroad and Grafton, are two home appearances — Tues., May 1, and Tues., May 8. If wet weather would force the Prowlers to abandon their cinder track, they would attend meets April 30 and May 7 at Grand Forks Red River.

Sports Show At Grand Forks To Include Shows

Great Wallendas will bring new daredevil stunts, a new performing member of the family and the same high wire thrills and excitement to the Grand Forks arena when they return to perform as part of the state shows at the 17th annual Grand Forks Sportsmen's Boat, Camping and Vacation Show Thursday, April 5, through Sunday, April 8. The show is again being sponsored by the Grand Forks Kiwanis Club.

World-famous first family of the high wire will headline an entertainment lineup that includes the ever popular Victor the Rasslin' Bear, the comedy team of Williams and Ree and comic ventriloquist Bob Trent.

Eighth generation performer Enrico Wallenda, grandson of legendary troupe founder Karl Wallenda, will introduce his new wife Debbie as a featured performer during the show. A former newspaper reporter who met her husband on a story assignment, Debbie has become a full-fledged member of the act after Enrico helped her "learn the ropes" over the past year.

Wallendas will be undertaking new high wire stunts, including difficult two-man jumps. The jumps will be performed by Enrico and Farrell Hettig, who also

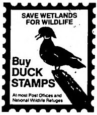
Wildlife Aided Through Sales Of Duck Stamps



SAVE WETLANDS FOR WILDLIFE
Buy DUCK STAMPS
At most Post Offices and National Wildlife Refuges

Secretary of the Interior William Clark has launched a major campaign to encourage more nonhunters to support wildlife conservation by purchasing federal duck stamps.

The campaign, which is supported by a broad cross section of corporations and conservation groups, coincides with the fiftieth anniversary of the duck stamp program, one of the nation's oldest and most successful wildlife conservation efforts. Duck stamps (formally named migratory bird hunting and conservation stamp) are required to be purchased each year by anyone age 16 or older who hunts waterfowl. Revenues from the sale of the $7.50 stamps are used to buy wetlands for the national wildlife refuge system. Nearly 89 million duck stamps have been sold, providing $285 million for the conservation of 3.5 million acres — all or part of 186 national wildlife refuges and many smaller waterfowl production areas.

"Waterfowl hunters are not the only ones who benefit from healthy wetlands," Clark said. "Everyone who enjoys wildlife — birdwatchers, anglers, nature photographers, campers and others — also benefit. The purchase of a duck stamp is one of the most direct ways Americans can help ensure the preservation of these important wildlife habitats.

"I am pleased with the support this campaign has so far received," Clark said. "More than 50 corporations and conservation organizations are actively assisting the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service by encouraging sales of duck stamps to their customers and members."

Clark said that concern over the rapid disappearance of wetlands and the escalation of land prices had led to the Interior Department's decision to try to broaden public participation in the duck stamp program.

"The United States is losing nearly half a million acres of marshes and other wetlands every year," Clark said. "These areas are vital not just to ducks, but to many other kinds of fish and wildlife including endangered species and commercially valuable fish and shellfish.

"At the same time, increasing land prices have slowed efforts to acquire and protect important wetlands. Duck stamp dollars don't stretch as far as they used to.

"Over 90 per cent of all duck stamps are purchased by waterfowl hunters. Effectively, these hunters are paying to preserve wetlands that all of us benefit from. I recognize that many people who do not hunt have probably never heard of duck stamps, and I believe more nonhunters would buy duck stamps if they realized it would help save wildlife habitat. Anyone can buy a duck stamp — all you have to do is go down to the post office and ask for one."

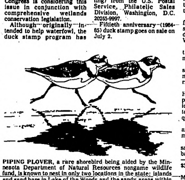
Idea of a duck stamp was conceived in 1934 by a nationally known cartoonist and conservationist, H.N. "Ding" Darling. At that time America's ducks, geese and other migratory waterfowl were severely threatened by drought and by loss of their wetland nesting areas to agriculture. Darling's idea was to provide a dependable source of funds to preserve habitat for ducks and geese. Congress agreed with his notion of raising the money by requiring waterfowl hunters to buy an annual stamp, and passed the Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp Act. (The official name of the stamp was later changed to "Migratory Bird Hunting and Conservation Stamp" but it has always been popularly called the duck stamp.) Darling himself sketched two mallards for the design of the first stamp, which went on sale in 1934 for $1. In 1961, Congress passed the Wetlands Loan Act, authorizing advances on duck stamp funds to speed wetlands protection. The loan is to be repaid using three-quarters of annual duck stamp revenues when the law expires October 1, 1984. Congress is considering this issue in conjunction with comprehensive wetlands conservation legislation.

Although originally intended to help waterfowl, the duck stamp program has turned out to be beneficial for many kinds of fish and wildlife throughout the country. The program has preserved prairie potholes in the upper Midwest, marshes along the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf Coasts and the Mississippi River, bottomland hardwood swamps in the south, and other important wetland areas. These wildlife refuges provide homes for many kinds of birds, mammals, fish, reptiles, amphibians, and wild plants. Wetlands play an important role in the production of commercially valuable fish and shellfish, and provide other economic benefits to people by helping to control flood waters and improve water quality.

Duck stamps portray a species of North American ducks, geese or swans. The design for each year's stamp is chosen through an annual art contest that is entered by many of the nation's best wildlife artists. The colorful stamps have become collector's items and a complete set of unused stamps now sells for as much as $6,000. Long popular among waterfowlers and stamp enthusiasts, duck stamps have in recent years been purchased by growing numbers of non-hunting conservationists who want to help conserve wetland habitat for wildlife.

Duck stamps may be purchased at most post offices and some national wildlife refuges for $7.50, or ordered by mail for $8 (includes 50 cents for postage and handling) from the U.S. Postal Service, Philatelic Sales Division, Washington, D.C. 20265-9997.

Fiftieth anniversary (1984-85) duck stamp goes on sale on July 2.



PIPING PLOVER, a rare shorebird being aided by the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources nongame wildlife fund, is known to nest in only two locations in the state: islands and sand bars in Lake of the Woods and the sandy areas within the Duluth Harbor.

Piping Plovers Nest At Lake of the Woods

Minnesota's population of Piping Plovers is being protected thanks to efforts of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources.

Piping Plover is a rare shorebird, and is known to nest in only two locations in Minnesota: islands and sand bars in Lake of of the Woods, and sandy areas within the Duluth Harbor. The total population in the state is fewer than 25 pairs. Protection of this very unique species has resulted from the combined efforts of land acquisition, habitat management and research.

Department of Natural Resources had determined that Pine and Curry Islands, long sandy islands at the mouth of the Rainy River in Lake of the Woods, were the primary nesting habitat of the plover. More plovers nested in this area than elsewhere in the Great Lakes states. The islands and the adjacent point were purchased as a scientific and natural area by the Department of Natural Resources in 1982. Piping Plover is at home on these sandy wave-swept beaches, and the protection of its breeding area allows for continued presence of this endangered species in our state.

Research has also helped this species. Nongame wildlife program funded a two year research project on the ecology of the Piping Plover. Researchers from the University of Minnesota found that in 1982 there were 12 pairs breeding on the island. In 1983 that number increased to 21 pairs. The nesting success also increased from 29 per cent in 1982 to 52 per cent in 1983. In addition, 35 birds which were fitted with plastic leg bands returned to the breeding site one year after they were banded. This type of information gives us insight into the ecology of this endangered species.

Habitat management has also helped the Piping Plover. In 1983, three sanctuaries were established on the S.N.A. and posted with no trespassing signs. These sanctuaries were closed to the public to prevent disturbance to the sensitive plovers. Brochures were printed which describe plovers and the sanctuaries. These brochures were distributed to all resorts in the Baudette area so that recreationists could become aware of the problem. Concerned fishermen and recreationists respected these measures, and this was perhaps a contributing factor to the astonishing increase in the Lake of the Woods population of plovers in 1983.

Nongame wildlife program is supported by contributions to the checkoff on the state income and property tax forms. For more information on programs, or a free brochure on the Piping Plover, contact the regional nongame specialist for northwest Minnesota, Katie Hirsch, 2115 Birchmont Beach Rd. N.W., Bemidji, MN 56601; telephone 755-2976.

Resource enhancement — What can we do together to create and improve sportfishing opportunities. Find out how aeration can save lakes from winter kills.

Pollution — Is acid rain killing our northern Minnesota lakes? What are the facts about lakeshore property owners who buy over-the-counter herbicides to poison out weed habitat.

Enforcement and ethics — How do you feel about people who are large scale fish hogs? Find out what can be done to significantly reduce this illegal harvest.

Fishing contests — Are sponsors making too much money without putting anything back into the resource?

Gill netting — How do you feel about commercial fishermen using lethal gill nets to kill tons of your fish and sell them to grocery stores?

Spearing — What are the facts about the impact of spearing big northerns? How do you feel about this "sport"? What can be done about it?

Border Waters — Find out the real problems facing northern border residents.

Trout fishing — Can something be done to create more and better trout fishing right here in Minnesota?

Sportfishing in the 80's — How can we put the various public programs and private ideas of Minnesota residents together to give us all higher quality fishing.

Come and compare notes and ideas with other fishing men and women.

Ticket prices: advance sales — day program and banquet $25. At the door sales — day program and banquet $30.

Tickets are available at the MSC booth at the Minneapolis Sportsmans Show, Burger Brothers Sporting Goods, Minneapolis, Joes Sporting Goods, St. Paul, or the MSC office, 612-224-4357, 159 Lafond, St. Paul 55103.

DNR NEWS

Fishing Penalties

Enforcement officials at the Department of Natural Resources have called attention to a change in the penalties for using certain unlawful methods to take fish.

Change was enacted by the previous legislature and raises the penalty from a misdemeanor to a gross misdemeanor. The unlawful methods covered by the change are found in chapter 101.42, subd. 11 of the Minnesota game and fish laws.

In summary, the law prohibits the taking of fish — except as permitted by other statues — with devices, chemicals and substances which includes nets, traps, poison, explosives, trot lines, snares and drugs.

While the penalty for a misdeamor is a maximum fine of $700 or 90 days in jail or both, a gross misdemeanor is punishable by a maximum fine of $3,000 or one year in jail, or both.

TIP Art Print

TIP, Inc. (Turn In Poachers), recently announced the introduction of the second in a series of limited edition wildlife art prints, the Department of Natural Resources reports.

New print, entitled "Winter Whitetail", is by Richard W. Plasschaert, noted Minnesota wildlife artist and winner of the 1980-81 federal duck stamp contest.

Full-color print captures the magnificent whitetail deer in flight and is done in the warm, earthy tones that have become Plasschaert's trademark.

Each print is numbered and signed by the artist. The edition is limited to 2,000 prints. Image size is 17¾ inch by 12¼ inch with ample margin.

Print price is $35 and includes a one-year membership in TIP, Inc., a private, nonprofit corporation which offers cash rewards for information leading to the arrest of fish and wildlife law violators.

"Proceeds from the sale of the print will benefit TIP's education and reward programs," said TIP president, Robert P. Larson of Wayzata.

Prints may be ordered by sending $38 (includes $3 shipping and handling charge) to TIP, Inc., Box 47, Centennial Building, St. Paul, MN 55155.

All orders will be filled subject to availability.

Campgrond Hosts

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR), Division of Forestry, has reminded those interested in applying for a volunteer "campground host" position at a forestry campground this summer to get their request for an application in as soon as possible.

Deadline for applying for a position was April 1, but this date has been extended because of a delay in the availability of application forms.

Forestry campgrounds where hosts may be stationed this summer include Waskish Campground (near Upper Red Lake), Mantrap Campground (near Park Rapids), Owen Lake, Bear Lake and Thistledew Campgrounds (north of Nashwauk), Woodenfrog Campground (Lake Kabetogama), Wakemup Campground (Lake Vermillion), Eckbeck Campground (near Finland), Huntersville Forest Landing Campground (near Menahga), Willow River Campground (Willow River), Clint Converse Memorial Campground (near Outing) and Ann Lake Campground (near Zimmerman).

Campground hosts are unpaid volunteers who will be given a campsite, free of charge, at one of the above campgrounds in exchange for assisting other campers and visitors.

Persons interested in receiving further information and an application form may contact John Hellquist, Forest Recreation Specialist, Box 44, Centennial Office Building, St. Paul, MN 55155.

Sports Show To Open Thursday

learned his high wire skills from Karl Wallenda.

Wallendas will perform from a steel cable stretched above the arena floor without using a net or other safety device. Each of their performances will be climaxed by one of the most tension-filled feats in show business history — the breathtaking chair pyramid.

Bringing the show back down to earth, Bruce Williams and Terry Ree will treat audiences to their antic mix of country songs and comedy. Their comedic versions of well-known songs and fast-paced skits have earned the pair favorable comparisons with the Smothers Brothers and Rowan and Martin.

Williams, who is Caucasian, and Ree, who is part Sioux Indian, draw freely but lightheartedly on their ethnic differences as a source of their original humor.

A favorite opening act for the Oak Ridge Boys and other well-known performers, Williams and Ree have gained an enthusiastic midwest following.

Bob Trent's ventriloquist act is enlivened by such comic characters Roscoe the Crow, Gooch the Pooch and Lucy Leghorn.

Victor the Rasslin' Bear, another returning star, is a proven crowd pleaser who has muscled his way through more than 10,000 matches. At over seven feet tall and 550 pounds, the bear is a formidable opponent who has mastered 14 professional wrestling holds.

State shows will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday, at 3:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Saturday and at 3:30 p.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday.

Doors to the arena will be open for the Sportsmen's Show from 5 p.m. to 11 p.m. Thursday and Friday (April 5 and 6), from noon to 11 p.m. Saturday (April 7) and from noon to 8 p.m. Sunday (April 8).

FIELD CULTIVATORS

MODELS FROM 8 TO 61 FEET
(Harrows Optional)

FIELD PROVEN PERFORMERS: With over a decade of field proven performance behind them, Wil-Rich Field Cultivators are the number one choice of farmers from Alberta to Argentina.

WALKING TANDEMS: There is constant depth control over any terrain through the use of walking tandem wheels that minimize bouncing over rocky or uneven soil, cutting bumps in half, and helping stabilize working depth.

WIL-RICH FIELD CULTIVATORS MEAN DEPENDABILITY. They are built for strength and durability. Work is done fast with 3-point or pull type models from 8 to 61 feet. Folding wing models are available for easy transport.

PATENTED SHANK ASSEMBLY: It is the "heart" of the Wil-Rich Field Cultivator. It's precision engineered with a "live" expansion spring for pulverising soil, breaking up dirt clods, and incorporating chemicals. The shank also trips up to 16" over stubborn field obstructions.

TERRIFIC TRASH CLEARANCE! Works in heavy trash conditions without accumulating residue. The Wil-Rich cultivator's sturdy 4-bar tubular steel frame measures 96" from front to rear with 30" between cross members. And you get two feet of vertical clearance between the shank point and frame. With uniform 7" spacing, each shank works at the maximum without dragging dirt or trash along.

Your local Wil-Rich dealer has all the details. See him soon.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all who gave their help and support following the death of our beloved husband, father and grandfather, Frank W. Brown, Jr.

Thank you to the ambulance crew and Dr. Heinrichs and the hospital staff for trying to help.

Special thanks to Pastors Hanson and Larson for their spiritual help and comforting words during this time, to Jerry Joringdal and Pastor Hanson for their music, and to the Zion Lutheran church women who served lunch following the funeral. Thank you to those dear friends who served as pallbearers, and to the men of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars for the military honors. Special thanks to Gordon Peterson and Kathryn Steffens of the Green Funeral Home for the thoughtful service and respect with which we were treated, both here and at Ft. Snelling.

Thank you to all who came to call, sent food, cards, words of comfort, flowers and memorials. There were so many who helped in any number of ways.

May God Bless You All.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Thief River Falls water utility announced today that the State maximum allowable limit for turbidity in drinking water is being exceeded.

Turbidity is caused by the presence of finely suspended particles such as clay, sand or organic matter in the water. Turbidity can be a problem if it interferes with chlorine disinfection. However, the high turbidity levels do not create any health hazard because the water utility is able to maintain effective levels of chlorine for disinfection.

The Thief River Falls water utility staff is working closely with State Health Department officials to reduce the turbidity to acceptable levels.

Any citizen seeking additional information should contact Allen Lemm at the Water Plant, phone number 681-3809.

Public Notice

Notice is hereby given that the board of review for the township of Reiner will be held in the town hall at 9 a.m. Tuesday, the 17th day of April, 1984 for the purpose of reviewing and correcting the assessment of said township for the year of 1984.

Daniel Holen, clerk

A special thanks to Pastor Budke, Dr. Mestery, nurses and staff at Northwestern hospital, pallbearers and those who served lunch at the church and brought food to our home. # Soil Moisture Highest During Past 15 Years

This Minnesota agricultural statistics service report is from a mathematically modeled soil moisture analysis that is based on more than 700 precipitation station data reports. The model estimates the amount of plant-available water that is contained within a five-foot column of medium to fine textured soil. The indicated results should be adjusted according to whether the actual soil within a given area can hold more (a heavy or clay soil) or less (a light or sandy soil) than the basic 10 inches.

Almost all areas of the state entered the 1983-84 winter with the soils very high in moisture. Indeed the soils as of Nov. 1, 1983, are at about the highest moisture content of the last 15 years. Other years in which the soils entered the winter with high fall soil moisture were 1968, 1979, 1981, and 1982. This means that the state will have had four wet spring conditions in the last five years.

Areas with 10 inches of soil moisture on the map are considered to be at or near their maximum water holding capacity. Soils in the eight to 10-inch areas should also be near maximum capacity this spring after the winter snow melt and the spring rain. Thus, all of Minnesota except the western 20 or 25 per cent is expected to have soils at their maximum capacity this spring.

The only areas expected to have a normal to less-than-normal water content are Kittson, Traverse and Wilkin and parts of Redwood, Lyon, Yellow Medicine, Lac Qui Parle, Big Stone, Stevens, Grant, Ottertail, Clay, Marshall and Roseau counties.

The 1984 spring soil water outlook is very similar to the spring of 1983. The important difference between the two years is the early, heavy and continuous snow cover amounting to anywhere from 10 to more than 20 inches that occurred across the state during the last eight days of November, 1983. This created a most unusual condition. The insulating blanket of snow has reduced the heat loss from the soils to such an extent that across more than two-thirds of the state there is virtually no frost in the soil.

Exceptions are found in southwestern Minnesota as far east as Nicollet, Blue Earth and Martin counties with six to 18 inches of frost. Extending northward along the North and South Dakota border in a band about 50 to 75 miles wide from approximately Lac Qui Parle county to the Canadian border, the frozen soil is from 18 to 48 inches deep.

At St. Paul, where a long soil temperature record exists, the snow cover since late November has remained greater than 10 inches for much of the winter. As a result the soil has remained about 32 degrees at all levels. Under average winter conditions the soil at St. Paul would be frozen to 42 inches in mid-February and reach a maximum depth of 44 inches in the first week of March.

There are several important consequences arising from the deep and persistent snow cover and the shallow or non-existent soil frost. One is that a greater than average amount of snow-melt runoff in the spring can enter the soil except in those areas where the soil is already wet. In the areas of well-drained and tiled soils much of the water will percolate into the lower profile or the tile drains and therefore should not be a factor in planting with normal spring weather.

Areas of poorly drained soils with high moisture and little or no frost will experience a delayed planting season due to excessive moisture in the soil profile unless a drier than usual spring occurs.

Phyllis Diller Leads Fight For Better Hearing And Speech

Phyllis Diller and Mary Frances "Muffy" Silvestri, as they appear in public service announcements keynoting Better Hearing and Speech Month.

An upbeat theme of "Spreading Laughter Through Hearing and Speech" will spark the 1984 program for the Council for Better Hearing and Speech.

Leading the campaign is that lady of laughter, Phyllis Diller, who will serve as chairman of the annual observance scheduled for the month of May. Joining in her efforts will be this year's poster child, Mary Frances "Muffy" Silvestri.

The five year old Muffy will make special public appearances with Phyllis Diller to focus attention on hearing, speech and language disorders and the help available to overcome these problems.

Both will launch Better Hearing and Speech Month at May 1 kickoff events in Washington, D.C. Muffy will also be featured on a poster with Phyllis Diller, who, like her, has overcome hearing problems.

Television and magazine public service announcements as well as other national publicity materials will help to publicize the program. The Council's national effort will serve as an umbrella under which community volunteers across the country will implement special events and public information projects.

Twenty-seven non-profit organizations are pooling their resources for the national public information program. Other national and local organizations are considering sponsoring or cooperating membership in the campaign.

Major Study Of Heart By-pass Patients Done

In a major study, released recently, it was reported that persons experiencing coronary artery disease may be advised to delay coronary bypass surgery until the disease, has progressed beyond its early stages. These findings were presented by Dr. Joseph C. Kiser in a general session of the Minnesota academy of family physicians meeting in Minneapolis.

This study was originally conducted to measure long term results of cardiovascular treatment techniques in the upper midwest as compared to other major surgical centers in the United States including the Texas heart institute, the Cleveland clinic and Duke university.

Of the 1,724 patients reviewed, all were operated on by Dr. Kiser or Dr. Theodore A. Peterson within the past 14 years, all had symptoms of angina and all underwent coronary bypass surgery on an elective basis.

"We found many patients with one blocked artery who could elect not to have bypass surgery and be successfully treated through dilation (balloon) treatment or medication," according to Dr. Kiser. "By monitoring the patient's disease, we often delayed surgery until there was a more significant advancement in the disease, thereby reducing the possibility of having to perform more than one coronary bypass operation on a patient."

The study showed that coronary patients in the upper midwest are receiving bypass surgery at a later stage of the disease and at a later age than patients in some other major medical centers. "However, patients in our study who had bypass surgery at a later stage of the disease experienced a reduced operative mortality risk. Additionally, 78 per cent of those patients survived 10 years or more as compared to a 10-year survival rate of 86 per cent for people in a similar age and sex population who do not even have coronary artery disease," Dr. Kiser stated.

Patients of Dr. Kiser and Dr. Peterson, using this conservative approach, experienced a reoperation rate of only two and one-half per cent whereas another leading coronary surgical center experienced a reoperation rate of nine per cent. The reoperation rate is the percentage of patients who must undergo more than one coronary bypass surgery.

"In maintaining this conservative approach to coronary artery disease," Dr. Kiser said, "one must look at coronary surgery as being not only a treatment for symptoms of angina but in its more advanced stages, it is an attempt to preserve muscle from irretrievable damage. The challenge then is to select those patients for surgery at a point in their disease when three vessels have become dangerously narrowed but before severe damage has been done to the main pumping chamber."

This study represents the most extensive long term analysis of coronary artery disease patients in the upper midwest.

Putting Things In Order

In this age of medicare, social security and homes for the aged, sometimes people forget an important part of growing old — tranquility!

Yes, tranquility and peace are just as important in growing old gracefully as is sufficient insurance or all the other means with which we show our concern for the elderly.

Have you ever noticed that old people have a knack of putting things in order? In fact, they need everything tidy, neat and sure. Certainly their greatest need is for peace and security — but this can come only when they are at peace with God!

If we want to reap the harvest of friendship with God in our old age, then we must cultivate our relation with Him — when we are young and able. Regular church attendance and worship is your assurance of peace and tranquility during your own gentle lengthening years. It will be a heaven-sent reward and one which you cannot, will not, want to miss.

Freedom . . . So Precious!

Information from an article by M.K. Guzda in "Editor and Publisher" magazine provided Jim Pumarlo, editor of the Red Wing Republican Eagle, with material for the following editorial:

In a recent column, Jim Pumarlo, editor of the Red Wing Republican Eagle, carried a comparison of the rights and freedoms of the press in several other contries. His source was Editor and Publisher and an article by M.K. Guzda.

"Freedom enjoyed in America is not universal. In some countries writing for a living is almost synonymous to being branded a criminal. The reporters' rights are just about as limited.

"For Example:

"Algeria: The very idea of a free press is attacked by the regime's apologists as a 'Western intervention' designed to create 'fissures' in developing societies and thus 'pave the way' for a return to colonialism.

"Argentina: Newspapers remain subject to oppressive taxes that handicap their development and threaten their survival, while newsmen are threatened with heavy penalties for stepping out of line.

"Bangladesh: The press is forbidden to cover demonstrations against military rule.

"United Kingdom: The new Police and Criminal Evidence Bill prompted widespread criticism form all sectors of the media. Clauses allowing police to search for confidential information when investigating serious crimes caused most dispute.

"Venezuela: The past year have seen increased arrests and court actions against newsmen and publishers. Anybody intending to work as a journalist first must obtain a license.

"Zaire. The country's mass media is government controlled, and therefore no criticism of Presidnt Mobutu Sese Seko is permitted.

"Zimbabwe: Press freedom appears to be under threat as the country moves ever closer to a one-party state.

"The press does not stand up for freedom of information solely for itself. Its rights are closely tied to everyone's basic constitutional rights to freedom of expression. Once a free press fails, citizens soon will find themselves in the same boat.

"But a free press also must be a responsible press. That goal must be pursued daily. For every time one reporter misuses his or her rights, it tarnishes the entire profession."

More "Wake Up" Thoughts

One of our recent editions carried a reprint of an editorial by Patricia J. Estes in "The Back Forty." She wrote of her staff of four people meeting with small groups of farmers and of learning the problems they share. But the clipping we had apparently was incomplete, and we have now been supplied with the remainder of the editorial which reaches a more orderly conclusion.

The editorial told of what the writer would expect if the family farm as we know it today were allowed to disappear, or even significantly be reduced. It points out the disappearance of people from communities and closing of businesses and institutions, then continues as follows:

The soil will be tilled and the crops harvested but not by those who are operating a family farm.

For a family farm is one of any size that provides the income for as many members of an extended family who are willing to work on it as a team. It's not some kind of statisical gobbedly gook spewed out by government computers.

And those facing the decision to quit farming are not just your beginning farmers. But those who are past mid-life and wonder what they will do for the last decades of productive life once they're pushed off the farm.

Those in financial trouble are not just those who expanded too fast or risked too little.

We're all in trouble, everyone who pulls a chair to the table to eat anywhere in America will find lifestyles changed if we lose too many family farms.

Americans spend less than 15 per cent of expendable income for food. The rest allows them to buy cars and televisions and new furniture and take trips and send children to college. It allows them to live the good life on credit extended by the American farmer.

But that will all change if too many family farms are lost. For them those who can be hard-nosed businessmen will farm. It will no longer be a combined labor of love and business but a strictly bottom line operation. And in the free enterprise system, purists will say that's how it has to be.

But food is not the same as an automobile or even a prom dress for your daughter. Food is America's only renewable resource and it is the world's hope. The raising of it is an honorable profession best left to those who know they till the soil in covenant with the Lord.

Those who turn the soil for only a bottom line profit will not allow America to continue to have a cheap food policy nor will they anguish over the thousands who starve to death each day in Third World nations.

The farmers at these focus groups do anguish over that and they also despair of ever explaining what the failure of the American family farm system could mean to this nation as a whole.

But I know. I know.

There'll be weeping and gnashing of teeth and the cries of a nation will mingle with the prairie winds howling down the streets of abandoned small farm towns.

Too late America's public will join the mourners at the mass grave sites of American agriculture. And the farmer and his family will grieve in private. Because they're a people of honor and pride. Of privacy and inward strength.

And they are a people of quick wit. We all laugh a great deal at these focus groups. And afterwards the four of us who conduct the groups put on a nonstop show of funny stories over dinner. Laughter is one way of getting through pain.

For me, another way is writing about it.

This is my plea:

Wake up America before it's too late to stir. And small town rural business managers and owners, it's past time to awaken. You had best sign up in this battle to return American agriculture to a healthy economic state.

Because whatever your definition of a family farm is, the death of it will signal the locking of many businesses.

One of them could be yours.

Puff Piece

Following editorial is from the Sacramento Bee:

The TV advertisment sounds sweetly reasonable. "Can we have an open debate about smoking?" It begins, then goes on to assert that there is "significant evidence" — none of it presented — contradicting the assumption that smoking causes disease.

This ad is part of an offensive launched by the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. Appearing on "Nightline," Edward A. Horrigan Jr., chairman of the firm (and a non-smoker himself), dismissed the case against smoking as premised on mere "statistical association." When pressed to acknowledge any harmful effects of smoking, Horrigan allowed that it "may well stain your teeth."

Those denials are nonsense, of course, since the evidence of harm, most recently summarized in the 1983 surgeon general's report on smoking and health problems, is overwhelming. Indeed, the case against smoking is far stronger than the basis on which many other chemicals have been banned from food and the environment.

But this pitch is also dangerous nonsense. It offers reassurance to smokers looking for some reason not to kick their habit and allays the worries of teenagers who haven't yet taken it up.

The answer isn't to ban the ads, although they should be subjected to truth-in-advertising standards, or to be combated through a new prohibition. What's needed instead is an equally effective anti-smoking campaign aimed at countering the tobacco company's message. In that war of persuasion, the "stop smoking" forces have one decisive edge: the truth.

Borrowed Nonsense:

After five years of fruitless effort in attempting to get his parrot to talk, the owner decided to return it to the pet store. As he crossed the street the parrot screamed "Look out!" The man froze in astonishment and was struck by an approaching car. He got up, checked his bruises and blamed the "dumb bird" for his problems. "Who's dumb?" the parrot asked. "For five years you want me to talk, and when I do, you don't listen."

---

After interviewing the lady on her 99th birthday, the reporter observed, "I'd like to be around to visit with you next year when you reach 100." "Well, why not?" the lady smiled. "You look healthy enough to me."

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

HOW TO SCREEN A PATIO

How can a homeowner beat the summer's heat, without burning up over air-conditioning bills? Many solve the problem by turning a patio, carport or breezeway into a cool summer living room with the simple addition of screening.

Common hand tools and inexpensive materials make the job easy and affordable for do-it-yourselfers. Here are some tips from the Insect Screening Weavers Association on how it can be done.

What You Need

You will need: wood beams (2-in. x 4-in. and 4-in. x 4-in.), a saw, hammer and nails, metal framing angles, utility knife, staple gun and screening.

Corrosion-resistant aluminum and fiber glass screening are the two most popular and inexpensive types. Both come in many widths to accomodate various porch panel sizes and can be cut with tin snips or a sharp utility knife.

Building on masonry, you will also need an electric drill with a masonry bit and nonrusting screws in lead sleeves, to secure the wood frame.

The Easy Way

To build three screen walls around a roofed patio, the following steps are recommended.

Each screen wall can be "prefabricated" as a unit, then secured. Begin by mounting 2-in. x 4-in. wood base strips along the patio floor and main wall of the house — drilling through masonry if necessary — and measure the space within the rectangles formed. You'll build a screen wall for each of these rectangles, then attach screening to the frames. Apply wood stains or other finishes before the screening is installed.

Build the frames separately to fit the three spaces, using vertical beams spaced evenly on 24-in., 36-in. or 48-in. centers — all three are typical screen widths. A horizontal "rub rail" at chair back height, about 30-in. above the floor, will add stability. Use the metal framing angles on corners where the vertical and horizontal beams are joined.

To provide an outside exit from the porch, use two 4-in. x 4-in. studs to frame a door opening in one wall. You can then install a pre-made door easily.

Once the frames are finished, raise them into position and nail them to the floor and ceiling base strips, then nail the corners together. Now, add the screening in each vertical section by unrolling from the top down and stapling it into place. Cover the staples with wood strips of the same width and finish as the wood studs. If you have built a door frame, install the door and start enjoying your new summer living room!

Farm Bill Passes Senate, Includes Better Wheat Plan

U.S. Senate has passed a major farm bill that improves the 1984 wheat program and also establishes programs for both wheat and corn in 1985. The bill passed with Senator Rudy Boschwitz saying he led the effort to break a deadlock caused by senators from rice and cotton states who were holding out for program sweeteners for their crops.

"It took a lot of time and effort to work around the obstacles that some senators put in the way. It was disappointing to have the bill held up by problems with rice and cotton programs, but the final result is a good program for Minnesota farmers," Sen. Boschwitz said.

The bill also contains additional funding for export credits and for Farmers Home administration loans at terms more favorable to farmers.

Boschwitz said he participated for months in behind-the-scenes maneuvering on the bill in the senate agriculture committee, of which he is a member.

"After months of effort, we have advanced the improved farm program one step closer to reality. This bill should help the farming community by providing improved farm income over the next two years."

"Farmers will have higher income, and we will spend less on the farm program because of lower carryover stocks."

"Basically, the farmers will gain far more from the paid diversion programs than they give up by foregoing a slight increase in the target price," Boschwitz said.

Boschwitz was the main Republican author of the wheat program in the farm bill. "I have been working with wheat growers and the administration since late July of 1983 to obtain improvements in the 1984 program. It is very satisfying to see that our perserverance is paying off."

The program, designed to curtail growing surpluses of wheat, contains these provisions:

— 1984 crop: $4.38 target price; 10 per cent paid diversion with 50 per cent advance payment at time of signup; 20 per cent unpaid setaside; 10-20 per cent PIK with 85 per cent payment rate.

— 1985 crop: $4.38 target price; 10 per cent paid diversion with 50 per cent advance payment at time of signup; not more 20 per cent unpaid setaside; early July announcement in accordance with current law.

— 1984 crop: No change in 1984 program.

— 1985 crop: Freeze target price at $3.03; if carryover exceeds 1.1 billion bushels, total acreage cutbacks of five to 20 per cent (combination unpaid setaside and paid diversion) of which not less than five per cent is paid diversion and any reduction over 15 per cent to be equally proportioned between paid diversion and unpaid setaside; early September announcement in accordance with current law.

Export Credit Provisions: The bill also contains increased funding for export loan guarantees, another measure in which Boschwitz says he played a leading role. GSM-102 export loan guarantees will rise by $500 million in FY 1984 and by $1.1 billion in FY85.

Direct export loans will increase by $100 million in FY85. An extra $50 million will be added that fiscal year to either the direct export loans or the Food for Peace (P.L. 480) program.

FmHA Provisions: Money available for the FmHA economic emergency loan program was increased to $310 million. This money will carry an interest rate of 10.25 per cent for operating purposes.

There will still be $290 million available to farmers as FmHA federal guarantees for loans that farmers would obtain from their normal lenders. An earlier proposal allowed only $60 million for direct credit and $540 million for guarantees.

In addition, the bill provides that farm assets — machinery and land — should be valued at the level prevailing the year before a disaster in the determination of eligibility for disaster emergency (EM) loan program administered by the FmHA.

This measure should help guarantee that asset values will be left high enough so that a farmer would not be excluded from receiving a disaster emergency loan because of a revaluation of assets.

Other FmHA provisions in the farm bill include:

— Farmers in counties adjacent to counties that have received disaster status will be eligible for disaster loans if their individual production loss exceeds 30 per cent;

— Loan limits for the operating loan (OL) program will be raised from $100,000 to $200,000 for direct (insured) loans, and from $200,000 to $400,000 for guaranteed loans;

— Loans that are rescheduled or reamortized by the FmHA will be at the lower of the interest rate originally charged, or the current interest rate on new loans;

— Maximum repayment period for rescheduled loans will be extended from seven to 15 years.

LAWN LORE

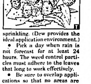
The Dandelion Wars And Other Springtime Activities



You witness it every spring. Across the suburban landscape, the stout-hearted troops of lawnowners diligently cutting, pulling, digging — trying to rid their lawns of springtime's perennial invader, the dandelion.

Never mind the hand-to-weed combat. Because pulling, cutting and digging just won't do the job, according to the lawn experts at The O.M. Scott & Sons Company. To get rid of dandelions once and for all, you have to eliminate the entire plant, including the taproot, which can penetrate the ground more than two feet. If part of it remains in the ground, the dandelion will simply grow back again.

So during the first days of spring, take a few minutes to spread a selective broadleaf control that destroys dandelions and other common broadleaf weeds such as clover, plantain, buckhorn and chickweed. According to the experts at Scotts*, this will get rid of lawn spoilers without harming desirable turfgrasses.

The best time to rid your lawn of pesky dandelions in the spring is when they have blossomed but have not reached puffball stage. This is also an ideal time to spread a high quality weed-'n'-feed that not only destroys dandelions, but also fertilizes your lawn.

Scotts offers the following suggestions to ensure excellent results when using broadleaf weed controls:

- Apply the weed control on a calm day when the grass is wet from morning dew or sprinkling. (Dew provides the ideal application environment.)
- Pick a day when rain is not forecast for at least 24 hours. The weed control particles must adhere to the leaves that long to work effectively.
- Be sure to overlap applications so that no areas are missed.
- Stay off the lawn for at least a day, so that the weed control has ample time to do its job without disturbance.

Within a few days, you'll notice the dandelions will begin to shrivel. In a month, they'll be gone. To keep your lawn thick and green, keep it well fertilized and watered. Then the good grass will actually crowd out new dandelions and other weeds.

Modern weed control products make it simple and easy to win the dandelion war.

Scotts offers a wide range of lawn products that are custom-made for your region and its weather, soil, grass and weed conditions. These products are developed and tested on regional grass varieties at five Scotts research stations across the country. To find out exactly which products to use on your lawn, just call Scotts toll-free HOTLINE: 1-800-543-TURF (in Ohio, 1-800-762-4010).

State Jobless Rate Declines In February

Minnesota's unemployment rate declined to 7.4 per cent in February from 7.8 per cent in January, commissioner Barbara Beerhalter of the Minnesota department of economic security reported recently.

Department analysts interpreted the change as a genuine improvement, as opposed to seasonal, in the job market, Beerhalter said. Usually the rate moves only about a tenth of a point in either direction at this time of year, she added.

Nationally, the unemployment rate for the month was 8.4 per cent.

Analyst Wayne Graner reported that total employment in the state, at 1,989,000, was up .3 per cent over the month. "This increase is less than average," he said, "but an improvement over the past two years."

Although the February labor force figures are encouraging, Graner said, it should be noted that many observers would like to see a faster rate of growth in employment before pronouncing an end to the generzlly high unemployment level in 1983.

"Whether or not this occurs in 1984 is moot," he said, "but the next few months should give an indication of what the remainder of the year will be like."

Nonagricultural wage and salary employment increased 8,400 from January, as gains in manufacturing (up 1,400), services (up 3,600) and government (up 6,800) were only partially offset by a decline of 3,000 in trade jobs, Graner said.

The number of unemployed persons in Minnesota in February was 158,000, down 9,100 from January and down 65,600 from February a year ago.

Minnesota's labor force in February was 2,147,000 workers, down 2,300 from January and up 21,400 from February last year.

Compared to February a year ago, the size of the Minnesota civilian labor force increased by 1.0 per cent; and the number of unemployed workers decreased by 29.3 per cent.

Average February weekly earnings of production workers in the manufacturing sector dipped frim $394.38 to $394.23 over the month. The average work week declined from 40.7 hours in January to 40.6 in February, while the average hourly wage went up from $9.69 to $9.71 per hour, Graner said.

The unemployment rate pertains to the entire labor force and is not used to determine whether unemployment insurance benefits will be extended beyond the 26-week maximum. The unemployment rate among persons covered by unemployment insurance is used to determine whether the benefit payments will be extended.

SBA Urges The Trimming Of Paperwork Cost

An official of the U.S. Small Business administration said today that federal paperwork is preventing many small businesses from doing business with the government and is costing the public more than $95 billion a year.

Frank S. Swain, SBA's chief counsel for advocacy, at the same time called for a 10 per cent reduction in federal procurement-related paperwork. Swain said, "It's a loss to small business and the taxpayer when large agencies cannot come up with a simpler process to buy goods and services from small business."

Swain's remarks came as he released a report prepared by the SBA's office of advocacy summarizing hearings held last summer "to hear first-hand from the small business community about its paperwork problems."

"Despite a major overall decline in federal paperwork since the paperwork reduction act was passed in 1980, more needs to be done in major areas affecting small business," Swain said.

Paperwork report showed that although the office of management and budget has reported a 29 per cent reduction in federal paperwork over the past two years, more than 80 per cent of small business owners contend their paperwork burdens have increased or remained the same.

"A major reason the impact of the paperwork act has not been felt by small business is that two of the areas having the largest impact on small business — tax and procurement paperwork — were not completely under OBM's control until this year. Procurement paperwork burdens are now being identified, and by May 1984, all tax forms will be assigned control numbers and subject to OMB review," Swain said.

Other paperwork problem areas frequently cited by small businesses are pension and census forms.

Swain said, "The current valuation of private effort spent on federal paperwork requirements is $40 per hour."

He also said, "The cost to the public of complying with the government's original information collection budget was about $46.7 billion. Add the $48.9 billion cost of procurement-related paperwork not included in that original budget, and the total cost to the public of complying with the federal paperwork is $95.6 billion."

"The greatest opportunities for paperwork reduction and savings lie in procurement. Overall reduction of procurement - related paperwork is necessary to increase the number of small business participating in the federal procurement process. Procurement activities impose enormous burdens on small businesses and have a significant impact on small business participation in government contracting opportunities."

Swain announced that he will appoint a task force to work with SBA and OMB to reduce procurement paperwork costs by 10 per cent in the next year. The office of advocacy's report identified legislative and administrative changes needed to reduce government paperwork. A copy of that report can be obtained by calling 202-634-7600.

Stumpf Bill On Amtrak Passes In Committee

A bill authored this legislative session by state Senator LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer that would study the expansion of Amtrak rail passenger service between Kansas City, St. Paul and Minnesota cities along the line to Winnipeg, Manitoba, was approved by a senate transportation committee last week.

"I was very glad to see this measure approved by the full committee," Stumpf said following its passage, "because I am convinced this measure is very important to all of the people living along this line who can make good use of its transportation services."

Under the bill (S.F. 1224) the state department of transportation (MnDOT) commissioner would be directed to study the feasibility of providing rail passenger service on these routes:

+ From Grand Forks to Winnipeg via Crookston, Warren and Hallock;

+ From St. Paul to Winnipeg via Willmar and Grand Forks; and

+ From St. Paul to Albert Lea via Faribault and Owatonna, with a possible extension of this service line to Kansas City, MO.

"My bill would essentially commission a study by the MnDOT commissioner to determine whether it makes sense to establish this service through a number of our region's communities. I for one think it is a very good idea," Sen. Stumpf said.

A connection to Canada along this line was discontinued by the Burlington Northern railroad company in 1971, after having served the district in this capacity since it was first inaugurated by the Great Northern railway in 1890.

"Groups interested in railroad passenger service survival, like the Dakota Rail Passenger Service association, believe this line could have more year-round attractions on it than the "North Star," the state-supported train Minnesota now has between St. Paul and Duluth," added Stumpf.

"The Winnipeg Limited would serve the rapidly-growing Winnipeg weekend market and would put St. Paul and Minneapolis only an overnight's trip away from Winnipeg," Stumpf said. "It would also provide Amtrak with an opportunity to share in Expo '86 in Vancouver and the 1988 winter Olympic games in Calgary. United States agencies could also sell package tours to the Assiniboia Downs race track in Winnipeg and would provide passengers in both countries with an international link between our respective railroad systems."

Stumpf has joined with the co-sponsors of the bill, including Sen. Roger Moe (DFL-Ada); Sen. Gerald Willet (DFL-Park Rapids), and Sen. Sam Solon (DFL-Duluth) in sponsoring the effort, which they all have stressed could boost economic development in the state through an energy-efficient transit system.

Stumpf's bill goes on to the Senate rules committee for bill scheduling, and will also be heard by the Senate finance committee.

Farmers Take Money Pleas To Washington

Five area farmers spent two days in Washington, D.C. last week meeting with U.S.D.A. officials and State Senators and Representatives. They are Willard Brunelle, Bruce Elseth, Earl Miller, Roy Swenson and Vance Wiseth.

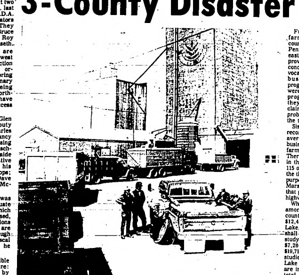
All except Wiseth are members of the Northwest Minnesota Emergency Action committee, which was organized in July of 1983 to bring attention to the extraordinary financial difficulties being experienced in areas of northwest Minnesota which have had several years of excess rain.

The group met with Glen Hertzler, assistant deputy administrator under Charles Shuman of FmHA; Nancy Monessen of FmHA housing division; Senator Rudy Boschwitz and his agricultural aide Dan Pearson; Representative Arlan Stangeland and his agricultural aide Bill Toops; and an aide to Sen. Dave Durenburger, Dan McNamara.

Main purpose of the trip was to stress the need for adequate funding of FmHA loans which are waiting to be processed, Brunelle said. All allocations for farm ownership loans are currently committeed through the last quarter of this fiscal year (October 1, 1984), he added.

Brunelle listed two possible solutions which he said are: Emergency allocations by Congress, and-or re-assigning of funds from other FmHA programs. It was stressed at these meetings that there is an urgent need for prompt action, so that the speed-up of loan processing, which has been facilitated by the task force under the supervision of Maurice McLinn, will not be hampered for lack of funds.

Computer Analysis Shows 3-County Disaster Real



THEY CAME FOR CORN but very little was available. Trucks and trailers lined up at Farmers Co-Op Grain and Seed association in Thief River Falls Thursday as area farmers joined a nationwide corn buying effort. Objective of the action was to reduce the supply in an attempt to improve the market. The "surplus" available at the local Co-op, however, totaled 37 bushels which didn't even fill the box on the pickup of Donald Jensen of Goodridge. All of the other trucks returned home empty. Other corn on hand at the elevator was needed for its feed mill operations. Farmers called other elevators but were unable to purchase corn that day. St. Hilaire Co-Op Elevator reportedly had 96,000 bushels on hand but it was needed for a unit train shipment. Other corn had been purchased on contract but was not available Thursday. Farmers who came to buy corn here were convinced that the "surplus" which is claimed to exist and depress market prices exist on paper only.

Further insight into the farming problems encountered by operators in Pennington, Red Lake and eastern Marshall counties is provided in a computer review conducted by the Minnesota vocational agriculture farm business management program. Results of the study were released by Ed Sisler, program coordinator, and they largely substantiate claims of severe economic problems among farmers in the three counties.

Sisler pointed out that the records used in preparing the averages were from farm businesses enrolled in the farm management program. There were 357 farms included in the 13-county average and 115 of these were included in the three-county average. For purposes of the study, eastern Marshall county is defined as that part of the county east of highway 75.

While net farm earnings among the 357 farms in the 13-county area in 1983 averaged $12,431, Sisler noted, Red Lake, Pennington and Marshall county farms in the study had an average loss of $7,284 or a difference of $19,715. Since the 115 farms studied in Pennington, Red Lake and Marshall counties are included in the 357 farm total for all 13 counties, the actual disparity between the three counties and the remaining 10 counties is much greater.

In the 13 counties, net worth of all farms included in the study had an average net worth loss of nine dollars from $199,038 on January 1 to $199,029 on December 31. In Pennington, Red Lake and east Marshall counties the net worth average declined by $19,419 from $91,021 to $71,602 during the year.

While total assets of the farms studied in the 13-county area increased slightly during the year from $408,404 to $419,987, total assets of the 115 farms in the three-county area declined from $338,117 to $334,454. Despite the fact that total assets of farms in the 13-county area at year end were approximately $85,000 greater than in the three-county area, total liabilities averaged $262,552 in the three counties and $220,458 in the 13 counties — a difference of $41,894 more debt in the three-county area.

Debt areas of real estate mortgage, chattel mortgage, notes and accounts payable increased in the averages of all farms in the study. Year end real estate and chattel debt in the 13-county area averaged $188,116 while the combined real estate and chattel debt in the three-county area averaged $224,131.

In the area of income and expense, the 13-county area had average farm sales in livestock, crops and other

'84 Street Project Hearing Tomorrow

INDIVIDUAL STATE WINNERS in competition at the Minnesota Office Education Association (OEA) spring leadership conference recently in Minneapolis are pictured above. Left to right are Heidi Novak, Park River, ND, third place in legal secretary competition; Donna Quam, Goodridge, fourth place in accounting practice (sole proprietorship); and Jackie Helms, Thief River Falls, first place in musical talent. They were among 37 students from the Thief River Falls AVTI who joined approximately 1,100 post-secondary vocational students for the annual competition.

Thief River Falls city council will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday, in the basement meeting room of city auditorium, to consider a number of topics prior to an 8 p.m. hearing on the 1984 street improvement project.

Topics will include public safety committee recommendations regarding signal light operation at the intersection of First Street and Horace Avenue, a request from Gerald Mundt Architects for an extension of the option on the Carnegie Library building, and purchase of a $17,500 crane-dragline from the state federal surplus property division.

Street improvement project hearing will review costs of the project with affected property owners, who will be assessed at a benefit rate of $5.26 per front foot on the improved streets.

That project has a total cost of close to $800,000, with a bonding requirement of about $526,000. Approximately $300,000 of that total cost will be for replacement and repair of water and sewer mains, which will not be assessed against property owners directly, but which will be recovered through rates charged to all users of the utilities, and-or general obligation bonds.

Streets included in the proposed project, along with their estimated costs and assessable frontage benefit include: Taft (from Kendall to Maple), $16,810, with 280 feet of frontage; Tindolph (from Third to LaFave Park) $7,453, with 1,220 feet; Merriam (from Third to Taft), $7,021, with 1,070 feet; Kneale (third to Taft) $5,929 with 900 feet; Kneale (First to Third) $11,716, with 1,650 feet; Kneale (First to Nora) $20,407, with 2,922 feet; Maple (Third to Taft) $6,178, with 900 feet; Maple (First to Third) $9,989, with 1,350 feet; Maple (First to Nora) $20,308, with 2,922 feet; Spruce (First to Mussey) $4,485, with 740 feet; Pine (First to Gulf), $4,056, with 515 feet; Mussey (Merriam to Spruce) $8,170 with 0 feet; Gulf (Merriam to Pine), $10,894, with 190 feet; Hughes

Farmers Can Save Money By Watching Crop Input

A packed house was on hand at the Pennington county courthouse meeting room for the meeting on Thursday evening to hear discussion on ways that area farmers might reduce the amount of dollars spent on purchased inputs for the 1984 crop.

County agent Terry Courneya and area extension agent Bill Penning, along with timely comments by several farmers in attendance, combined to share ideas on how crop producers with limited capital available for getting the year's crop planted, could reduce their cash purchases on some fields without seriously affecting yields. Key ideas that emerged from this discussion centered on a number of management suggestions.

Evaluate each field carefully for its yield potential and apply cultural practices and purchased inputs only to the extent needed to achieve the realistic yield potential your experience indicates is likely.

For example, if a field has a history of 30-bushel wheat yields due to limiting factors other than fertility, do not invent in fertilizer rates that would support a 45-bushel yield. Since fertilizer and herbicides can involve the highest purchased input, increments, it is most important to plan what is applied carefully.

Experience indicates that on soils testing medium in phosphorus and potash, with medium to high organic matter, an application of 30-15-15 will sustain a 35 to 40-bushel yield of wheat. The nitrogen portion of fertilizer is critical and should not be shorted, whereas phosphorus and potash can be applied at reduced rates on a one year basis without limiting yields below 35 bushels on wheat, 50 bushels on barley and 1,200 pounds on sunflowers.

Soil tests taken within the past three years are necessary to eliminate guess work on phosphorus and potash and annually on nitrogen. A conservative application of nitrogen at seeding time can be supplemened later if nitrate test or plant tissue color indicates a deficiency.

Fields should not be worked until they are dry enough to make a good seedbed with a minimum number of trips over the field. Good seed-soil contact is necessary for early germination and increased competition against weeds if perennial weeds such as quack grass or Canada thistle are present, post emergent chemicals are available that achieve good control at a cost less than that of tillage for cultural control. Fields badly infested with perennial weeds should also be considered as likely candidates for set aside acres.

Harrowing the field after the crop is up and has established good root attachment, yet while annual weed seedling are small (two to three leaves) is usually quite effective at very little cost.

The wide slection of herbicides available for grass and broad leaf weeds in small grain offers good alternatives for either pre-emergence or post-emergence application. Spot spraying after weeds are up can also save dollars in control of some of the hard to kill weeds.

Delaying the decision on what chemical to apply if needed after weeds emerge or nitrogen deficiency shows up, requires a commitment to scout fields closely. Unless Environmental message is a new category this year, and should include photographs which make a statement about the environment. As examples, Heidi Hoks, assistant director of the library system, noted that photographs of pollution or people involved in activities suggesting harmony with the land might be considered. No portraits will be accepted.

Minnesotans Invited To See Queen and Pope

Governor Rudy Perpich and the citizens of Minnesota have been invited to join Manitobans in celebrating the Royal visit to Manitoba in late July and the Papal visit in mid-September.

The invitation was extended by Manitoba Premier Howard Pawley following day-long discussions with Governor Perpich on economic issues of common interest.

The crested invitational scroll presented to the governor reads: "In honour of our historic and longstanding friendship, the government and people of Manitoba cordially invite Governor Rudy Perpich and the citizens of Minnesota to join us in celebrating the royal visit of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II and His Royal Highness the Prince Philip July 24 to July 27, 1984, and the pastoral visit of His Holiness Pope John Paul II September 16, 1984, and to share with us the pride, happiness and significance of these two occasions."

Premier Pawley said Manitobans look upon people from Minnesota and the Dakotas as cousins — an extension of the close relationship between the two countries — and it seemed natural to invite "members of the family" to attend these special events.

Here are some of the public occasions surrounding the Royal visit:

July 24 — A 5:30 p.m. public welcome at Memorial park and the legislative building.

July 25 — A two-hour visit to Dauphin to open a new Ukrainian festival site at noon and a site commemorating historic explorer LaVerendrye at 1:40 p.m., followed by a 3 p.m. airport visit (half an hour) at Brandon. Prince Philip meanwhile will be touring northern hydro sites and visiting the nickel city of Thompson.

— Major event will be the attendance of the Queen and Prince Philip at a two-hour Royal Manitoba festival, beginning at 7:30 p.m., at the Winnipeg stadium. This will feature massed pipe bands, the Winnipeg ballet and symphony and various folk and ethnic singing and dancing groups. Tickets are free, and will be available closer to the event on a first-come basis at various locations including the Canadian government tourist office in Minneapolis.

July 26 — Principal events of this day center around the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the voyage of discovery by explorer La Verendrye. A feature will be the 11:30 a.m. launching by the Queen of canoe brigades at Lockport for the 20-mile upstream trip to the junction of the Red and Assiniboine rivers in the heart of Winnipeg. She will be at the landing site at 4:20 p.m. when the brigades arrive and set up camp at the forks.

Between the 11:30 a.m. launching and the late afternoon arrival at the forks, the Queen will stop at historic and heritage sites along the Red river, visit the Western Canada aviation museum (3:30 p.m.) to pay tribute to air pioneers and review a guard of First World War pilots, and to witness a flying display of modern and WWI aircraft as part of the Royal Canadian air force's 60th anniversary celebrations.

July 27 — The queen leaves at 10:45 a.m. for London, and Prince Philip leaves half an hour later for Los Angeles, where he will officially open the 1984 summer Olympics.

The Pope's seven-hour visit to Winnipeg Sunday, September 16, will have three main features:

+ A 10:10 a.m. visit to the Ukrainian Cathedral (St. Vladimir and Olga);

+ A pre-lunch drive-about in the open-air Popemobile along Winnipeg's Portage Avenue; and

+ The central event, an afternoon mass at Bird's Hill Park, 15 miles north of Winnipeg.

Because of the heavy crowds anticipated at the mass site, special detailed arrangements have been made respecting transportation, crowd control and medical and service facilities.

The site chosen for the open-air mass is on gently-rising ground where the altar commands a broad, unobstructed view for the 300,000 to 400,000 people expected to attend.

Premier Pawley said it was his hope that Minnesotans would enjoy sharing these eventful occasions with Manitobans, as one further means of strengthening already-strong transborder ties...

VA Takes Part In National Consumer Wk.

Veterans administration, an agency that serves millions of consumers daily, will take an active part in the fourth annual National Consumers' Week observance which begins on Monday, April 23. President Reagan pointed out in his proclamation that the country "has emerged from a recession on a wave of consumer optimism that dramatically proves the truth of this year's slogan — 'Consumers Mean Business'."

"Those who are sensitive to consumer needs and services and recognize that well-informed consumers mean business can expect to be rewarded with continuing opportunities to serve and profit," the President said.

VA administrator Harry N. Walters said National Consumers' Week focuses attention on the VA's role in serving its consumers — veterans, their dependents and beneficiaries. The special observance provides "a special opportunity for us to rededicate ourselves to the VA mission and broaden public awareness of the programs we administer," he said.

Walters urged all VA facilities to initiate appropriate projects to emphasize VA's role in serving the local community and to take part in efforts focusing on National Consumers' Week. "America's veterans have faithfully and honorably served their country and we must strive to return that service courteously and compassionately," he said. National Consumers' Week emphasizes several VA goals:

—To ensure that veterans are aware of benefits available to them and to their families;

—To respond fully and considerately to veterans' inquiries or complaints;

—And to improve VA's performance in meeting and addressing veterans' needs.

Some books I've wormed through:

"Fodor's Budget Europe 1984". New York: Fodor's Travel Guides. This is one of several Fodor's guides purchased under this grant and gives background information to help plan your trip. It is divided into general travel material such as suggestions on air, sea, road and rail travel and includes coverage of all the main European countries.

Andrews, Clarence. "This is Iowa". Iowa City, IA: Midwest Heritage Publishing Company. This book is a bright package of words, illustrations and photographs about the Hawkeye State — from its origin to the present — by a glittering array of talented Iowans and two non-Iowans.

"Baedeker's Scandinavia". Englewood Cliffs, N.D.: Prentice-Hall, Inc. The name of Baedeker has long been identified in the field of guidebooks with reliable, comprehensive, and up-to-date information prepared by expert writers. This book first gives an introduction to Scandinavia and then describes the principal towns and areas of tourist interest. Areas and towns are listed in alphabetical order.

Library Week Observance To Be Held Today

Northwest regional library will celebrate National Library Week (April 8 to 14) with an open house, a book drawing and a special travelogue. A display of travel books will also be located in the library.

Library staff is hosting an open house today, April 9, from 3 to 5 p.m. Mayor Bob Carlson and Jane Mackenroth of the Chamber of Commerce will cut the "book" cake, marking the beginning of the open house and the observance of National Library Week. Everyone is welcome to attend the open house, tour the library and have some refreshments.

Registration forms will be available at the front desk for a book drawing from 9 a.m. Monday until 6 p.m. Saturday, April 14. The winner will be drawn and notified on Monday, April 16.

This year the community education board-senior citizen's committee gave a grant to Northwest regional library to help build up the travel book collection. Some of the books purchased with this grant will be on display during the week. The library staff urges the public to peruse these books and if a person desires to check one out, they can make a request at the front desk to be put on a waiting list. As soon as that book is available the library staff will call.

Tying in with the travel book display, the senior citizen's day program from 3 to 4 p.m. Thursday in the meeting room will feature Art Buringrud speaking about his trip to Australia.

Herbicide And Fertilizer May Be Combined

Pennington county farmers can cut costs and labor input with fewer springtime operations when they apply herbicides and fertilizer at the same time. Impregnation of herbicides on dry bulk fertilizer is the secret.

Impregnation involves the spraying of liquid herbicides onto bulk fertilizer as it is mixed in a fertilizer blender. The mixture can then be applied with a conventional fertilizer spreader. Tillage implements such as disks or field cultivators are used to incorporate the mixture into the soil.

Because impregnation combines applications and cuts out at least one trip over the field, farmers can save valuable time and labor during the busy spring season. This can be important, especially when the memory of a wet, late spring like last year's is still fresh in farmers' minds. A delayed planting can reduce yields and lead to harvesting problems.

Impregnation also has other benefits. Farmers use it in conservation tillage systems because the mixture can be incorporated in one pass. And, farmers can leave more crop residue on the soil surface because the fertilizer carries the herbicide down to the soil.

Some area farmers have their dealers impregnate the fertilizer and custom apply the mixture. By doing this, they can free up more of their own time and cut back on fuel costs with less trips across the field.

Herbicides that can be incorporated four to six inches deep, as opposed to those left on the surface or shallowly incorporated, allow for deeper placement and maximum efficiency of the fertilizer. In addition, the mixing of the soil during incorporation insures even distribution of impregnated chemicals.

Blood Drive At Goodridge Wed., April 18

Goodridge's next blood drive will be held on Wednesday, April 18, from 1 to 5 p.m. in the Senior Citizens Center at Goodridge.

Ernie Swanson, Goodridge's blood drive coordinator, hopes to have 73 donors signed up with appointments two days before the drive.

This year United Blood services is placing an even greater emphasis on precise inventory control to avoid wasting any of this precious fluid. More O positive and O negative blood is needed to meet increasing patient demand for these blood types. At the same time, the patient need for AB positive blood is extremely low. That is why persons with AB positive blood are not being recuirted to donate at the upcoming blood drive. Since blood is only good for 35 days and patient need for AB positive blood so rare, UBS doesn't want to draw an AB positive donor now and risk wasting the blood in 35 days.

"Generally, most healthy people who are 17 to 65 years of age and weigh at least 110 pounds may donate," Swanson explained. "There are quite a few people who do not realize they are qualified to donate. People who are taking vitamins, hormones, birth control pills, diet pills, high blood pressure medication and antibiotics for acne may donate. "We also suggest that donors eat a meal before donating," Swanson continued.

Anyone interested in more information or in scheduling an appointment, please contact Ernie Swanson at 378-4262.

Single Parent Course Set For Thursdays

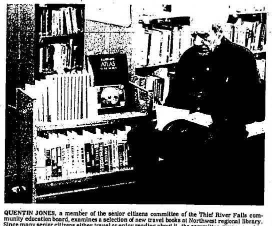
Fathers and mothers, whether custodial or non-custodial, will gain new insights into the role of single parenting in a three-week course offered by the AVTI. Class will meet on Thursday, April 12, 26 and May 3 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at Knox elementary school. A fee of $7.50 per person will be charged.

Instructor Joyce Brandt will lead discussions on the following topics: coping with crisis and loss, disciplining in a single parent home, coping with the absentee parent, what about my life — dating, remarriage, step-families.

Pre-registration is required by contacting Adult Education, AVTI, 681-5424.



QUENTIN JONES, a member of the senior citizens committee of the Thief River Falls community education board, examines a selection of new travel books at Northwest regional library. Since many senior citizens either travel or enjoy reading about it, the committee gave a grant to the library system to build up its travel collection. These books will be on display during national library week (April 8 to 14), but will be available for checkout afterward. People interested in a particular selection may place their name on a waiting list at the front desk during library week.

Farmers Can Cut Costs On Crop Planting

farmers are willing to make that commitment, they could face serious yield losses by waiting too long to control weeds or apply a nitrogen top dress.

In row crops, a combination of herbicides and cultivation can save dollars, especially in soybeans and sunflowers where complete control by chemicals can run in excess of $20 to $25 per acre. Corn might be the crop for particularly weedy fields because very effective broad spectrum herbicides are available at relatively low cost.

Analysis Shows Disaster Real In 3 Counties

items of $135,194 and an increase in capital of $7,832 while Red Lake, Pennington and east Marshall counties had average sales of $110,387 and a net decrease in capital of $7,275. It was noted that in the 13-county area interest payments represented 12.9 per cent of total income while in the three-county area interest payments represented 18 per cent of total income.

Review of crops in the 13-county northwestern Minnesota area showed average yields of 48 bushels of barley, 26 bushels of wheat, 66 bushels of corn, 33 bushels of soybeans and 1,000 pounds of sunflowers. Only corn at $10 per acre and soybeans at $98 per acre showed a return over per acre costs. Sunflowers lost $11 per acre, wheat $2.90 per acre and barley 62 cents per acre.

In the three-county disaster area only soybeans with a 20 bushel per acre and $4 margin over costs showed a profit. Sunflowers at 700 pounds per acre lost $33.13, corn at 51 bushels lost $20.11, wheat at 21 bushels lost $13.38 and barley at 37 bushels lost $13.96.

It must be recognized that the number of farms represented in the study is a small percentage of the total farms in the area and that those farms may not be representative of the average of all farms. The comparison among counties should be sufficiently valid, however, to give a strong indication of the problems farmers are facing as a result of weather and financial conditions.

Further information on the past year's farming operations in the area served by the AVTI farm management program here will be provided when the annual report analysis meeting is held about a month from now.

RAISING HIS RIGHT hand, Dick McCloskey was sworn in as new postmaster of the Thief River Falls post office in ceremonies at the Best Western Inn on Wednesday afternoon. His wife Joanne, son Michael and daughter Marcy looked on as he took the oath of office from Duane Bellefuille, Fargo, ND., area manager for the postal service. McCloskey has been with the U.S. Postal Service since 1964, and transferred to Thief River Falls in 1969, from Flushing, NY. Bellefuille noted that selection of the new postmaster was a competitive process, with McCloskey selected from 1,500 candidates in North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Stumpf Favors More Tax Relief

State Senator LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer this week expressed his qualified support for the $357 million DFL tax cut plan outlined by the governor and majority legislative leaders last Monday (April 2), saying he believes property owners statewide should receive more tax relief, especially in view of the state's optimistic revenue projections for the rest of this biennium.

"In light of the news that the state now has over $900 million in total budget reserves for its use," Stumpf said, "I would argue strongly in favor of additional property tax relief for farmers in the plan. If we don't do something fast to aid our failing farm economy, there won't be any income left to tax anywhere anyway.

"Property tax relief, and aids to local governments, have been severely cut back by the past few legislatures as a result of budget problems," Stumpf added. "I believe the time is ripe to reinstate this level of relief and increase it if possible to make up for the inequitable tax and price squeeze farmers are caught in."

A major problem facing Minnesota farmers is the combination of rapidly-increasing property tax assessments, coupled with dropping farm values, which has led to increased production costs and decreased income, Stumpf explained. "It's time this rift was mended and this problem solved by the legislature."

Included in the $357 million tax cut plan offered on Monday was an annual, $15 million property tax relief package for agricultural property, which would include:

+ A lifting of the agricultural mill credit limit (from $2,000-$4,000);

+ Increasing the agricultural credit rates, from 29 per cent to 31 per cent on the first 320 acres and from 13 per cent to 14 per cent on the second 320 acres, while maintaining the current 10 per cent relief level over this amount;

+ Removing the $200 target limit for farmers;

+ Reinstating the 50 per cent portion of lost local government aids to townships; and

+ Providing local government property tax refunds to railroads due to a court ruling.

"Of all the taxes paid at the local level, the property tax is the most inequitable, and should be protected from unfair increases through sufficient state tax relief," Stumpf said. "While the property tax proposal is good news, it is insufficient and should be increased.

"The major problem we are facing statewide is rapidly-increasing property taxes, in agricultural classifications as well as some areas of homestead taxes," Stumpf added. "While this plan recognizes that fact somewhat, I would like to see some more efforts made to providing additional property tax relief."

The tax plans currently being considered this session are in the respective House and Senate tax committees, and bills are expected to reach the floors of each house sometime this week, Stumpf said.

Say Defensive Driving Course Still Offered

National defensive driving course completes its twentieth year in April with a record of 13 million drivers trained nationally and 170,000 of them in Minnesota. Minnesota safety council has earned best performance training honors four times since the course was initiated.

The defensive driving course provides accident avoidance training for licensed drivers. National studies have shown that DDC-trained drivers have 32.9 per cent fewer accidents and 24.9 per cent fewer traffic violations than other drivers.

Training is available for private individuals as well as professional drivers. Studies have shown that motor vehicle accidents are responsible for 28 per cent of the job-related fatalities to employees in manufacturing, transportation, public utilities, mining, agriculture finance, insurance and real-estate industries, as well as the wholesale and retail trades.

Two courses are available; an eight-hour program and a four-hour refresher course. The multi-media classroom sessions include lecture, films and workbooks. Students are provided full opportunity for questions and related discussion. A self-study program for home use is also available.

Course information is available from the Minnesota Safety Council, 555 Wabasha Street, Suite 102, St. Paul Minnesota 55102. Telephone (612) 291-9150.

Says Minimum Pricing Bill Voted Down

Minimum pricing legislation died in the House agriculture committee Thursday, but State Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls says the issue may still be debated.

Sparby said the final bill voted on by committee members was much changed from the original minimum pricing concept, but he said many lawmakers felt the original bill would not accomplish the goal of paying farmers more for their goods, although it aimed to set prices for grain at 80 per cent parity.

"The Senate bill for 80 per cent of parity was amended in the House exports and marketing subcommittee to require all 50 states to pass similar laws before our's would go into effect," Sparby explained.

"The author of this amendment said he was not trying to kill the minimum pricing issue, but felt a more appropriate measure for the state to pass was one with a strong message to Congress that Minnesota has begun the fight for farmers," he said.

Sparby said the issue, which even splits farmers throughout the state, carries a strong proponent as well as a strong opponent argument. Those supporting the legislation believe minimum pricing would guarantee farmers a fair income for their labor and prevent small farm families from going broke.

But opponents of minimum pricing recall the declining power of OPEC which has lost much of its market with strict oil pricing. Those against the bill, including state agriculture commissioner Jim Nichols, said Minnesota cannot afford to lose its share of the world market for farm products.

The state now sells 50 per cent of its wheat to foreign countries.

"I supported the minimum pricing legislation and the amended version because I do not want to see any more of my neighbors who are farmers go out of business," Sparby said.

"But I also recognize what a politically volatile issue this has become — the United States government uses farm goods as a negotiating tool in foreign relations and the state ag industry is dependent on a certain market — so we must be cautious on this issue and take all factors into consideration as debate continues on minimum pricing."

"But that does not mean we should avoid passing a minimum pricing bill in Minnesota because, at the very least, we need to send a message that we are not fooling around on this issue, and we are not waiting any longer for the President and Congress to take the lead," Sparby concluded.

MN Crops Lead Upturn In Farm Price Index

Mid-March index of prices received by Minnesota farmers at 141 was up one per cent from February and eight per cent above the index a year ago, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service. Crop prices were higher except for oats, barley and hay.

Prices were down for all hogs, lambs, all milk and eggs. Turkey prices were steady while other livestock prices were higher. Prices received by farmers for all milk were the lowest since August of 1980.

The crops index rose four per cent to 145 during the month and was 22 per cent above the index a year ago. The mid-March prices and the changes from last month are: All wheat, $3.75 per bushel, up three cents from the revised February estimate; corn, $3.07 per bushel, up 15 cents; oats, $1.66 per bushel, down two cents; barley, $2.32 per bushel, down five cents; soybeans, $7.44 per bushel, up 40 cents; flaxseed, $7 per bushel, up 16 cents. Potatoes averaged $5.70 per hundredweight, for all grades, up 20 cents. All hay was down $1 per ton to $68; alfalfa hay, $72 per ton, was down $1; and other hay at $55 per ton was down $4. All sunflowers at $14.20 per hundredweight were up $1.30 from the revised February price. Dry edible beans were up 50 cents to $20.30 per hundredweight.

Meat animal index at 137 was one per cent above last month but five per cent below a year ago. All hogs at $44.70 per hundredweight were down $1.10 from a month earlier. Beef cattle averaged $51.40 per hundredweight, up $2.20. Calves were up 80 cents to $58 per hundredweight. Sheep brought $18.60 per hundredweight, up $2.70. Lambs were down $2.60 to $58.40 per hundredweight.

Dairy index fell one per cent during the month to 141. This was five per cent below the index last year. The preliminary milk price at $12.40 per hundredweight was down 16 cents from the revised February price.

The poultry and egg index at 131 was eight per cent below last month but 34 per cent above a year ago. Turkeys were unchanged from a month earlier at 40 cents per pound liveweight. Table market eggs brought 65 cents per dozen for all grades in mid-March, down 15 cents from mid-February but 21 cents above a year earlier.

It Shouldn't Require Law

It's too bad that common sense has become such an uncommon commodity in government that Sen. Rudy Boschwitz has had to introduce legislation to restore it. We refer to the spare parts procurement legislation which Boschwitz has joined with three other senators to introduce.

Republicans Mark Andrews of North Dakota and Charles Grassley of Iowa, Democrat Ted Kennedy of Massachusetts and Boschwitz introduced the bill that would make contracts for spare parts supplied to the defense department more available to small business and therefore more competitive. It is estimated the plan could save the government $4 billion annually.

Boschwitz points out that there is a need for the law because lack of competition causes the defense department to pay unnecessarily high prices for spare parts that are available from more than one source. He says that the department spends about $13 billion annually for spare parts but that 80 per cent of the purchases are not done on a competitive basis.

That is why, the senator says, the department pays such prices as $400 for a ordinary claw hammer, $440 for a plastic knob worth about $5, $94 for a rubber door gasket worth about $6, $428 for a $13 eye bolt and $153 for a piece of bent sheetmetal with three holes drilled in it.

It is obviously a situation that has gotten completely out of hand. There seems to be no reason — other than graft in the form of kickbacks or other bribery — that government couldn't operate on a basis somewhat akin to private business. No private industry would long tolerate such exorbitant costs.

Private business is not blameless itself, however, as it has been the perpetrator of the excessive prices charged to the government. Now its greed has become so insatiable that it has brought the need for corrective law. The law should be passed without delay and immediately and stringently enforced. But it's too bad our system and our people make such action necessary.

How Temporary?

While many Minnesota legislators are patting themselves on the back for increased revenues (tax receipts) and seeking some sort of credit for rolling back a 10 per cent surcharge on income taxes, the state's six per cent sales tax is being completely ignored.

In 1981 the state sales tax was four per cent, a rate that could be considered modest at this time. On July 1 of that year the legislature raised the rate "temporarily" to five per cent. Six months later the lawmakers made the five per cent temporary rate permanent and "temporarily" boosted it to six per cent — until June 30, 1983. Then at last year's session the legislature removed the expiration date of the "temporary" six per cent rate.

In two years' time, therefore, the state sales tax was increased by 50 per cent in rate alone and other changes were made to include items which had previously been exempt. Minnesota now ranks third highest in sales tax rate in the nation along with Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Mississippi.

Connecticut has the highest rate of 7.5 per cent but exempts purchases used in farming and manufacturing. Washington is second highest at a 6.5 per cent rate. All of the other states with a six per cent sales tax rate provide for exemptions or reduced rates for equipment and-or materials used or consumed in industry, farming or production. In Washington state, where there is no sales tax exemption, there is also no corporate nor personal income tax.

The Minnesota sales tax situation gives credence to the comparison: "As temporary as a permanent wave and as permanent as a temporary tax."

Now THAT'S Serious!

In this great and free country of ours, nobody thinks anything of it if someone publicly calls our elected officials crooks or tells the President to go suck an egg. That is called individual freedom.

Our government not only condones the practice of declaring bankruptcy and leaving creditors with financial losses, it increasingly makes it easier and even advantageous to do so. That is called public service.

Our judicial system routinely turns convicted criminals out on the streets to prey upon new victims, or permits mobsters to hide behind manipulations by shyster lawyers and stay out of jail. That is called due process.

Our government bureaucracy acknowledges fraud in the welfare and gross inadequancy in dealing with horrendously excessive costs in defense purchasing. That is called working within the system.

Our congress and administration permit a hard working and efficient farm population to live on the very edge of our national scale of existance while they produce our most vital food and fiber. That is called consumer protection.

Our governmental departments continue to expand and expend and our elected officials continue to agree and to tax. That is called fiscal responsibility.

But if a private citizen elects to protest against taxes by not paying them, now THAT'S serious! The revenue departments, the legislative bodies, the administrative agencies, the courts — all agree that such action constitutes fraud and is a punishable offense. In Minnesota, persons who refuse to file tax returns are held in contempt of court and can be confined to jail "until those returns are filed".

The message is clear. We as a people and a government will tolerate a lot of injustices and allow a lot of abuse in the name of freedom. But don't play games with the government's self-appropriated money. That's a serious offense.

Comparative Taxes

Following release was provided by Minnesota Proposition 180°:

Several years ago, Minnesotans were cheering for California when they passed Proposition 13 and drastically cut their taxes. Today, many people think that California taxes are extremely high — and they are — but according to former state Senator, Marion (Mike) Menning, now Chairman of the Board of Minnesota Proposition 180°, "Minnesotans are paying an average of 250 per cent more per person than Californians are in overall state taxes."

Menning went on to explain that he has just returned from a trip to California, where he met with members of the governor's staff and individuals like Howard Jarvis, the father of California's proposition 13. Menning explained, "Individuals in the Thief River Falls area are paying approximately 250 per cent more in state taxes than individuals living in the California area."

Minnesota Proposition 180° is an organization which is keeping an eye on what is going on in Minnesota taxes and the general jobs and business claimate. According to Proposition 180 spokesman, chairman of the board Mike Menning, the California state budget now is $26 billion, while their population is 26 million. Minnesota has a state budget of $10 billion, with a population of approximately four million.

The Minnesota legislature is also considering several taxes, which include a new tire tax and a new garbage tax. Therefore, anyone purchasing new tires would pay an additional tax, and anyone using a garbage service would also eventually be paying a new garbage tax.

Chairman Menning stated that we are now among the highest in state income tax, corporate tax, sales tax, gas tax, and soon will be one of the highest in property taxes.

Menning went on to say, "Now that 3M has announced its 23rd expansion outside the state of Minnesota in the past several years, and Honeywell has had 37 major expansions outside the state of Minnesota in the past several years, those who control the legislature still are not willing to believe that people are losing their jobs in this state, and that this state must get its act together and make a 180° turn."

Menning said, "I believe it is time that the people in this state stand up and be counted and begin flexing their muscles against those who have controlled the Minnesota state legislature for the past decade."

Borrowed Nonsense:

"I never eat any food with additives or preservatives," the health food faddist declared, "or fruit that has been sprayed, or vegetables raised with chemical fertilizers, or beef fattened on chemical feed."

"So how have you been feeling?" a friend inquired.

"Hungry," the faddist replied.

"How many miles to the gallon do you get with your new car?"

"I get about seven; my son gets the other 12."

At one time the perfect gift for a girl on her 18th birthday was a compact. The same is true today if the compact has four wheels.

Washington Report

Sen. Dave Durenberger

One of the reasons Minnesota is such a fine place to live is that we provide the best health care in the country. We serve as a model not only for other states, but for other countries as well. Representatives from England, France, Sweden and Australia have come to Minnesota to see just how we do it.

How did we develop this worldwide reputation? In part, we did it through the strong network of community hospitals that have been built across Minnesota. These hospitals have achieved their excellence through years of hard work and community support. It is important that we recognize and strengthen the role of Minnesota's community hospitals, now and in the future.

However, these are difficult times for American medicine. Health care costs continue to rise. Medicare — our federal program of health care for the elderly — is in serious financial trouble. Even if every cent of President Reagan's proposed Medicare savings is accepted by Congress, the cost of Medicare will double between 1983 and 1989 — from $52.6 billion to more than $108 billion. It's no wonder that most experts predict the bankruptcy of Medicare by the end of the decade unless Congress acts now to reform our health care system.

Change is necessary. In order to guarantee the high quality care we've grown accustomed to, we must get a handle on the costs. Over the last three years Congress has responded by trimming $20 billion from the Medicare program. These spending reductions have been shared by hospitals, physicians and beneficiaries.

In 1983, Congress passed a major reform in the Medicare program. Hospitals will now be paid by Medicare prospectively, on the basis of predetermined prices. This prospective payment system is now in its sixth month of a three-year phase-in. This phased-in approach was designed so that problems could be identified and worked out before complete implementation of DRGs in year four.

DRGs are designed to make all hospitals operate more efficiently. But reform shouldn't put special burdens on one hospital over another. Unfortunately, some hospitals have been caught in a squeeze between the small rural hospitals and the large metropolitan area hospitals.

That's unfair and I intend to change the system to recognize the valuable regional service your hospital provides. I am working with the Reagan Administration and members of Congress to accomplish just that.

Change is always difficult. But I've heard from physicians as well as hospital administrators that the DRG system is working. As chairman of the Senate health subcommittee, I am committed to resolving the problems, building a strong prospective payment system, and strengthening community hospitals.

Of course, hospitals are only one part of the health care delivery system. We can't — and we won't — put the whole burden of health care reform on hospitals. Physicians, nurses, other health professionals, and yes, even patients must be involved. Together we can make our health care system more efficient and more affordable.

It will take time, but we are on the right road.

Bergland Airs Proposal With Farmers Union

Former agriculture secretary Bob Bergland brought the fight for rural electric cooperative financing to the convention hall of the National Farmers Union recently, as he warned the agricultural producers gathered there, "There is a high risk that the lights may go out on rural citizens."

Bergland will assume the position in early April of general manager of the National Rural Electric cooperative association (NRECA), an organization embroiled in a tough congressional battle for passage of legislation to assure continued financing of rural power and telephone co-ops.

House of Representatives recently passed an NRECA-backed bill to allow the rural co-ops to repay $7.9 billion in outstanding loans into a revolving fund, rather than to the federal treasury. The bill would also increase the interest rate of Rural Electric administration loans to about 6.25 per cent from the current level of five per cent.

Bergland said at a news conference preceding his speech to the Farmers Union that he expects a fierce battle for passage in the Senate. President Reagan has promised to veto the measure if it reaches his desk.

"They (the administration) have stonewalled on this matter. They have taken a very dogmatic and inflexible view of this legislation," Bergland said.

NRECA manager-designate said he was enlisting support from all possible sectors in rural America to win passage of the legislation.

"I have come to the Farmers Union today to get their help."

Farmers Union delegates at the New Orleans convention earlier endorsed a policy statement supporting the NRECA-backed legislation. Lobbyists for the Farmers Union have also been working for passage of the bill in Washington, D.C.

Another theme carried by Bergland to the Farmers Union convention echoed with overtones of the extensive study of farm structure he conducted while secretary of agriculture.

Calling the current farm program a "dead duck," Bergland said, "I believe there has come a time to change the direction of farm programs."

He noted that the 25,000 largest farms have average net incomes of $572,000 annually, and average net worths of $2.65 million. Yet those farmers reap the "lion's share" of the farm program harvest.

"Frankly, I don't see any reason to continue subsidizing that type of agriculture."

Conversely, the large number of very small farms neither receive, nor need, federal farm program benefits.

"The real group that is in trouble is that group in between. It is that one-half million family farms that are really under stress and really vulnerable," he said.

He suggested that future federal farm policy must be targeted to supporting moderate-sized farms, adding, "There is a hope that we can export our way to prosperity. That, in my view, is more of a wish than a reality."

Six District Directors Are Announced

Six district directors have been named for the new field operations division of the Minnesota department of economic security, Commissioner Barbara Beerhalter has announced.

New directors, their districts and headquarters are: Don Murphy, East Metro, St. Paul; Mary Groeschner, West Metro, Minneapolis; Dale Heimermann, Central and Southwest, St. Cloud; Mary Brunkow, Northwest, Alexandria; Roy Skramstad, Northeast, Hibbing; and George Chase, Southeast, Mankato.

"They will direct the local employment, training and unemployment programs of the department that formerly were operated by three separate divisions," Beerhalter said.

"The intent of the original legislation that created the department of economic security was to consolidate service delivery," Beerhalter said. "This new division carries out the intent and will improve services to our clients — both job seekers and employers."

District directors will report to Field Operations Assistant Commissioner Amos Haynes.

Murphy has been acting East Metro field operations director since last fall and comes to the new division from the department's unemployment insurance division.

Groeschner, Heimermann, Skramstad and Chase have been managers or directors in the former Job Service division of the department. Brunkow has been a district manager in the greater Minnesota Job Training programs at Winona.

Surtax Repeal Approved By Tax Committee

A bill to repeal the 10 per cent surtax retroactive to Jan. 1, 1984 was passed unanimously by the House tax committee and will be incorporated into the 1984 omnibus tax bill, State Representative Wally Sparby reported today.

"The surtax was a temporary tax necessitated by the state budget crunch," Rep. Sparby said. "It was due to expire next year, but now that we have turned things around earlier than expected, Minnesota taxpayers deserve to share in the state's good fortune by receiving a substantial tax cut. The tax savings statewide will amount to around $320 million."

The full Legislature will be acting on the omnibus tax bill within the next couple of weeks. Sparby noted that passage of a surtax repeal is virtually assured because the governor, the House and the Senate all agree that it should be eliminated. The exact date of repeal is not as certain, since the governor and the Senate up until now have favored a July 1, 1984 repeal.

The tax committee also passed a bill increasing the state reserve fund, which is set aside as a cushion against future economic reversals.

"I believe the state must practice good budget policies, and that includes keeping a sizeable 'rainy day' fund," Sparby said. "Look what happened during the last recession from which we are just recovering. State revenue went down and the state couldn't meet its commitments. With no reserve to fall back on, the only recourse was to cut programs and raise taxes — an option we shouldn't have to choose again if our reserve fund is adequate."

"However, current revenue projections have convinced me we will have the money to keep a reasonable reserve, repeal the surtax retroactively, and still have money to fund some property tax relief for individuals and small businesses," concluded Sparby. "We will know for sure when the finance department presents its next revenue forecast. The specifics of our budget and tax bills will be based on that."

Strong Dollar Contributes To Budget Deficit

by Walter W. Heller
U of M Economist

When economists speak of the lopsided recovery these days, the major laggard they have in mind is our export industries. They are taking a beating because the dollar is too strong, overvalued by perhaps 25 to 30 per cent relative to the German mark, the Japanese yen, the French franc, and so on. Why? Mostly because of our high interest rates associated with our mammoth budget deficit.

Just think, in 1980 a $10 U.S. product cost 18 marks. Today, it costs 27 marks. In francs, the dollar rose even more. That overvalued dollar acts just like a tariff on our exports and a subsidy on our imports.

No wonder foreigners shy away from American products at today's exchange rates. No wonder we exported only $30 billion of capital goods last year, less than half of what we would have exported if the trends of the '70s had continued. And no wonder our imports of consumer goods ballooned to over $50 billion last year, half again as much as forecast by the trends of the '70s. No wonder that we ran a trade deficit of $10 billion in February and expect a $100 billion-plus trade deficit for the year.

But for all that, the overvalued dollar is not the only cause. The snail's pace of economic recovery in the rest of the world also has a lot to do with it: How can the countries of Western Europe buy more of our goods when their recoveries are poking along at less than half the pace of ours? And how can Latin American countries, reeling under the burden of huge debts and many still in recession, step up imports from us?

To be sure, we cannot readily cure the problems of underinvestment and slow technological advance in the European Common Market — where unemployment still averages 11.5 per cent. Nor can we quickly lighten the crushing debt burden of the Third World.

What we can do— but have thus far refused to do — is to tackle those obscene deficits that keep our interest rates too high and the dollar too strong. That would open the way to easier money and faster growth in Europe and would ease the choking burden of debt in the Third World. The result? Brighter prospects, not just for U.S. export industries but for a sounder worldwide recovery.

The following resolution failed to pass by two votes at the March 20, 1984, DFL precinct caucus in Thief River Falls.

A RESOLUTION

WHEREAS: the automobile killings by drunken drivers on the highways and byways of our country are becoming a national problem, and,

WHEREAS: it appears increasingly likely that a federal law mandating a 21-year old drinking age could be passed by Congress; and,

WHEREAS: it is possible that referendums to increase the drinking age will be on the ballots of as many as eight or ten states this November; and,

WHEREAS: a bill, (H.R. 3870) has been reported out of committee and will soon move to the floor of the House of Representatives and a companion bill will be introduced into the Senate; and,

WHEREAS: Observers believe that (H.R. 3870) has a very strong chance of passage as it is a step in the right direction of a uniform 21-year drinking age in all 50 states. This law will aid law-enforcement authorities and cut drunken driving statistics on our highways; and,

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: that the 1st Ward Caucus, Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party, in caucus the 20th of March, 1984 supports the passage of (H.R. 3870).

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: that copies of this resolution be sent to all Minnesota congressmen in the congressional districts of the state of Minnesota.

Northland community college basketball coach Chet Engelman has averaged 15 wins per season in his 14 years as coach of the Northmen, according to school basketball record book that was recently published.

Since arriving at Northland for the 1970-71 season, Engelman has compiled a 212-118 won-lost record.

Twelve of his 14 Northland teams have had winning records, including a current string of 11 straight winning seasons. The Northmen were 3-19 in his first year here, then 13-12 the following season for their first winning record in the history of the sport at the school.

Northland slipped to 7-15 in 1972-73 before the program really took off with a 20-5 campaign in 1973-74 when the Northmen earned their first state tournament berth.

Best record the team has ever posted came in 1974-75 when they were ranked in the top ten nationally with a 24-1 mark. They haven't been able to duplicate that kind of success, but the Northmen have since won 19 games twice and 18 once. Fewest wins over the past 11 years was 13 in 1977-78 and again in 1981-82. They were 14-9 this year, which included a state tournament consolation championship.

There are lots of interesting facts in the school basketball record book. For example:

+ Single game individual scoring record — 46 points, shared by three players: Dale Hanson of Thief River Falls vs. Lake Region, 1972-73; David Dickey vs. NDSU-Bottineau, 1974-75; and Terry Harris vs. Brainerd, 1980-81.

+ Single game individual rebound record — 30 by Ralph Fitts vs. Vermilion in the 1974 state tournament.

+ Single game individual assists — 20 by Dickey vs. Hibbing, 1973-74.

+ Single game blocked shots — 8 by Burnie Stephens vs. UM-Waseca, 1973-74.

+ Career points — 1,440 by Harris, 1979-80, 80-81.

+ Career scoring average — 28.2 by Harris, 1979-80, 80-81.

+ Career rebounds — 716 by Tony Burke, 1970-71, 71-72.

+ Career assists — 513 by Dickey, 1973-74, 74-75.

+ Single season scoring average — 28.6 by Matt Fontes, 1982-83.

+ Single season points — 724 by Harris, 1979-80.

+ Single season assists — 319 by Dickey, 1973-74.

+ Single season blocked shots — 77 by Harris, 1979-80.

+ Most points single game by two teams — 243 (Northland 124, Hibbing 119, two overtimes), 1973-74.

+ Most points single game by Northland — 135 vs. St. Boniface, 1980-81.

+ Fewest points single game by an opponent — 35 by Itasca, 1982-83.

+ Most free throws single game by Northland — 44 for 63 vs. Hibbing, 1971-72.

+ Most rebounds single game by Northland — 81 vs. Hibbing, 1975-76.

+ Highest Northland single season scoring average — 100.9, 1974-75.

Harris' 1,440 points leads the Northland career scoring charts. Rest of the top five include Fontes with 1,100; Dickey with 1,073; Nick Neibauer with 843; and Kyle Ramsey, who finished his two-year Northland career this winter with 831 points.

Northland's record book also shows the Northmen are 23-16 vs. rival University of Minnesota-Crookston over the years and 22-16 vs. Brainerd, but only 12-27 vs. reigning Northwest Division champion Fergus Falls.

Against Northeast Division teams — results that count in Northland's Northwest Division standings — the Northmen are 14-1 vs. Rainy River; 20-10 vs. Itasca; 16-10 vs. Hibbing; 16-12 vs. Mesabi; and 12-14 vs. Vermilion.

Ramsey this year became Northland's tenth Minnesota Community College Conference (MCC-C) all-state selection. The first was Burke, a Bemidji product, in 1972. Then came Dickey in 1974 and 1975; Frank Ridley in 1975; Preston Curtis in 1976; Harris in 1980 and 1981; along with Fontes in 1982 and 1983.

Northland has also had ten all-region selections for the five-state area Region 13. Mike Neibauer, a Mentor graduate, was the first in 1968, followed by Tom Super in 1969; Burke in 1972; Dickey in 1974 and 1975 when he was also honored as the outstanding player in Region 13; Stephens in 1975; Curtis in 1976; Harris in 1980 and 1981; and Fontes in 1983, when he was named the outstanding forward in Region 13.

National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) All-American status has been given to Dickey in 1974 and 1975, and Fontes in 1983.

Weight Training Clinic Planned April 16 At LHS

Athletic department at Lincoln high school will sponsor a weight training clinic Monday, April 16, at 6:30 p.m. in the school auditorium.

All athletes in grades 8-12, and their parents, are urged to attend the clinic.

Kurt Mattison, a representative from the Bigger - Faster - Stronger weight training program, will head the clinic.

Cost of the clinic is $1 per person or $2 per family.

For additional information contact Lincoln athletic director Russ Smith, telephone 681-2700, extension 222.

Two TRF Races To Be Sponsored By Falls Clinic

Dr. Jim Langland of Internal Medicine Department at the Falls Clinic has announced that the clinic will sponsor two foot races in the city of Thief River Falls. The purpose of the races is to promote the theme "Health In The Long Run" and it is hoped the races will provide an incentive for individuals to begin or continue personal exercise programs.

Dr. Langland states that regular exercise has been shown to lead to a reduced heart attack rate, lower cholesterol levels, lower blood sugar content, lower blood pressure, improved sleep patterns and reduced stress. The motto "Health In The Long Run" has been chosen to reflect these benefits.

Races will take place on Saturday, May 5, starting at 9 a.m. There will be a 10-kilometer (6.1 mile) race and a two mile "fun run". Both races will begin at the main clinic entrance at First Street and LaBree Avenue, loop through the city, and return to finish at the clinic.

According to Dr. Langland, race director, special race T-shirts will be given to everyone completing either race. Trophies will be awarded to the first place male and female finisher in four age categories: 19 and under; 20-29; 30-39; over 40 in each race In addition, special awards will be given to any finisher in the 10-kilometer race who defeats the "Falls Clinic Rabbit", Dr. Richard Heinrichs, rumored to be the early favorite in the men's senior division (over 40).

Entry forms are available at the Falls Clinic, Northwestern Hospital Services, and TG Sporting Goods. Entry fee is $2. Further information may be obtained by contacting Dr. Jim Langland at the Falls Clinic.

Sports Boosters Resume Meet Dates Thursday

Thief River Falls Sports Boosters Club will resume its weekly 12-noon luncheon meeting schedule Thursday in the basement of the Rex Cafe.

Schedule of spring sports guest speakers will begin this week with Lincoln high school golf coaches Ruth Onkka (girls) and Jack Boyer (boys).

There will be no Sports Boosters Club meeting April 19 because of the Easter schedule, but the organization will hear from Northland community college baseball coach Chet Engelman and Northland softball coach Deb Jacobson on April 26; from Lincoln track coaches Tom Schafer (girls) and Tim Olson (boys) on May 3; and from both Lincoln baseball coach Charlie Cornell and Lincoln tennis coach Whitey Olson on May 10.

Softball Rules Meeting Is Set For Wed. Night

Slow pitch softball rules interpretation clinic will be held Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Room B20 at Northland community college.

All umpires must attend the clinic to be sanctioned by the ASA. Team managers are also urged to attend.

RLF Slow Pitch Tournament Is Set For April 29

Red Lake Falls Rabbits will sponsor a 16-team men's slow pitch softball tournament Sunday, April 29.

Entry fee is $50. Each team is guaranteed three games in the single-elimination, consolation bracket tournament.

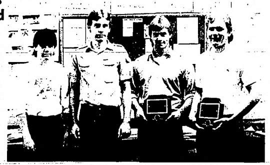
SPECIAL AWARD winners Thursday at the Lincoln high school hockey team banquet were, left to right, Bob Breiland, co-winner of the most improved player award; Bob Huot, co-winner of the most improved player award; Ryan Bakke, the Prowlers' most valuable player; Jim Geatz, co-winner of the most dedicated player award; and Rick Spong, co-winner of the most dedicated player award.



NEW AND OLD Lincoln high school hockey co-captains were recognized at the Prowlers' annual post-season team banquet Thursday. The group included, left to right, Bob Breiland and Steve Solheim, the newly-elected captains, along with Tim Bottem and Brian Johnston, who served as the Prowlers' 1983-84 captains.

Prowlers Open Tennis Season Indoors Today

Rain or shine, the Lincoln high school tennis team is scheduled to open its 1984 season today (Monday) indoors as the Prowlers join Crookston and Detroit Lakes for a 3:45 p.m. triangular at the Grand Forks Tennis Center.

A perennial contender in area, regional and state tennis circles under coach Whitey Olson over the years, the Prowlers find themselves short on experience this spring.

Junior Dan Imgrund and sophomore Al Erickson are the lone returning regulars on hand. Erickson already has two years of starting varsity experience behind him.

"They are both potentially good tennis players and will play with the best of them in northwestern Minnesota," described Olson. Imgrund and Erickson should win consistently for us, but right now it may be difficult for us to get that third point (to win under the five-point dual meet scoring system)."

There are no seniors on the team, and besides Imgrund, Jeff Vanyo is the only other junior on the ten-player squad. The sophomores on hand include Brian Bendickson, Scott Heinze, Jeff Lane, Brian Mathson, Dave Winjum and Erickson. They're joined by freshmen Chad Konickson and Trent Lemer.

"Overall, it's a good group of kids," noted Olson. "There's not a lot of experience, but by tournament time I think we'll be respectable."

Crookston looks like the team to beat in the area, mentioned Olson.

In addition to those vying for varsity playing time, the community-funded tennis program includes 15 participants at the Franklin middle school level who could provide the Prowlers with a strong tennis program in the future. Rick Engelstad is serving as coach at Franklin.

First four outings for the Prowlers this spring will be on the road. They will stage their home opener Thurs., April 26, with a triangular involving Moorhead and Mahnomen at 2 p.m.

Lincoln Girls Compete In Crookston Indoor

Lincoln high school girls opened their 1984 track season Friday by participating in a five-team indoor meet at the Winter Shows Building in Crookston.

Point-wise it wasn't a profitable day for the Prowlers, who trailed the field. Host Crookston ran away with the team title by collecting 79 points. Rest of the totals were close, as East Grand Forks scored 35 points, Bagley 34, Park Rapids 30 and Thief River Falls 27.

Despite the low point total, Thief River Falls coach Tom Schafer seemed satisfied with the Prowlers' opening meet performance.

"All-in-all, it was a good meet for us," reported Schafer, who said the Prowlers weren't worried so much about the point totals as they were about using the meet as a testing ground for a number of inexperienced performers. "We just wanted to see how our girls would do against each other," he mentioned.

There were a couple of highlights for the Prowlers. They collected their only win of the day in the 3,000-meter relay, where Paula Wilkens, Peggy Cruz, Cindy Kruta and Georgia Howard ran a 9:23, and they came up with a second place finish in the 1400-meter relay where Stacie Kruta, Howard, Cindy Kruta and Michelle Puetz ran a 3:51.8.

Puetz also received praise for a strong all-round effort in the sophomore's first-ever track meet as she placed in three individual events (high jump, 200 and 400-meter dashes), plus ran that anchor leg on the relay unit.

In the junior varsity portion of the meet, Park Rapids won with a 62-point total, followed by Crookston with 45, Thief River Falls 37, Bagley 37 and East Grand Forks 24.

It was just an eight-member Thief River Falls squad competing in the junior varsity events. Bobbi Thompson won the 200 and 400-meter dashes, then anchored the winning 1400-meter relay. Veronica Hamm was a winner in the 800-meter run.

Federal Waterfowl Areas Aided By DU

Vital U.S. waterfowl nesting areas will be protected and restored under a new agreement between the federal government and a private conservation organization, Ducks Unlimited, Inc.

Under the memorandum of understanding, Ducks Unlimited will fund projects to restore wetlands and increase waterfowl production on lands owned or leased by the Interior Department's (USDA) Forest Service. The agreement was signed March 14, 1984, at a ceremony in Washington, D.C., by Robert Jantzen, Director of the Fish and Wildlife Service, Robert F. Burford, Director of the Bureau of Lake Management, Max Peterson, Chief of the Forest Service, and Dale E. Whitesell, Executive Vice President of Ducks Unlimited.

"This agreement is probably the most ambitious cooperative public/and private effort to improve and develop wildlife habitat in U.S. conservation history," said Interior Secretary William Clark. "Through its generosity, Ducks Unlimited is enabling federal agencies to carry out important habitat improvement projects that will benefit waterfowl and other wildlife that depend on wetlands."

Ducks Unlimited has previously focused its habitat production activities in Canada, where most North American waterfowl nest, and in Mexico where many waterfowl winter. Since it was founded in 1937, Ducks Unlimited has raised $237 million and now maintains 3.2 million acres in Canada and 50,000 acres in Mexico, making it one of the largest private land conservation organizations in the world. The organization decided last year to expend its activities into the United States, and expects to spend up to $2 million on habitat improvement in the United States in 1984 and increasing amounts in subsequent years. The activities will involve cooperation with state agencies as well as the federal government and will be carried out principally in Alaska, Montana, the Dakotas and Minnesota, which together produce the vast majority of ducks and geese hatched in the United States.

Ducks Unlimited will review proposals from federal and state agencies for high priority habitat improvement projects that the agencies themselves cannot presently fund. Several projects are under consideration as Ducks Unlimited's first conservation projects in the United States:

Big Lake Complex, Montana: Located 35 miles northwest of Billings, this 10,000-acre area serves all manner of nesting waterfowl as well as endangered peregrine falcons, sandhill cranes and mule deer. The complex and much of its surrounding uplands are owned by the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Development plans call for a system of water control structures in the drainage system to improve nesting habitat for diving and dabbling ducks and Canada geese. Ducks Unlimited also plans to add numerous nesting islands to Big Lake to enhance waterfowl production.

Chippewa National Forest, Minnesota: Located in north central Minnesota, this 1.3 million-acre area serves as a nesting area for mallards, ring neck ducks, blue-winged teal, wigeon, wood duck and goldeneye. It is particularly valuable because many waterfowl nest there when their traditional prairie potholes were dry. The area also is habitat for bald eagles, whose survival depends upon wetland creatures.

Red Lake, South Dakota; Located just east of Chamberlain, the 3,600-acre area is owned by the South Dakota Game, Fish, and Parks Division and at one time was considered one of the best natural marshes for waterfowl production and staging in the prairie pothole region. The area's water table has dropped drastically in recent decades, causing the marsh to become overgrown and less suitable for waterfowl. Development will include pooling existing water and constructing nesting islands.

Rice Lake, North Dakota: Roughly 27 miles northeast of Bismarck, Rice Lake is leased to the North Dakota Game and Fish Commission. Large numbers of waterfowl nest there, including redheads and canvasbacks, and endangered whooping cranes have used Rice Lake during migration. The shallow marsh goes dry about one year of every five and holds little water about one year of every three. Water control structures and manmade islands funded by Ducks Unlimited will permit better management of water levels and improve nesting habitat.

Palmer Hay Flats, Alaska: Located about 20 miles northeast of Anchorage, this 30,000-acre area is owned by the Alaska Fish and Game Department. It is one of two U.S. nesting sites for the tule white-fronted goose and is an important staging area for trumpeter swans.

"Efforts like these to restore and manage wetlands already protected by government agencies are even more important today, when nearly half a million acres of wetlands — including important waterfowl habitat areas — are being destroyed in the United States every year," Clark concluded.

Chet Engelman, who has directed the Northland community college basketball team to nine state tournament appearances over the past 11 years, including a current string of six straight state meet trips, faces a formidable task if the Northmen are to continue that post-season success next year.

Despite a shortage of bodies, Northland's eight-player squad still posted a 14-9 record this past winter, which included a tie for second in the Northwest Division and a consolation championship finish at the 1984 Minnesota Community College Conference (MCCC) state tournament.

To makes things difficult for 1984-85, six of those eight players used up their sophomore year of eligibility this season. And the only two freshmen on the roster — 5-7 guard Dan Glanagan and 6-3 forward Pat Burke — while providing sometimes key contributions when called upon, nevertheless carried the lowest scoring averages on the team at 5.1 and 4.6 points per game, respectively.

"We have a lot of people to replace," admitted Engelman, who just completed his 14th season as Northland basketball coach. "We need to recruit a bunch of people. I don't know when we've had fewer returnees."

Still, Engelman is optimistic that the openings can be filled. Flanagan and Burke are good players, he said, who should have very strong sophomore seasons, and there are three other "recruits" already in school. Two of them — Ricky Setts and Rickey Sims — had planned to play this winter but didn't because of academic problems. They remained in school, however, and plan to give it another shot in 1984-85.

A third on-campus candidate is Jerome Prewitt, a 5-8 product of Inkster, Mich. who could be an outstanding point guard, according to Engelman. He didn't arrive in Thief River Falls for the 1983-84 school year until December, and instead of rushing into the basketball season while trying to also fit into new surroundings, he sat out the schedule and will have two years of eligibility remaining.

Engelman expects to try to fill our next year's roster with a dozen freshmen, both from northwestern Minnesota and out-state. "There are some kids in the neighborhood we think can help us," he said. But lack of size among the area seniors presents a recruiting problem, he acknowledged.

While the 1983-84 season produced Northland's 11th straight winning record, plus the school's first state tournament consolation trophy, it still wasn't quite as good as Engelman had hoped for, he hinted.

"You always wish you could have won more," said Engelman, "but all-in-all, with the number of kids we had to work with, it was an interesting year. And we ended it on a very positive note."

Northland was 11-6 overall and 5-2 in the Northwest Division standings before a late-season slump produced three straight divisional losses and appeared to knock the Northmen out of state tournament contention. However, a turn of events in the final regular season games, which included a key 60-57 Northland win over rival University of Minnesota-Crookston, enabled the Northmen to gain a second place tie with UMC and Brainerd behind Northwest Division winner Fergus Falls.

And when Northland won a coin flip to gain a state tournament berth, the Northmen made the most of their unexpected state tournament opportunity. They shot poorly in a disappointing 80-64 opening round loss to Worthington, but bounced back to play well, and have fun, said Engelman, in consolation round wins over Itasca 102-90 and Rochester 91-83.

An ankle injury suffered by Kyle Ramsey was one of the biggest reasons for that late-season slump. He led the team in scoring with a 22-point average and was the team leader in field goal percentage (54.8), free throw percentage (83.6) and recoveries (81). His efforts netted the 6-4½ forward from Milwaukee MCCC all-division, all-state and all-state tournament honors.

Behind Ramsey was a balanced Northland attack as Shorty Johnson averaged 12.7 points per game, Rodney Scales 12.5, Jon Neumann 11.1 and Kevin Sanders 7.3. Scales, a 6-7 first-year sophomore at Northland from Inkster, led the team with 318 rebounds and 47 blocked shots. Johnson, a 6-4½ forward from Kenai, Alaska, grabbed 245 rebounds and Neumann, a 6-4½ forward from Middle River, had 204 after transferring here this winter from Lake Region.

Johnson joined Ramsey on the all-division team and was an all-state honorable mention pick. Scales joined Ramsey on the all-state tournament team.

Regular season Northland wins this winter were posted over Briercrest of Saskatchewan 109-88; Sheridan of Toronto 102-81; Red River of Winnipeg 101-64 and 110-47; Willmar 83-76; Bemidji State junior varsity 66-61; Itasca 82-77; Hibbing 96-66; Mesabi 94-87; Rainy River 86-65; Brainerd 92-74; and UMC 60-57.

Losses came at the hands of the Grand Forks Air Force Base 74-73 in the championship game of the season-opening Red River invitational; Bemidji State junior varsity 69-53; Minneapolis 72-58 in the championship game of the Minneapolis community college invitational; Vermilion 58-52; Fergus Falls 97-73 and 82-76; UMC 78-71; and Brainerd 102-86.

A STUDY funded by the nongame wildlife program of the Department of Natural Resources has shown that 61 per cent of all households in north-central Minnesota feed birds.

Feeding Birds Is Popular Pasttime

Winter of 1983-84 was a harsh one for wildlife, and the interest in bird feeding this winter was as popular as ever.

Bird feeding is estimated to be a $170 million business annually. A study funded by the nongame wildlife program of the Department of Natural Resources has shown that 61 per cent of all house-holds in north-central Minnesota feed birds. This percentage most certainly varies throughout the state, but the study indicates that bird feeding is very popular.

Artificial feeding stations provide a dependable source of food, especially during blizzards and deep snow. Thirty to 40 species of birds can be seen in Minnesota in the winter, and feeding provides continuing entertainment to people as colorful birds perform their antics at a feeder.

There are certain procedures that can increase your chances of attracting birds to your feeder:

+ Begin feeding early in the fall (mid-September) and feed regularly until mid-April.

+ For greater bird diversity, provide several feeding stations, with different types of feed.

+ Insect eaters such as Downy and Hairy Woodpeckers, and White-breasted Nuthatches prefer foods high in fat, such as suet. Suet can be placed in a mesh bag and hung from a branch or post.

+ Sunflower seed is the best all around bird food and attracts such species as Black-capped Chicadees, Evening Grosbeaks, Redpolls and Bluejays.

+ Other food can be used to attract addtional species of wildlife. Corn is popular with squirrels, pheasants and house sparrows.

+ Thistle seed (non-weed type) is attractive to Redpolls, Purple Finches, Goldfinches and Pine Siskins.

+ Be sure your feeding platform is not readily accessible to predators (house cats).

+ Feeders can be made "squirrel proof" by covering the pole with stove pipe material, or by hanging a garbage can lid with the center cut out, beneath the feeder.

Plan Benefit For Moorhead Hockey Player

A fund-raising effort is scheduled to start this week for Steve Dorsey, a Moorhead high school hockey player who suffered severe spinal damage to his nervous system in a December hockey game, resulting in paralysis.

Two Moorhead area resident, Gary Bergos and Mike Steen, will depart this week on a bike trip from Vail, Colorado, where they were employed during the winter skiing season, back to their home in Moorhead, a trip roughly estimated at 1,000 miles. Weather permitting, they will leave Vail Thursday and arrive in Moorhead by Easter.

They are asking sponsors to fund the venture on a per-mile, per-person basis, or with a lump sum donation. All money will be given to the Dorsey family, to be used toward's Steve's recovery and to help cover his parent's financial debts incurred because of the injury.

Checks should be made out to the Steve Dorsey Bike Benefit. Checks should be mailed to Oscar R. Bergos, 2617 16th Street So., Moorhead, MN 56560.

North Border Basketball Statistics Are Reported

John Oren of Baudette, the North Border Conference statistician, issued a final set of figures this week for each of the seven high school basketball teams in the league — Lake of the Woods, Marshall County Central, Roseau, Grygla, Middle River, Warroad and Badger.

Three of the teams — Marshall County Central, Grygla and Middle River — are included in The Times' coverage area, and their statistics are being used here.

Lake of the Woods, if you recall, won the 1983-84 North Border Conference title with a 10-1 record, followed by Marshall County Central at 8-1, Roseau 8-4, Grygla 4-6, Middle River 5-6, Warroad 3-8 and Badger 0-12. League standings are actually based on a points won-lost mark, though, and while Grygla and Middle River both finished 5-7 in that department, the Eagles beat out the Skippers for fourth place on the basis of head-to-head competition.

Overall, Lake of the Woods went 20-4 for the year, Marshall County Central 15-9, Roseau 15-7, Grygla 7-14, Middle River 8-13, Warroad 4-16 and Badger 0-16.

Lake of the Woods went on to win the District 32 tournament title, giving the North Border Conference its sixth district championship representative over the past eight years.

Joe Krouss, the Lake of the Woods star, was the leading scorer among conference players in all games with a 23.3 scoring average. Gregg Welin of Roseau was second on the scoring charts with a 16.5 average, followed by Kevin McKeever, Middle River, 14.6; Chris Runnels, Warroad, 14.5; Chad Swan, Marshall County Central, 14.0; Tony McLean, Grygla, 13.6; Tom Neumann, Middle River, 13.0; and Ken Krohn, Marshall County Central, 11.7.

Welin was the leading rebounder with 12.8 per game, finishing ahead of Krouss, the runner-up in that department with 12.4 per game.

Field goal accuracy department was also led by Welin, who was 156-for-245 for 64 per cent. Krouss was second, 252-for-416 for 61 per cent; Krohn, 105-for-198, and Randy Dahl, 47-for-89, of Marshall County Central shared third place with 53 per cent shooting, while Neumann was fifth, 104-for-218, 48 per cent.

Neumann was the leader in free throw accuracy, 65-for-92, 71 per cent, while Lake of the Woods' Tim Omerza was second, 33-for-47, 70 per cent; and Swan was fourth, 42-for-64, 66 per cent.

With spring, comes the campers, and the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources Division of Parks and Recreation would like to remind you of the camping reservation procedures.

Campsite reservations at family campgrounds are available this summer for your convenience by the Division of Parks and Recreation at the following parks:

Crow Wing, 218-829-8022; Father Hennepin, 612-676-8763; Gooseberry Falls, 218-834-3787; Helmer Myre, 507-373-5084; Itasca, 218-266-3655; Jay Cooke, 218-384-4610; Lake Bemidji, 218-755-3843; Lake Carlos, 612-852-7200; St. Croix, 612-384-6657; Savanna Portage, 218-426-3271; Sibley, 612-354-2055; Whitewater, 507-932-3007; Wild River, 612-583-2125; William O'Brien, 612-433-2421.

Reservations may be made by phone or in person. Reservations will be taken only at the park for which the reservation is requested. A campsite may be reserved for one or more nights, except that a campsite must be reserved and occupied both Friday and Saturday nights.

Each park has set aside approximately 50 per cent of its campsites for reservations. Reservations cannot be made more than 15 calendar days prior to your date of arrival. Campsites may be reserved from Memorial Day weekend through Labor Day for a maximum of 14 nights.

Fifteen calendar days prior to the Friday of Memorial Day weekend park personnel will take reservations from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. A campsite reservation will be held until 8 p.m. of the day of arrival. Visitors must call to hold their reservation after 8 p.m. If a visitor arrives after 8 p.m. and has not been granted an extension of time as stated, the campsite may have been rented on a first come, first serve basis.

Only one campsite can be reserved by a camping party. Park staff will select the campsite for each party. Specific sites cannot be guaranteed. A fee of $3 is charged for each reservation, (this does not apply towards the camping fee), to be paid upon arrival along with appropriate camping fees. Reservation fees cannot be refunded.

If you cannot honor your reservation, notify the park staff so your campsite can be made available to others.

Area Band Won Country Music Talent Contest

Continuing their winning ways in country music competition, the "Back Behind The Barn Boys" from Gatzke took the first place trophy and a $500 cash prize in the Wrangler Country Star Search at Meadowbrook Ballroom in Middle River on March 25.

In winning the contest, the "Boys" earned the chance to go on to state competition in August, which will be held at the Benton county fair in Sauk Rapids. Winners of 16 local competitions, similar to the one held in Middle River, will compete there for a 1,000 cash prize, use of a Dodge van for one year, and an all-expense-paid trip to the national competition in Nashville, TN. Winners of the national competition will receive $50,000, a recording contract, and the title to a new van.

With the exception of two new members added in the past year (drummer Mike Semanko of Thief River Falls and bass guitar player Perry Stellow of Rapid City, SD), all of the members of the band are from the Grygla-Gatzke area. They are Terry Ruud, lead singer and guitar; Mike Sistad, banjo, fiddle and mandolin; Gene Lunsetter, bass vocal and rhythm guitar; Tom Bernstein, tenor vocal; and Randy McMillan, keyboard.

Competing against 17 contestants, the Back Behind The Barn Boys won with an original song, "Come On Sunday Morning" and "Take Me To The River." Second place went to the Sheyenne River Band of Fargo, ND, who won the North Dakota state contest last year; with third place going to Southbound 76, of Brainerd, who won the Minnesota state contest last year. Duck Soup of Thief River Falls won fourth place, and fifth was taken by Swamp Hollow from Baudette.

No strangers to the "Star Search" competition, the Back Behind the Barn Boys won the Middle River competition in 1982, and went on to win the state contest in Cloquet, earning $1,000 and a trip to Nashville. In 1983, (because it fit their schedule) the boys entered competition in North Dakota, winning the regional contest at Grand Forks, and placing second in the state.

Having known each other all their lives, the band has been performing professionally for three years, and have been doing it full time for the past year. In that short career they have opened for stars such as John Conlee, Tom T. Hall and Cedar Creek, and notified that they will open for Janie Frikie at Grand Forks, ND in June.

Booked until August, the band has been playing mostly six-night stands in Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota, and recently returned from a tour in the Calgary and Edmonton areas in Alberta, Canada.

They do nearly all of their traveling on Sundays, in a 1954 GMC bus, affectionately known as "The Whale," taking turns behind the wheel. In fact, in order to enter the Middle River Contest at 4 p.m. Sunday, they had to leave Rapid Rity, SD at 3 a.m. and drive all day. Apparently, it didn't hurt their musical ability. If it did, the fans and judges didn't notice.

U.S. attorney James M. Rosenbaum said according to the indictment that Weekley reported joint tax table income of $17,217 and paid taxes of $147 for the two years when he knew the income and taxes he and his wife had were "substantially in excess" of those figures.

Rosenbaum said if Weekley is convicted on the charges he faces a maximum sentence of five years in jail and a fine of $10,000 for each count.

VA Increases Home Loan Interest Rates

Veterans administration increased its home loan interest rate from 12½ per cent to 13 per cent on March 219 The last change in the interest rate was on November 1, 1983, when it was reduced to 12½ per cent.

Administrator of veterans affairs Harry N. Walters said the new rate was made necessary by current mortgage market conditions. It is the first such action taken by the VA since the law was changed last year eliminating the authority of the secretary of housing and urban development to establish the maximum interest rate for most federal housing administration loans.

VA action also increased by one-half per cent, to 13¼ per cent, for graduated payment mortgages, 15 per cent for manufactured housing loans and 14½ per cent for manufactured housing lots, combination manufactured home and lot loans, and home improvement loans.

Walters said the rate change does not affect existing loans, whose interest rate remains the same for the life of the agreement.

VA home loans can be used to purchase, construct, alter, improve, repair or refinance a home. This includes the purchase of condominiums and mobile homes, with or without a lot, he said.

Germany Trip Made By Four From Lincoln

by Dave Berg
Times Reporter

Mrs. Paivi Young, German language instructor at Lincoln high school, recently traveled with three of her students — Melody Cooke, senior; Kim Carlson, sophomore; and Marni Johnsen, sophomore — on an I.S.E. (Intercultural Student Experiences) trip to West Germany.

Leaving from Minneapolis on March 15, the group flew via Chicago to Luxembourg, traveling from there to Germany by bus. During their trip, the students were assigned to buses containing 45 to 50 participants, including three leaders.

In addition to travel during the 15-day program, each of the students spent six days staying with a German family, giving them an opportunity to view European life from a unique perspective, as well as the chance to make lifelong friends.

Some of the cities visited by Mrs. Young and her students included: Munich, Fussen, Rothenburg, Unna, Trier, Garmisch - Partenkischen, Oberammergau, Augsburg, Stuttgart, Dortmund, Wurzburg, Frankfurt, Bonn, Koln and Hagen.

Among the famous landmarks visited were: the Olympic village, Hofbrauhaus, Theatiner church, Frauen-Kirche cathedral, Glockenspiel, St. Michael's church, Bavarian national museum, Marienplatz and English Gardens, all in Munich; Dachau concentration camp, Royal Castle Linderhof in the Upper Bavarian Graswang Valley at the foot of the Ammerberge, Castle Neuschwanstein of King Ludwig II, the Monastery church of Ettal, the criminal museum in Rothenburg, and The Wies, a place of religious pilgrimage near Steingaden, Upper Bavaria.

I.S.E. is a non-profit educational organization designed by foreign language teachers and chartered through the Minnesota secretary of state's office. It provides foreign language students and teachers with an opportunity to travel and live abroad at minimal cost.

Charge for the spring trip to Germany was $1,095 per student, and included round-trip air fare to Europe, all accommodations while abroad, all chartered bus transportation among cities visited, the stay with the foriegn family, meals during the family stay, all breakfasts, all transfers, preparatory materials before departure, ISE membership, insurance (medical and air fare indemnity), and teacher leadership.

All high school foreign language students who are enrolled in at least their second year of French, German or Spanish are eligible to participate in the ISE program, and Mrs. Young reports that about 10 students have already expressed an interest in traveling to Germany with her next year.

GERMAN STUDIES students from Lincoln high school were among a group recognized for their work recently during German Scholars Days, sponsored by the International Language Villages and the department of German at Concordia College, Moorhead. They included: (left to right) Dana Torkelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Torkelson; Melody Cooke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cooke; Karla Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harlow Johnson; and Kirsten Pollick, daughter of Alyce Pollick, all of Thief River Falls. All four are students of Mrs. Paivi Young at Lincoln.

Solo and small group competition for vocalists and string instrumantalists in Region 8AA will be conducted in Thief River Falls Tuesday. Students from Detroit Lakes, Fergus Falls, Park Rapids, Moorhead and Bemidji will join about 20 from Thief River Falls in the competition.

LONG BEAUTY REST didn't do much good for this woodchuck, a resident of the Agassiz national wildlife refuge northeast of Holt. Had this groundhog attempted to look for his shadow on February 2 as tradition suggests, he would have had to tunnel out through snow and ice. As it is, he still looks a little drowsy and disheveled from his hibernation. Warm spring days will soon provide the green vegetation woodchucks prefer in storing up fat for another winter's sleep.

Council Hears Questions On Street Improvements

Thief River Falls city council heard a number of questions regarding the details of an $840,000 street and utilities improvement project scheduled for this summer, but received little outright opposition from approximately 40 property owners who attended a hearing last night in city auditorium.

In other business conducted during the regular council meeting (held before and after the hearing), the council set a special meeting for 5 p.m. Friday, April 13, to consider issuance of an intoxicating liquor license for the Magic Dragon restaurant; requested a hearing from the Minnesota department of natural resources, regarding dredging of a boat channel in the Kingsbury Park addition; and established a hearing for 7:30 p.m. May 8, to consider a request for vacation of Fourth Street, between Davis Avenue and Red Lake Boulevard.

Street improvement project hearing began at about 8 p.m. with approximately 40 people present, in addition to the council. Mayor Bob Carlson introduced the subject, noting that council would take no action that evening, since three members of the governing body were absent. Aldermen Bill Penning and Clayton Restad were said to be out of town, and Alderman Ambrose Wysoski is recovering from extensive surgery.

Carlson stated that he hoped they wouldn't see a repeat performance of the hearing held about a year ago, which had caused council to "back off" a similar street improvement project, due to objections raised by property owners who would have been assessed for the project. "A year has gone by and the condition of those streets is not any better," he said. "And they continue to deteriorate."

Carlson expressed hope that changes which had been made in the method of assessment for sewer and water repairs and replacement would reduce the amount of assessments to a level which was more tolerable to the property owners. "No one likes assessments," he said, "but we feel the condition of our streets will not allow us to put this project off further."

In contrast to that hearing a year ago, the audience appeared to be mostly concerned about individual areas of the project, asking whether low areas on their streets would be corrected, or whether leaking water mains would be replaced. Others asked about replacement of curbs, widening of streets and placement of sidewalks.

Concern was expressed by residents along Spruce Avenue and other state aid

Badger Team Rallies For First Knowledge Bowl Title

Badger took advantage of a narrow third place finish in qualifying rounds to rally for a championship victory in the regional Knowledge Bowl competition conducted Monday at the Middle River school. Thirty-nine teams from 16 District 32 schools and seven other entries competed in the regional event organized by Maxine Penas, instructor at Middle River.

Blackduck teams fared well in the qualifying rounds, with one team finishing first with 146 points and another a close fourth with 118 points. Greenbush was second in the qualifying rounds with 132 points, including the highest score in the written round with 46 correct answers to the 60 questions asked. Badger finished the qualifying round with 119 points — only one ahead of the second Blackduck team.

In the finals, however, Badger made its surge late in the 60-question championship round to gain a two-point victory. The team composed of Allan Wierschke, Todd Erickson, Linda Heggedal and Jeff Dostal compiled 17 points. Greenbush team of Kim Churchill, Jerry Walsh, Lisa Branden and Jon Sovde had 15 points for second place while the Blackduck team of Todd Bolton, Dennis Thireult, Steve Sonnek and Chris Pfeifer finished third with 14 points.

All of the top three teams will advance to state competition to be conducted on Tuesday, May 1, at Cragun's Resort near Brainerd. There they will be among 21 teams representing seven Educational Cooperative Service Unit (ECSU) areas as they compete for the state championship.

At the first northwestern Minnesota regional competition in Middle River Monday, Mrs. Phil (Avis) Dyrud read the questions for the championship round. Judges determining whether or not answers given could be considered correct were Orville Janzen of Roseau and George Liapis of Marshall County Central of Newfolden.

Thirteen Valley Home Residents Note Birthdays

Thirteen residents at Valley Home, who observed their birthdays in March, were honor guests at the monthly birthday party held March 23 at the Home. All honorees were seated at a special table and each received a birthday card and a cash gift from the Home, as well as a card from the Catholic Daughters.

Residents honored and the date of their birthdays, were: Victoria Marynik, March 3; George Lindbeck, March 12; Olga Klungness, March 16; Odessie Vraa, March 19; Pearl Brenna, March 20; Clifford Lindquist, March 21; John Johnson, March 22; Sadie Geving, March 23; Florence Anderson and Lena Sjoberg, both March 24; Elmer Everson, March 25; and Caroline Strand and George Gagner, both March 26.

For the event, a special program was presented by a group from the Evangelical Free church in this city. They also brought angel food cakes which were served with cherry-nut ice cream provided by the Home.

Several of the birthday honorees had parties on their respective birthdays with their family and friends, or they noted their birthdays by serving special treats to the residents and staff. On March 16, Odessie Vraa, George Lindbeck, Sadie Geving and the activities co-ordinator Verna Rood, served homemade doughnuts and maple nut ice cream to the residents and staff.

Odessie Vraa's birthday was noted on Sunday, March 18, when a large group of relatives and friends brought a potluck dinner and birthday cake which they shared with her at the Home. Olga Klungness' birthday was celebrated at a private party at the Home with her sister and several friends.

Serving special treats on their birthdays were Pearl Brenna, whose family served cake, Clifford Lindquist, who served cake and ice cream; John Johnson, who served strawberry ice cream; and Lena Sjoberg and Caroline Strand, who served ice cream.

Three new residents were welcomed into Valley Home during the month of March. They were Mabel Lykken, Amanda Hinden and Hilda Peterson.

Special entertainment at the Home during the month included numerous programs, both devotional and secular. Among those providing entertainment were the Newfolden Strings of Praise; Naomi Anderson, who played the piano for a hymn sing; Bob Hornberg of Grand Rapids, who presented a piano recital; and the Happy Senior Citizen band.

A St. Patrick's day program was presented with the CAP students: Jenny Spencer, Kelly Barry and Dawn Engelstad, in charge. The program included a duet by Marie Anderson and Ella Overum, information about St. Patrick by the CAP students; a mouth organ solo by Carl Ryan, a reading by Olga Grothe; and the selections "My Wild Irish Rose," and "When Irish Eyes are Smiling," by the Valley Home and with the residents participating in a sing-along. The birthday of Verna Rood, the activities co-ordinator, was also observed. After the students presented her with a gift, everyone joining in singing the "Happy Birthday" song.

The OEA students at the local AVTI visited the Home and brought place cards featuring a green paper shamrock on a green gumdrop base.

The monthly bowling game with the Oakland Park Bowlers was held at Valley Home with the Valley Home team winning the game. Mabeline Furr and Hilda Johnson were top bowlers.

Devotional services were led by the Priests of St. Bernard's Catholic parish, who weekly offered Mass; Rev. Berton Hushagen of Trinity Lutheran, who served Communion the fourth Wednesday of the month; and Raynard Huglen and LeRoy Knutson of Newfolden with music provided by the Bennie Hanson girls;

Also Lester Brekke, Harvey Dyrud, Gary Ellingson, Rev. Charles Johnson of the Faith Lutheran Brethren church, together with Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Trochmann, Norris Trochmann and Laurie, Don Johnson, Dean Paskewitz and Phyllis Paulson.

Also Rev. John Beck of St. John Lutheran church; Rev. Clifford Kalmoe and the Silvertones of Zion Lutheran church; Rev. Bernard Lewellyn of the United Methodist church; Sister Janice of St. Bernard's Catholic church; Rev. Arthur Ortmann, Warroad, who showed a film to the residents, and Rev. Bob Moberg and a group of women from the Sunshine circle of Zion Lutheran church Viking, who served sweet breads at the afternoon coffee hour.

Also visiting with the residents and serving special treats for their afternoon coffee, were St. Bernard's guild, who served homemade doughnuts; the Mary circle of Trinity Lutheran, who served a variety of breads, the women of the Evangelical Free church, who served angel food cake; and Judith Wold, the Tuesday morning Bible study leader, who served cookies after the Bible study on March 27, in observance of her birthday, which was the following day.

The kitchenette at the Home was the scene of a recent oyster stew supper hosted by George Lindbeck and Sherrie Sorenson. Guests were Lindbeck's roommate Thore Skomedal and fellow residents Stanley Lausness and Carl Ryan.

Other activities included weekly games with Earl Yonke in charge, residents council meeting, morning exercises, shuffle board, darts, choir and band practice, crafts, shopwork, baking day, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday hair days with beauticians giving perms, styling and setting hair; and a shopping trip.

In the monthly report, submitted by Ella Overum, the Home's new reporter, she stated that there were two errors in last month's report. She noted that Gunnar Sundberg's name had been inadvertently omitted in listing the veterans honored on Washington's birthday; and that it was Edith Pearson and not Viola Pearson who had served doughnuts with Mrs. Berg. She extends her apology.

Zehlian Meet Includes Ceramic Demonstration

Ceramic demonstration highlighted the April meeting of the Zehlians held at the home of Diane Krepp.

Mrs. Krepp, who presented the demonstration, stated that "Clay has a memory." As she made a vase by hand, using rolled clay, she stressed the importance of care in handling clay, saying, "Clay remembers what you do to it. Should it crack in the process of being made into a vase or article, even though it is patched, it is very apt to crack again, in the same place, during the firing." She also stressed the importance of the correct moisture consistency, saying, "Don't have the clay too wet nor too dry." In completing the vase, she demonstrated the preparation of two edges of clay to be attached to each other. Information on the design on the vase, the coloring, and firing were given. She concluded the demonstration by using the potters wheel by making a jar with a cover.

President Margaret Saetre presided at the meeting which included the adoption of the revised version of the by-law, following the third reading. Several reports were given and communications read.

STREET IMPROVEMENT hearing at city auditorium last night drew about 40 concerned property owners, who, in a radical change from one year ago, gave nearly unanimous support to an over $800,000 project to repair and replace water and sewer lines and overlay blacktopped streets in the city. Changes in the method of assessing property owners for the improvements were credited for much of the attitude change, with cost of utilities repairs now paid by all users through the rate structure. Property owners along the streets scheduled for improvements in 1984 will be assessed approximately $5.26 per frontage foot on the streets.

April Declared Cancer Control Month In MN.

April is designated, nationally and in Minnesota, as cancer control month when two and one-half million American Cancer society volunteers conduct the annual educational and fund-raising crusade. Heading the drive in Pennington county unit is Ernie Swanson.

"Our slogan this year is 'We're winning the war'. . . and this is the war against cancer," Swanson said. "Cancer survival rates are rising and more and more people are beating the disease each year. But we need to increase our efforts now, so that research can uncover the final answers."

Swanson explains that the cancer society crusaders are all volunteers who call on their neighbors to ask for support for the society's research program, and for its education and service programs. The Crusaders are also distributing to each household a pamphlet which is a self-test on cancer risks.

Swanson urges that the pamphlet be read and discussed by ever member of every family in Pennington county. "There are safeguards people can take to help prevent cancer and also ways to detection early enough for cure. The better-informed we are, the healthier lives we will lead," he said.

Court Action Taken Against Six Protestors

Court action has been taken against six self proclaimed tax protesters, according to revenue commissioner Art Roemer. Revenue department has completed the first phase of a new program targeted at people who feel they shouldn't pay Minnesota income tax. This court action allows the department to use the civil writ of mandamus procedures that effectively require the defendant to file a properly completed tax return with the court acting as a monitor.

Commissioner Roemer reminds Minnesotans not to believe those who are "selling gimmicks to avoid state and federal income tax." Roemer said, "The Minnesota revenue department will be using this writ of mandamus procedure primarily on organizers and participants in these fraudulent tax schemes, and several more actions are planned in the next two months.

Six Finalists Chosen To Design Center

Lieutenant Governor Marlene Johnson, who chairs the Capitol area architectural and planning board and Joseph S. Micallef, president of the Minnesota historical society jointly announced the six finalists in the national competition for the design of the new Minnesota state history center.

Joining them in making the announcement were Gary Grefenberg, executive secretary of the Capitol area architectural and planning board and Russell W. Fridley, director of the Minnesota historical society.

Six finalists will each be awarded $12,500 to be used to prepare their design proposals for the history center. The architectural firm or team selected for the winning design will be awarded a fee advance of $50,000 and be designated the architect for the Minnesota history center. Announcement of the winning design will be made in July. The competition process, as required by Minnesota state law, is being conducted by the Capitol area architectural and planning board with professional advisor John G. Rauma, F.A.I.A.

Minnesota Governor Rudy Perpich has named the Minnesota history center among the top priorities in his 1984 Capitol budget. He noted that "It is now time to begin the history center . . . and continue the process of creating the campus that Cass Gilbert envisioned." The Capitol area, he said, deserves "the very best quality of design" and should "symbolize our common pride in this state."

Winning design for the Minnesota history center will incorporate the existing historical society building with a new structure to be built on the adjacent site immediately to the east. The combined new and renovated facilities will provide needed space for a major history museum as well as improved quarters for the Minnesota historical society's extensive library and archival collections.

Information On Cancer Offered Free Of Charge

Arnt Aune, public education chairman for the American Cancer society's Pennington county unit, reminds community clubs and organizations that a variety of cancer education programs and materials are available, free of charge, from the ACS.

"We can provide programs on cancer in general, on quitting smoking, on breast cancer, oral cancer, colorectal cancer and other sites of cancer," he said. "Films, filmstrips, slide-tape presentations and pamphlets and posters are available."

Aune said that about 148,000 people with cancer will probably die this year who might have been saved by earlier diagnosis and prompt treatment.

"This is the motivation for the society's public education program. Today there is a great deal of knowledge about safeguards against cancer, about how to prevent getting cancer and methods of detecting the disease early enough for successful treatment. Cancers of the lung, colorectum, breast, uterus, oral cavity and skin account for the majority of cancer cases and about half of cancer deaths, and yet these same cancer sites offer the greatest opportunity for prevention or cure."

Any group or organization interested in a cancer education program or in ordering cancer education materials is invited to contact Aune at 681-4601.

UMC Career Counseling For Women Given

The center recently received $10,000 from the job training partnership act to work with low income women age 16 and older. Services available include career testing, career information, counseling and classes in career planning and self-esteem building, according to Sally Henderson, director.

"If there are women thinking about changing careers, going back to school or entering the job market after being homemakers, they can receive help from the center," said Henderson.

Participants who do not meet low income requirements will be charged a fee for materials and testing. To request services, write Career Education Center, Bede Hall, University of Minnesota, Crookston, MN 56716 or call Henderson at 281-6510, extension 366.

Land Transfers Can Mean A Loss Or Gain

If a taxpayer transfers assets to an ex-spouse as part of a divorse property settlement, there may be a gain or loss on the asset, the Internal Revenue service said.

Generally, the gain or loss is the difference between the adjusted basis of the property and its fair market value at the time of the transfer. If the property has increased in value there may be a taxable gain, while a decrease in value would result in a loss. However, a loss is only deductible if the property is business or investment property.

Spouse making the transfer would realize the gain or loss on the transfer. An equal division of property that is co-owned by both spouses does not result in a gain or loss, according to the IRS.

IRSX Publication 504, "Tax Information for Divorced or Separated Individuals," is available free by using the handy order form in the tax forms package.

Easter Date Is Decided By The Stars

An April shower of meteors, two large constellations and the astronomy of Easter may provide some sky surprises for starwatchers who will find the month's warmth a fine trade for its shorter nights.

A meteor shower with the lyrical name the Lyrids will peak on April 21 as earth crosses the pathway of a comet's tail. First recorded by Chinese astronomers in 687 B.C., this shower will decorate the sky with about 15 meteors every hour. Looking late at night and close to the northeast horizon will increase one's chances of seeing this number.

Big Dipper, one of the largest and most commonly recognized constellations, still conceals some secrets, notably two interesting star families. One lies around Mizar, the middle star in the dipper handle. This is actually a family of three stars, all formed from the same cloud of gas and dust billions of years ago. The other — A very faint star off beyond the bowl area of the dipper — is much odder. It is actually a pair of double stars that lie much closer together than binary stars usually do.

They are so close, in fact, that the two stars touch. Orbiting each other in less than a day, these stars, both about the size of our sun, pull on each other with immense gravity. Though neither is strong enough to pull the other apart, each is distorted into an odd egg shape.

Unlike most constellations, the Big Dipper is part of a real star cluster. All of the constellation's seven stars — except the two at the end of the handle — are actually moving together through space. Almost all other constellation groupings are illusions of our line of sight, with some of the stars dozens of light-years in the foreground or background of what looks like the flat pattern.

Another large constellation, Leo, is now high in the southern sky in mid-evening. Named by ancient star-watchers for its resemblance to a lion's head, Leo looks like a backward question mark. The brightest of its visible stars if Regulus, a bluish-white giant some 170 times as luminous as the sun and about 85 light-years away. In the same area of sky, though not visible, lie two dwarf galaxies called Leo I and II. Some 700,000 light-years away — considered well within our astronomical neighborhood — they accompany our galaxy, the Milky Way, and nearly 20 others. We are a group, traveling through the universe together.

Also within Leo, though invisible to the naked eye at three billion light-years away, is the first quasar ever discovered, called 3C273. Brighter than 1,000 bright galaxies, it beams light, X-rays and radio waves toward Earth. Thhs kind of powerful astronomical phenomenon is not well understood. Quasars may be infant galaxies in the throes of birth or centers of exceptionally bright galaxies, shedding vast energy, as black holes at their centers swallow nearby stars or gas clouds.

Also of astronomical significance this month is Easter, occurring this year on April 22. Its date — which can fall any time between March 22 and April 25 — is set by the vernal equinox and the full moon. Easter is the first Sunday after the first full moon after the closest new moon to the beginning of spring. This year the equinox of March 20 is followed by a new moon on April 1 and then a full moon on April 15. Since April 15 is a Sunday, Easter is postponed an entire week to the 22, said Tom Jones, astronomer at the University of Minnesota.

New Solum 4-H Cleans Town Hall Basement

On Saturday afternoon the New Solum 4-H club went rubbish cleaning at the New Solum town hall basement. The club is participating in the 12th annual "Help Young America Campaign" in which a national sponsor is offering cash prizes to community projects done by national youth organizations.

Sixteen members, parents and leaders helped clean the basement of the hall. Stacking firewood, carrying out pails full of dirt and scrubbing stairs were just some of the duties performed. Before and after pictures were taken.

This is New Solum township's centennial year. There will be a celebration at the town hall on June 24 and cleaning of the basement was just the beginning for the club's community pride project. Club members will be working hard on more preparation for the centennial celebration in the upcoming weeks.

Tax Cut And Economic Pkg. Are Announced

Senate Majority Leader Roger Moe of Ada and Speaker of the House Harry Sieben of Hastings jointly announced a combination tax cut and economic development package, including repeal of the state income tax surcharge retroactive to Jan. 1, 1984. Their action followed the forecast announcement by state finance commissioner Gus Donhowe, that state revenues for the rest of the biennium will be $250 million more than anticipated.

"The tax relief and economic development plan we've devised in response to the most current revenue forecast represents a balanced and responsible approach. It provides immediate tax relief to all income taxpayers; property tax relief to small businesses, farmers and homeowners, economic development initiatives to manufacturers planning to locate or expand in Minnesota, and jobs for Minnesotans without work," Moe explained.

"By waiting for the most recent forecast, we have been able to assess all the needs and put together a package that addresses those needs in a fair and balanced manner. And we've been able to do that without mortgaging the well-being of the state or the 1986-87 budget," he added.

The package, developed by DFL legislative leaders in the Senate and House and Governor Perpich, includes approximately $357 million in tax relief. In addition to setting aside an additional $125 million for the state's budgeted reserve to guard against future economic downturns, another $78 million would be used to reverse some of the budget shifts that were used in past budget crises. Less than 20 per cent of the surplus not set aside in the reserve will increase state spending. And virtually all of that is a one-time expenditure.

"I believe this proposal is a fair and balanced way to return the surplus to the taxpayers of Minnesota," Moe said. "It maintains our commitment to taxpayers, to farmers, to business, to the unemployed and to schools. At the same time, we've guaranteed stability by limiting the fiscal impact as much as possible to the current biennium. By not committing resources too far in the future we've avoided risky decisions based on resources we're not sure will be available."

University Life Often A Source For Frustration

Complexity of life at the University of Minnesota — often a source of frustration for its 57,000 students — obscures the university's "extraordinary resources for providing first-class undergraduate education," said the head of a committee studying the student experience.

First part of the student experience task force interim report deals with specifics for making the day-to-day life outside the classroom less complicated and making the university "more user friendly", according to John Wallace, head of the project and assistant vice president for academic affairs. Recommendations are divided into those that should be implemented as soon as possible — such as reducing the delay between admitting students and notifying their colleges — to more complicated steps to be taken next year and during the next biennium.

Second part of the report deals more broadly with fundamental issues concerning the quality of teaching and learning. Wallace said the final report, due in late May, should have specific recommendations for improvements in the classroom.

"The key word throughout our deliberations has been 'action'," Wallace said. "This task force is determined to create a report that won't just sit on a shelf, but will have a real and practical impact on the undergraduate student experience."

The task force, made up of students, faculty, staff and alumni, was announced last September as one of five groups appointed by university President C. Peter Magrath to examine various aspects of the university. The groups are part of the university's on-going planning process. "For me, the most important finding in the report is that the university has extraordinary resources for providing a first-class undergraduate education," Wallace said. "But some of our biggest problems seem to involve student access to those resources. We have to do a much better job of bringing together resources and undergraduates."

"Within the five campuses of the University of Minnesota, students encounter environments that vary considerably in their responsiveness to students," the report says. Although the smaller campuses within the system and some departments on the Twin Cities campus are already friendly to students, "the majority of undergraduates on the Twin Cities campus, especially on the Minneapolis campus, perceive the university as impersonal, and point to specific problems of long lines and unfriendly personnel," according to the report.

Many of the recommendations center around the guiding business principle that "the customer always comes first." In one recommendation the task force has taken its cue directly from private business. The report calls for setting up a telephone information system, allowing Twin Cities campus students to find out with a quick call where to go for what. Other recommendations for the Twin Cities campus deal with stream-lining the complicated registration system, reworking publications to "provide the right information to the right student at the right time" and developing a better orientation system for transfer students, Wallace said.

"Improving user friendliness at a large decentralized institution is not as simple as it may sound," Wallace said. "We have to learn effective new ways of communicating with undergraduates about programs, policies, services, activities and facilities. We have to improve the physical environment and make day-to-day interactions between the university and its students as efficient and humane as possible."

During the next six weeks the task force will be soliciting recommendations from the university community for improving students' academic lives. "We don't pretend to be a small liberal arts college offering all of its students membership in a single academic community," Wallace said. "Instead, we must try to fully develop our own unique character by offering our students the choice of membership in a wide range of small-scale learning communities."

The report makes some recommendations for improving academic life, including establishing small honors-type classes for students who want to take a more active role in learning. This recommendation is a response to the often-heard complaint that classes are large and impersonal. Other suggestions call for increasing the fieldwork and intership programs for undergraduates and the opportunities for personal faculty-student contact.

Name Students To Dean's List

Fifteen local students were named to the Moorhead state university dean's list for winter quarter.

To qualify for this honor, students must maintain a 3.25 or higher grade point average and carry at least 14 credits each quarter.

Taxpayers Can Participate In 1984 Campaign

By simply placing a check mark in the appropriate block on the federal income tax form, taxpayers may participate in financing the 1984 presidential election campaign, the Internal Revenue service said.

Fund was established by Congress to support public financing of presidential election campaigns, according to the IRS.

A taxpayer wishing to designate $1 of his or her tax money to the fund should mark the "yes" block on the form. On a joint return both taxpayers may choose separately to designate or decline to designate to the fund. If one or both decline, the "no" box should be checked.

Designating $1 of tax money to the fund does not increase a taxpayer's tax bill nor decrease a refund, the IRS noted. "The "yes" designation does not mean that the $1 qualifies as a political contribution for a tax credit, according to the IRS.

BIG PROTECTION FOR SMALL BUSINESSES

Your business may never make the "Fortune 500" list. But no matter how small it is, it still faces the same kinds of expensive liability losses that only large companies can sustain. The kinds your basic insurance may not fully cover.

The answer? It's both simple and affordable: a wide-ranging form of catastrophe protection like the Businessowners Excess Liability (XOT) developed by INA Aetna specifically for smaller businessowners and service contractors.

It provides you with high limits of protection you can't get from a primary policy alone. That's important in these days of high values and high liability court awards. And it can even be extended to provide partners and officers with personal excess liability coverage for non-business exposures.

Almost all small businesses are eligible. Chances are yours is, too. So why not contact us today?

We represent INA Aetna. But we work for you.

Safety Tips For Using Car Restraints

At least half of auto child restraint systems are being used incorrectly, and therefore not providing the protection they are designed to give.

That informatioon comes from John Shaffer, director of the Minnesota occupant restraint program, sponsored jointly by the Minnesota safety council and the Minnesota department of public safety.

Parents in a hurry often neglect to fasten the child into the harness of the child restraint system, or to anchor the restraint in place with the existing car safety belts, according to manufacturer's instructions, says Shaffer.

Child must be fastened into the shield or harness provided with the restraint: without the shield or harness, the restraint system offers no more protection than letting the child sit on the seat of the car and (since the child is elevated) sometimes even less.

All restraints are designed to be held in place by safety belts, either fastened around the protective impact shield or through the frame, according to manufacturer's instructions. Additionally, some restraints require the use of an anchor strap or tether provided by the manufacturer, usually attached onto the back window ledge or the floorboard of the car. Correctly installed, these systems offer extra stability. However, they are not safely used without the tether.

Another error is the use of a system not designed for the size of the child in it. Older children should not be fastened into infant restraint systems, usually designed for babies up to nine months or 20 pounds. By the way, infant restraints must be used in the rear-facing position either in the front or (preferably) rear seat of the car.

Approved automobile booster seats are excellent for children age three and over. Depending on the size of the child, some may be used up to age seven or eight (about 65 pounds). Many of these come with a harness system, which must be used to protect the child's upper-torso area. If no harness comes with the booster seat, the car's lap and shoulder safety belt may be used.

A pillow or cushion should never be used to boost a child because it could slide out from under the child, allowing him or her to "submarine" under the lap belt or letting the child's head move so far forward that it strikes the car's interior in a crash.

Adult safety belts should be used by children who have outgrown their child restraint systems or by children who can sit up by themselves when no restraint is available. The belt should be snug and as low on the child's hips as possible. If the shoulder belt crosses the child's face or neck, the shoulder belt should be placed behind the child's back after the buckle has been fastened.

Although children by law must be restrained in auto child restraint systems on Minnesota highways until age four, any children are small enough to continue riding in the system for another year or two, as long as the child's head does not extend beyond the back of the restraint. If the head does extend beyond, the child probably has outgrown the restraint. All restraints discussed are best used in the back seat of the automobile. On trips, a adult passenger may wish to ride in the back seat with the child so restrained, helping to entertain him or her.

Whether riding in the front or rear seat, all persons should buckle up, both to provide a good example and to prevent additional damage in the event of an auto accident, when an unrestrained child or adult could be thrown into other passengers, causing serious or even fatal injuries.

Following these tips, says Shaffer, will ensure parents provide the best protection child restraint systems can afford.

Two Pesticide Classes To Be Held In Warren

Two additional private pesticide applicator training sessions will be sponsored by the Marshall county extension office at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, April 12, and at 9 a.m. Friday, April 13, in the old courtroom of the Marshall county court-house in Warren.

Private pesticide applicators who wish to purchase restricted pesticides must have completed the one hour session to receive their pesticide identification card. Ray Thompson, county extension director, will serve as the course instructor.

State Notifies Taxpayers On 1982 Returns

Minnesotans numbering 1,500 will be receiving notices beginning this week telling them they failed to properly determine their household income as part of property tax refund returns for 1982. Minnesota revenue department wants to remind people to do it properly in 1983 to avoid unnecessary delays in processing their refund claims and unnecessary interest and penalties that could become due, according to Revenue Commissioner Arthur Roemer.

Roemer said the revenue department is now performing computer tape matches with the department of economic security and identifying those people who received unemployment compensation payments and did not include these payments on their property tax refund claims. The 1,500 bills going out to taxpayers who did not include unemployment payments are averaging $75 each and will be issued over the next few weeks.

Commissioner Roemer said those receiving bills have 30 days to review them and to let the revenue department know if there are errors. If the department is not notified within 30 day of error concerning the bill, the department will begin collection action which could involve intercepting 1983 refunds and reducing these refunds by the amount of the bill from 1982.

Commissioner Roemer indicated that similar computer tape matches are also being performed to determine those individuals who have not included social security payments as part of household income on their property tax refund claims.

In summary, Roemer advises everyone to do it right in 1983 to avoid delayed refunds and unnecessary interest and penalties.

Bill Clarifies License For Farm Trucking

A bill allowing farm employees to transport farm products during harvest with a class "C" license was passed by the House transportation committee last week, said State Representative Wally Sparby, District 1B.

The legislation clarifies a gray area in state law, Sparby said. Current law states that a class "C" license is valid for all farm trucks that are driven by the farmer, his family members or a farm employee as long as that farm employee is not a full-time truck driver.

"The problem arises when a farmer hires a part-time employee to drive truck during the harvest operation," Sparby said. "Some peace officers classify part-time employees driving farm trucks as truck drivers and require them to have a different driver's license."

Paul Brutlag, a representative of the sugarbeet growers association in Wendel, said the legislation is supported by a variety of farmers — dairy, livestock, grain, sugar beet and potato.

"Farmers from across the state have been and will continue to hire part-time employees to help during the busy time of harvest to drive truck," Brutlag said. "We support this legislation because it will clarify that the part-time farm employees are driving with legal licenses."

Gregg Holte, Minnesota legislative liaison for the Red River Valley sugar beet growers association, testified in support of the legislation.

"The more specific language of this legislation clearly states that a class "C" driver's license is valid for any farm employee operating a farm truck for the first haul during harvest within fifty miles of the farm."

Wage Gap Can Weaken Wedded Workers' Bond

by Deane Morrison
'U'M News Service

A working couple's sex life may suffer if either partner out-earns the other by too wide a margin, according to the University of Minnesota study. Sociologist Guillermina Jasso has found that large disparities in income weaken a marriage if both spouses work full time. Her data imply that a narrowing of the wage gap between men and women will help reduce the U.S. divorce rate.

Jasso examined the relationship among employment status, earnings and strength of the marital bond — indicated by the reported frequency of sexual intercourse — in 2,010 couples interviewed during the 1970 and 1975 rounds of the national fertility studies. She said that the earnings ratio — the ration of the smaller income to the larger — is important to two-paycheck marriages.

"If both spouses work full time, then the higher the ration, the smaller the disparity between the spouses' earnings and — other things being equal — the stronger the marital bond," she said. Therefore, a marriage in which one partner earns $20,000 and the other earns $25,000 — an eight to 10 earnings ratio — should be stronger than if the earnings were $24,000 and $40,000 — an earnings ratio of six to 10. And if one or neither spouse works full time, then the marital bond will be as strong as for two full-time workers whose earnings ration is five to 10.

Data clearly show that it makes no difference which spouse earns more, Jasso said. Thus if a wife earns $30,000 to her husband's $20,000, the marriage should be just as strong as if the earnings were reversed.

Jasso found a new answer to the question of whether a wife becoming employed full time or a husband losing a full-time job will threaten a marriage. If the other spouse works full time, then it all depends on the couple's earnings ratio. The ration should be kept higher, than five to 10; otherwise, the marriage is stronger if one or neither spouse works full time.

For example, a husband becoming unemployed or retiring should benefit the marriage if both spouses worked full time and he earned more than twice as much as his wife. And if a working man's unemployed wife takes a full-time job, the marriage should improve if she earns more than half the amount he does. In fact, even if her new job pays more than her husband's, the marriage will be strengthened as long as she does not earn more than twice as much as he.

Losing or gaining a part-time job should have no effect on a marriage.

"The study tested a prediction derived from the theory of distributive justice," Jasso said. "A disparity in the individual spouses' holdings of valued goods can have important consequences for the marriage. If both are employed full time, then earnings are a measure of those goods. Accordingly, in a society where most people can expect to be employed full time, disparities in earnings should be kept to a minimum.

"In each case it is the similarity between the spouses' feelings of self-worth that matters. A person who works part time is not likely to use the amount of those earnings as a measure of self-worth. Also, a comparison of two individuals isn't likely to be based on such different concepts as full-time earnings and part-time earnings," she said. Therefore, a large disparity in earnings will be less damaging if one spouse works part time.

She likened her findings to the Aristotelian theme that love is only possible between equals.

Apparently, love has experienced a fair amount of upheaval over the last three decades. During that time the U.S. divorce rate has risen sharply, accompanied by a marked increase in married women's labor force participation, wage rates and earnings. Some researchers have linked these two phenomena, blaming the rising divorce rate partly on the movement of women into the workplace. But, Jasso said, that explanation fails to consider the distribution of goods between marriage partners and whether the partners are employed full time or part time.

Large-scale movement of unemployed women into full-time jobs may or may not aggravate the divorce problem, according to her theory. Much depends on how such a phenomenon affects the wage gap — women's average full-time, year-round earnings as a percentage of men's — which currently hovers near 60 per cent. As more women take higher-paying full-time positions, the wage gap should narrow and exert a downward pressure on the divorce rate. But if the gap widens because women's jobs are relatively poorly paid, then the divorce rate should continue to climb.

Jasso speculated that widespread changes such as war mobilization or economic depression may ultimately affect the societal divorce rate. For example, if women's productivity is lower than men's, then war mobilization may help equalize the difference and so strengthen marriages. This might occur in feudal societies, in which wives take greater responsibility for agricultural production during wartime.

Jasso thinks it would be interesting to examine marriage patterns during World War II, when the war effort sent American women flocking to the factories, and also during the postwar return to the home.

People faced with a choice of marriage partners might improve their chances for marital success by considering their own earnings in relation to those of potential mates, she said. Take the case of a young career woman torn between two suitors. If both suitors earn less than she, Jasso's theory predicts a stronger marriage if she chooses the one who earns more. If both out-earn her, she would do better with the one who earns less. Even unemployed young women or men should consider whether they are ever likely to work full time and should then marry accordingly. "In choosing a spouse, the closer the match in productivity, the closer the relationship," she said.

Steve Olson, a sophomore defenseman from Thief River Falls, has been named co-captain of the 1984-85 St. Thomas hockey team, it was announced this week by head coach Terry Abram.

Olson was a mainstay for the Tommies on defense this past season, reported Abram, a former Roseau high school coach. His consistently hard-nosed play led his team to the WIHA championship, a berth in the NCAA Division II playoffs and a 20-10-1 record.

In addition to his defensive prowess, he scored seven goals, added 17 assists and led the St. Paul college in both attempts and shots on goal.

"Steve was considered by many to be the top defenseman in the conference," stated Abram. "Taking into account that he was only a sophomore, that speaks very highly of his ability. I think that the most honest praise a person can receive comes from his opponents, and Steve certainly received that. I am happy that we will be able to have him around for the next couple of years."

Olson was earlier selected as a first-team all-conference pick by MIAC coaches.

Joining Olson as St. Thomas captains next winter will be Mark Vannelli of Apple Valley and Tom Diedrich of Owatonna.

Goodrich Earns Basketball Honors

Lincoln high school graduate Ann Goodrich earned NCAA Division II All-American status this winter as a member of the national champion women's basketball team at Northwestern College of Roseville.

A third-year letter winner at the Twin Cities area school, Goodrich was named to the all-tournament team after leading Northwestern to the NCAA Division II national title. Northwestern defeated Baptist Bible College of Clark Summit, PA 92-66 in the national finals and finished with a school-best 19-10 season record.

Miscellaneous

+ Warroad Lakers have withdrawn from the CASH League to compete on a lower level of competition and a different league within the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association. Cal Marvin of the Lakers said the team was losing too many players each year to the demanding schedule and competition. The Lakers will reorganize and attempt to recruit more local players for a slimmed-down 1984-85 schedule, Marvin explained in the Warroad Pioneer.

+ Former Roseau high school hockey standout Chad Johnson, one of the top freshmen on this year's University of Chicago-Circle, has announced that he will not return to the school, and is considering transferring to the University of North Dakota or University of Minnesota-Duluth, according to Bernie Burggraf of the Roseau Times-Region.

+ Jerry Pieper, a freshman defenseman for the University of Minnesota-Crookston from Williams has been named a first-team NJCAA hockey All-American. Jeff Strandell of the Trojans, a sophomore forward from East Grand Forks, was a second-team choice. Other Minnesota Community College Conference (MCCC) players gaining All-American honors were goalie Stan Bautch and forward Tom Fredrickson of Hibbing.

+ University of Lowell (Mass.) will appear in Grand Forks, N.D. next winter for a Jan. 11-12 college hockey series against the University of North Dakota. Thief River Falls' Scott Wiebolt and Tom Kenville are members of the Lowell team, a member of the newly-formed Hockey East Conference that will play an inter-locking schedule with WCHA members in 1984-85. Other Hockey East members include Boston College, Boston University, Maine, New Hampshire, Northeastern and Providence. WCHA members are UND, Minnesota, Minnesota-Duluth, Wisconsin, Colorado College, Denver, Michigan Tech and Northern Michigan. Thief River Falls' Tim Bergland, a member of the University of Minnesota hockey team, will be in Grand Forks along with the rest of the Gophers for a Dec. 14-15 series next year. UND's 1984-85 hockey schedule announced this week includes 18 WCHA games and 14 WCHA-counting games against Hockey East teams, plus just four non-conference games.

A 6-15 season for the 1983-84 Lincoln high school basketball team breaks down into three parts, pointed out head coach Tom Hunt, whose Prowlers had an 0-4 start, followed by a 6-6 mid-season effort, but ended with an 0-5 finish.

"We put ourselves in position to win a number of games this year, but we just didn't come through," admitted Hunt. "The most disappointing part was going 0-5 at the end of the season."

Thief River Falls was within reach of turning eight of those losses into wins, which would have translated into a 14-7 record. Three were really close losses, including a 39-38 defeat at the hands of Park Rapids; a 42-40 setback at Marshall County Central; and a 45-41 decision at Detroit Lakes. Those could have easily gone the other way. The Prowlers were also in position to win maybe five others, but wound up losing to Fergus Falls by five, 43-38; Warren by six, 40-34; East Grand Forks by seven, 55-48; Roseau by eight, 52-44; and to Warren, again, by ten, 64-54.

It was, pointed out Hunt, a very competitive schedule. Nine of the 12 different opponents on the Prowlers' schedule this winter were considered legitimate conference, district or regional contenders. Warren did emerge as the Region 8A champion and Fergus Falls won the Region 8AA title.

"We got blown out in a couple of games, but I thought we played pretty competitive basketball for the most part," mentioned Hunt.

Thief River Falls improved its defensive play, cut down on turnovers and rebounded better this year than the Prowlers did in their two previous years under Hunt, but a 37 per cent shooting mark from the field for the year was too much of a handicap to overcome. And too many of those misses came inside.

Guards John Brandt and Mark Bondy led the team in the field goal percentage department, both shooting 41 per cent from the floor. Brandt was a busy 107-for-258, averaging 12.7 points per game, while Bondy was 43-for-105, averaging 5.4 points per game. Brandt also led the team in field goal percentage (81 per cent on a 52-for-64 showing) and led the team with 39 steals to complete a fine all-around season for the 6-1 senior. Bondy, a 6-0 junior, led the team with 48 assists. Brandt had 43.

But while Brandt scored in double figures, nobody else averaged more than a half-dozen. Front-line performers Jeff Langan, Tim Kruse, Jeff Hamerlinck and Randy Erickson all played hard and all had their moments, but it was an extremely tough year for the Prowlers' forwards and centers, admitted Hunt.

Erickson led the team in rebounding with 123 in 21 games and became an accomplished shot-blocker with 49 of them this winter. Kruse pulled down 105 rebounds and Hamerlinck had an even 100.

Bondy will be the only starter back next year. Ryan Drees, a 5-8 junior, saw some playing time at a guard this winter, and Scott Fowler, a 6-3 junior, played some at forward.

Meanwhile, the Lincoln junior varsity struggled through a 4-13 campaign this winter and the freshmen were below .500, too.

"The Thief River Falls basketball program is structurally sound now," pointed out Hunt, "but that's for the future. Right now we've got to pay our dues, I guess."

In breaking down the Prowlers' 1983-84 season, they opened with losses to Roseau 52-44, Detroit Lakes 45-41, Moorhead 66-48 and Argyle 66-48.

They won their first game in the opening round of their first Holiday Invitational, a 53-39 win over what turned out to be a very fine Kennedy team. Eventual Holiday Invitational winner Fertile-Beltrami beat the Prowlers 53-39 in the eight-team tournament semifinals, with Thief River Falls bouncing back to beat Marshall County Central 47-45 for third place.

Rest of the Prowlers' mid-season showing included wins over Crookston 45-44 in overtime and 58-54, Mahnomen 50-33 and Middle River 48-35. During that stretch they lost to Bemidji 64-39, Marshall County Central 42-40, East Grand Forks 55-48, Warren 64-54 and Fergus Falls 43-38.

That season-ending five-game losing streak included regular season setbacks at the hands of Bemidji 70-54, Park Rapids 39-38, East Grand Forks 77-40 and Warren 40-34, plus a 65-34 opening round North Sub-Region 8AA tournament loss to Bemidji.

Prowlers Lose First Matches

Season-opening match for the 1984 Lincoln high school tennis team Monday at the Grand Forks Tennis Center saw the Prowlers lose both portions of their triangular assignment against Crookston and Detroit Lakes.

Crookston wound up with identical 4-1 wins over Thief River Falls and Detroit Lakes, while the Lakers edged the Prowlers 3-2. That left Crookston as the triangular winner with 8 points, followed by Detroit Lakes with 4 and Thief River Falls 3.

Thief River Falls' lone win against Crookston came at No. 1 singles, where sophomore Al Erickson outlasted Jeff Claassen 3-6, 7-6, 7-6. He won the second-set tie-breaker 7-1 and took the third-set tie-breaker 8-6.

Against Detroit Lakes, the youthful Prowlers had winners in junior Dan Imgrund by a 6-3, 6-3 margin over Jim Poehl at No. 2 singles, and by junior Jeff Vanyo by a 6-4, 6-0 score over Andy Thomas at No. 3 singles.

"I was happy with the way our singles played," reported Thief River Falls coach Whitey Olson. "They played reasonably well, and if they will go on from there, and improve they'll be all right."

Thief River Falls' next outing will be Thursday with a 3:15 p.m. triangular in East Grand Forks, where the Prowlers and Green Wave will be joined by Moorhead.

Prowlers' Track Season To Open Friday Indoors

Both Lincoln high school track teams will visit the Winter Shows Building in Crookston Friday for a 4 p.m. invitational meet.

It will be the 1984 season opener for the Lincoln boys. The Lincoln girls began their schedule last Friday at the same site, trailing a five-team field that was headed by host Crookston with 79 points, followed by East Grand Forks with 35, Bagley 34, Park Rapids 30 and Thief River Falls 27.

Fourteen of the 25 Lincoln boys out for track this spring are juniors. There are only four seniors, four sophomores and three freshmen out for the sport. The small numbers in the lower grades is a major concern for head coach Tim Olson.

"Team-wise, it may be a struggle to get points," admitted Olson, "but we've got some individuals who should do well for us."

Among the individuals showing early season promise are senior Randy Swenson, who is expected to excell in the 300-meter hurdles; junior Chris Helle, who has a great deal of potential as a pole vaulter; and a group of weightmen that includes juniors Shannon Kezar, Gus Miller and Jeff Johnson, plus sophomore Dave Gobell.

Olson says the Prowlers should also be able to put together a strong sprint medley relay unit.

Rest of the current roster includes seniors Kevin Kezar, Tom Walker and Jeff Langan; juniors Scott Fowler, Roger Gonsorowski, Tim Peterson, Troy Skime, Dave Dalager, Paul Helgeland, Kraig Kalnz, Steve Rendulich, Dave Olson and Kurt Phillip; sophomores Dan Iverson, John Tranby and Bruce Paulson; and freshmen Brian Stark, Paul Brandt and Jim Parnham.

Thief River Falls will be back in the Winter Shows Building Tuesday for another 4 p.m. indoor meet. First outdoor meet of the season is scheduled to be held Thursday, April 19, at Roseau. Thief River Falls' Quentin Jones Invitational is scheduled Tuesday, May 1, and the Thief River Falls Invitational will be held Tuesday, May 8. Both of those events will feature competition for boys and girls.

NCC Baseball, Softball Openers Set This Week

Baseball and softball teams at Northland community college are scheduled to open their 1984 schedules this week.

Northland baseball opener was scheduled today (Wednesday), with a 1 p.m. doubleheader in Grand Forks against the University of North Dakota junior varsity.

Softball opener for the Northwomen will be Saturday when they participate in an eight-team invitational tournament at Inver Hills community college in the Twin Cities area.

Softball

Lack of a proven battery combination — a pitcher and a catcher — may create problems for the 1984 Northland softball squad.

"They're enthusiastic," reported Northland coach Deb Jacobson. "They seem to have good speed, and their fielding and throwing is improving."

But without an experienced pitcher and catcher in fast pitch softball, you have an uphill battle on your hands.

Lynette Huot, a Lincoln high school graduate who is attending the area vocational-technical institute (AVTI) is expected to tackle the pitching chores, and the search continues for a catcher, said Jacobson.

Three sophomores are back from last year, including Kim Phillips, Lancaster; Gwen Nylen, Thief River Falls; and MaryAnn Smith, Red Lake. A first-year sophomore on the roster is Paula Nelson, Middle River.

Freshmen on hand include Brenda Dahl, Newfolden; Kathy Pietruszewski, East Grand Forks; Mary Josephson, Red Lake Falls; Connie Sauve, Red Lake Falls; Jenyne Beehler, Finlayson; and Kari Skoglund, Middle River; plus AVTI student Jenee Frolander, Warroad.

Northland will follow its Inver Hills trip with Northwest Division doubleheaders at Brainerd April 18 and at Fergus Falls April 25 before the home opener for the Northwomen is played Friday, April 27, vs. the University of Minnesota-Crookston, a 3 p.m. divisional twinbill.

NCC Softball

Sat., April 14 — at Inver Hills Invitational; Wed., April 18 — at Brainerd, 3 p.m.; Wed., April 25 — at Fergus Falls, 3 p.m.; Fri., April 27 — vs. UMC, 3 p.m.; Sat., May 5 — vs. Brainerd, 1 p.m.; Mon., May 7 — vs. Mesabi, 1 p.m.; Wed., May 9 — vs. Fergus Falls, 3 p.m.; Thurs., May 10 — at UMC, 3 p.m.; Fri., May 11 — vs. Rainy River, 5 p.m.; Sat., May 12 — at UMC Invitational.

Baseball

Northland enjoyed one of its best baseball seasons over in 1983 when the Northmen were the host team for the Region 13 tournament and were contenders for a Northwest Division title that would have also brought the Minnesota Community College Conference (MCCC) state tournament to Thief River Falls.

But with just two sophomores back from that team, Northland isn't likely to match that kind of success in 1984.

Kevin Sanders of Thief River Falls and Keith Huerd of Warroad, a pair of pitchers, are the veterans on hand from a year ago. In addition to graduation losses, two other front-line sophomores transferred closer to their Fargo homes after the winter quarter when versatile football - hockey - baseball players Bob Rockwood and Ladd Bjugson enrolled at Moorhead State and North Dakota State, respectively.

Northland coach Chet Engelman knows the Northmen will have their hands full trying to win some games this spring. The losses of Rockwood and Bjugson, both former Fargo American Legion baseball standouts, will be keenly felt, he said. "We'll just have to do the best we can with what we have," he offered.

Rest of the squad members include sophomore Wade Hruby of Thief River Falls; along with freshmen Todd Gschwend, East Grand Forks; Bruce Nephew, Fertile; Darris Dahl, Bagley; Alan Melvie, Newfolden; Jerry Bjerke, Thief River Falls; Steve Lien, Bagley; Chris Dahlmann, Warren; Ken Porter, Warren; Mike Bellanger, Waubun; and Tony Holcomb, Fairbault.

Northland will begin Northwest Division play a week from today, with a Wednesday, April 18, doubleheader at the University of Minnesota - Crookston. The Northmen are scheduled to play four road doubleheaders before their home opener arrives Saturday, May 5, vs. UMC.

Bear Permit Drawing

Monday, April 16 is the final day for hunters who want to enter the drawing that will allocate 3,880 licenses to hunt bear in Minnesota this fall, the Department of Natural Resources reminded.

Application blanks for the drawing are available from state license agents.

Season starts Sept. 1 and ends Oct. 14 with a limit of one adult bear per licensed hunter.

Either firearms or bow and arrow may be used. The license fee is $15 for residents and $100 for non-residents, plus a 75 cent issuing fee.

For those who wish to hunt together in a group, their applications must be placed in the same envelope and it will be treated as one application in the drawing. No more than four persons may apply together in a group.

Perference in the drawing will be given to those who applied unsuccessfully in previous years — providing they have their driver's license number or Public Safety ID number.

Officials said the numbering system is the only means the DNR has of keeping a record of those who have applied in past years.

Free Tree Seedlings

Communities, schools and non-profit civic organizations can still obtain free tree seedlings from the Department of Natural Resources for Arbor Day planting.

DNR's Forestry Division said orders will be accepted until April 13. Seedling requests should be made to the nearest DNR Area of District Forestry Office. Persons seeking additional information on obtaining seedlings may call (612) 296-5958.

By state law, the seedlings must be used to establish or reforest woodlots, windbreaks and shelterbelts or used for erosion control, soil and water conservation or permanent food and cover for wildlife.

Among the tree species available are Norway pine, white pine, jack pine, scotch pie, soft maple and caragena.

Ice, Runoff Dangers

Recent warm weather has caused many Minnesota rivers to begin flowing and has deteriorated the ice conditions on the state's lakes. This can be a potential problem — especially to children, late season ice fisherman and early season canoeists, according to the Department of Natural Resources.

Kim Elverum, DNR Boat and Water Safety Coordinator, noted that ice conditions have varied considerably, but only one person was listed as a water fatality this past winter compared to 20 the previous year.

He warned, however, that the spring runoff on rivers and streams presents hazards for canoeists and rafters.

"Each year in the United States, canoeists die in accidents in the cold, fast waters," said Elverum.

"Spring canoeing is not for the beginner. The strong runoff current increases the difficulty of avoiding objects and can even capsize a skillful canoeist. It is essential that proper training be received and that a personal flotation devide (life preserver) be worn before any river attempts are made."

Elverum also warned of the dangers of lowhead dams which are found on many popular canoeing streams. "These dams have claimed 26 people in the past 10 years in the state. The most recent case occurred near Austin this spring."

There is a powerful recirculating current below the dam which can trap and hold victims as well as canoes and boats. The best advice, according to Elverum, is to keep well upstream or downstream of these structures.

Conservation Officer Jobs

Department of Natural Resources has announced that the agency is seeking applications for the position of Conservation Officer.

Conservation Officers enforce laws and regulations under DNR jurisdiction such as game and fish regulations, snowmobile regulations, water laws, and regulations governing use of state parks, state trails, state forests, campgrounds, wild and scenic rivers and scientific and natural areas.

Applicants must, at a minimum, be currently enrolled in the last year of academic instruction in a law enforcement curriculum and must possess, or be eligible to receive, a valid license as a full-time Minnesota peace officer prior to appointment as a Conservation Officer.

Questions regarding the license requirements should be directed to the Minnesota Peace Officer Standards and Training (POST) Board (612) 296-2620.

Examination will consist of an experience and training rating and possibly a multiple choice written test. There will also be an oral examination, physical strength and agility test, psychological evaluation, medical examination and background investigation.

Positions are open in both the metropolitan and outstate areas. The current list of eligible applicants will be abolished and the new eligible list will be in effect two years unless eligible applicants are notified otherwise.

Exam was last given in March, 1982. There were 172 applicants and 20 new officers were hired.

Further information and applications may be obtained at area offices of the State Job Service or the Minnesota Department of Employee Relations, third floor, Space Center, 444 Lafayette Road, St. Paul, MN 55101.

Trout Streams

Department of Natural Resources has announced that special fishing regulations will be in effect on portions of three Minnesota trout streams this spring.

Streams affected are Trout Run Creek and South Branch of the Root River in southeastern Minnesota and the Knife River on the North Shore of Lake Superior in northeastern Minnesota.

For 1.3 miles on Trout Run Creek in Winona county below County Highway 43, only artificial lures with a single hook and flies with a single hook may be used for angling, and all trout larger than 11 inches in total length must be immediately returned to the stream. The daily and possession limit of trout smaller than 11 inches is five.

On a 1.6 mile section of the South Branch Root River in Fillmore county upstream from Highway 12, only artificial lures with a single hook and flies with a single hook may be used for angling and all trout must be immediately returned to the river. This Section of water lies entirely within the boundaries of Forestville State Park.

"The special regulations in southeastern Minnesota are intended to provide a diversity of fishing opportunities, increase the size of brown trout available to the angler and allow larger fish to be caught more than one time," said DNR Fisheries Chief Richard Hassinger.

Those stream sections having special resulations will be posted.

"Support for the rule changes was shown at public meetings held in Preston and Chatfield on March 5 and 6," said Hassinger. "The three miles of stream in which these regulations will be in effect represent less than one per cent of the 345 miles of trout waters in southeastern Minnesota."

On those portions of the Knife River in Lake and St. Louis counties upstream from County Road 9 the open fishing season shall run from May 15 to September 30, compared to an April 14th opener for other state trout streams. Below this posted boundary the season shall be continuous, as in the past.

Daily and possession limit of rainbow trout will be five, with a minimum size of 10 inches. Not more than one rainbow trout may be over 16 inches in total length.

From February 15 until May 15 of each year a special zone has been established (which will be posted) at the mouth of the Knife River. In this posted area only one rainbow trout over 16 inches in total length can be in possession while fishing either from shore or a boat. On other streams, three fish over 16 inches are allowed.

Special regulations on the Knife River are designed to protect spawning steelhead rainbow trout and allow these fish to be caught more than one time, Hassinger explained. A public meeting to discuss experimental regulations was held at Two Harbors on February 8.

Season for fishing stream trout runs from April 14 to September 30, except below posted boundaries on tributaries to Lake Superior where the season is continuous. Anglers are reminded that except for changes made by special regulations, other state fishing laws are still in effect.

New Vikings Coach Hails From Oklee

Newest member of the Minnesota Vikings' coaching staff in the National Football League is a Oklee native.

Bud Bjornaraa, a physical education instructor, track coach, girls gymnastics coach, football coach, strength and conditioning coach and head trainer at Apple Valley high school since the school opened in 1976, has joined the Vikings' staff as strength coach.

Bjornaraa was born and raised in the Oklee area. He attended grade school and high school in Oklee, attended the University of Minnesota and graduated from the University of North Dakota. He is the son of Thorwald and Geline Bjornaraa and the brother of Mrs. Twyla Fore of Oklee.

Bjornaraa is a clinician on strength training, nutrition and conditioning. He is also an associate editor of the National Strength and Conditioning Association Journal and is the author of a widely used text on strength training, nutrition and conditioning, "Weight Training Systematized".

Bjornaraa says that caring for people, being persistant and having faith in humanity are some of the aspects of being a successful coach. "You have to be consistant and stay with your work schedule. Sometimes I wish there were 36 hours in a day," he says. "Time management is something we should all work on. I am goal-oriented and like to finish what I start."

According to Bjornaraa, being named the strength coach for the Vikings is something that has been in the back of his mind since the team was formed.

As far as Bjornaraa's goals for the Vikings, he says he wants to upgrade the team by making them stronger, so they can out-muscle opponents physically, while still retaining quickness. "All the players will have to have a common goal, so that we can perform only short of miracles and can't see failures. We all need to be geared to success," he said.

There is a verse that Bjornaraa says he likes to use, "Good, better, best. Never let it rest, until the good get better and the better get best," he says. "I have the ability to fall asleep anywhere, so that is maybe why I don't stop," he says.

Bjornaraa graduated from UND in 1961 with a major in physical education. He also started and supervised the first off-season weight training and conditioning program at the school while a student there. Since then he has been involved in education and coaching for 23 years at five different schools in Minnesota and Wisconsin. He has also worked with the U.S. Olympic track and hockey teams. He is known nationally for the expertise in strength and conditioning, and speaks at coaches clinics throughout the country.

Bud and his wife, Lauria, have three daughters: Jackie, 23; Jaynie, 22; and Jill, 14; plus a four-month-old granddaughter, Briget Marie.

Steve Olson, a sophomore defenseman from Thief River Falls, has been named co-captain of the 1984-85 St. Thomas hockey team, it was announced this week by head coach Terry Abram.

Olson was a mainstay for the Tommies on defense this past season, reported Abram, a former Roseau high school coach. His consistently hard-nosed play led his team to the WIHA championship, a berth in the NCAA Division II playoffs and a 20-10-1 record.

In addition to his defensive prowess, he scored seven goals, added 17 assists and led the St. Paul college in both attempts and shots on goal.

"Steve was considered by many to be the top defenseman in the conference," stated Abram. "Taking into account that he was only a sophomore, that speaks very highly of his ability. I think that the most honest praise a person can receive comes from his opponents, and Steve certainly received that. I am happy that we will be able to have him around for the next couple of years."

Olson was earlier selected as a first-team all-conference pick by MIAC coaches.

Goodrich Earns Basketball Honors

Lincoln high school graduate Ann Goodrich earned NCAA Division II All-American status this winter as a member of the national champion women's basketball team at Northwestern College of Roseville.

A third-year letter winner at the Twin Cities area school, Goodrich was named to the all-tournament team after leading Northwestern to the NCAA Division II national title. Northwestern defeated Baptist Bible College of Clark Summit, PA 92-66 in the national finals and finished with a school-best 19-10 season record.

+ Warroad Lakers have withdrawn from the CASH League to compete on a lower level of competition and a different league within the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association. Cal Marvin of the Lakers said the team was losing too many players each year to the demanding schedule and competition. The Lakers will reorganize and attempt to recruit more local players for a slimmed-down 1984-85 schedule, Marvin explained in the Warroad Pioneer.

+ Former Roseau high school hockey standout Chad Johnson, one of the top freshmen on this year's University of Chicago-Circle, has announced that he will not return to the school, and is considering transferring to the University of North Dakota or University of Minnesota-Duluth, according to Bernie Burggraf of the Roseau Times-Region.

+ Jerry Pieper, a freshman defenseman for the University of Minnesota-Crookston from Williams has been named a first-team NJCAA hockey All-American. Jeff Strandell of the Trojans, a sophomore forward from East Grand Forks, was a second-team choice. Other Minnesota Community College Conference (MCCC) players gaining All-American honors were goalie Stan Bautch and forward Tom Fredrickson of Hibbing.

+ University of Lowell (Mass.) will appear in Grand Forks, N.D. next winter for a Jan. 11-12 college hockey series against the University of North Dakota. Thief River Falls' Scott Wiebolt and Tom Kenville are members of the Lowell team, a member of the newly-formed Hockey East Conference that will play an inter-locking schedule with WCHA members in 1984-85. Other Hockey East members include Boston College, Boston University, Maine, New Hampshire, Northeastern and Providence. WCHA members are UND, Minnesota, Minnesota-Duluth, Wisconsin, Colorado College, Denver, Michigan Tech and Northern Michigan. Thief River Falls' Tim Bergland, a member of the University of Minnesota hockey team, will be in Grand Forks along with the rest of the Gophers for a Dec. 14-15 series next year. UND's 1984-85 hockey schedule announced this week includes 18 WCHA games and 14 WCHA-counting games against Hockey East teams, plus just four non-conference games.

Prowlers Not Far From Winning Basketball Record In 1983-84

A 6-15 season for the 1983-84 Lincoln high school basketball team breaks down into three parts, pointed out head coach Tom Hunt, whose Prowlers had an 0-4 start, followed by a 6-6 mid-season effort, but ended with an 0-5 finish.

"We put ourselves in position to win a number of games this year, but we just didn't come through," admitted Hunt. "The most disappointing part was going 0-5 at the end of the season."

Thief River Falls was within reach of turning eight of those losses into wins, which would have translated into a 14-7 record. Three were really close losses, including a 39-38 defeat at the hands of Park Rapids; a 42-40 setback at Marshall County Central; and a 45-41 decision at Detroit Lakes. Those could have easily gone the other way. The Prowlers were also in position to win maybe five others, but wound up losing to Fergus Falls by five, 43-38; Warren by six, 40-34; East Grand Forks by seven, 55-48; Roseau by eight, 52-44; and to Warren, again, by ten, 64-54.

It was, pointed out Hunt, a very competitive schedule. Nine of the 12 different opponents on the Prowlers' schedule this winter were considered legitimate conference, district or regional contenders. Warren did emerge as the Region 8A champion and Fergus Falls won the Region 8AA title.

"We got blown out in a couple of games, but I thought we played pretty competitive basketball for the most part," mentioned Hunt.

Thief River Falls improved its defensive play, cut down on turnovers and rebounded better this year than the Prowlers did in their two previous years under Hunt, but a 37 per cent shooting mark from the field for the year was too much of a handicap to overcome. And too many of those misses came inside.

Guards John Brandt and Mark Bondy led the team in the field goal percentage department, both shooting 41 per cent from the floor. Brandt was a busy 107-for-258, averaging 12.7 points per game, while Bondy was 43-for-105, averaging 5.4 points per game. Brandt also led the team in field goal percentage (81 per cent on a 52-for-64 showing) and led the team with 39 steals to complete a fine all-around season for the 6-1 senior. Bondy, a 6-0 junior, led the team with 48 assists. Brandt had 43.

But while Brandt scored in double figures, nobody else averaged more than a half-dozen. Front-line performers Jeff Langan, Tim Kruse, Jeff Hamerlinck and Randy Erickson all played hard and all had their moments, but it was an extremely tough year for the Prowlers' forwards and centers, admitted Hunt.

Erickson led the team in rebounding with 123 in 21 games and became an accomplished shot-blocker with 49 of them this winter. Kruse pulled down 105 rebounds and Hamerlinck had an even 100.

Bondy will be the only starter back next year. Ryan Drees, a 5-8 junior, saw some playing time at a guard this winter, and Scott Fowler, a 6-3 junior, played some at forward.

Meanwhile, the Lincoln junior varsity struggled through a 4-13 campaign this winter and the freshmen were below .500, too.

"The Thief River Falls basketball program is structurally sound now," pointed out Hunt, "but that's for the future. Right now we've got to pay our dues, I guess."

In breaking down the Prowlers' 1983-84 season, they opened with losses to Roseau 52-44, Detroit Lakes 45-41, Moorhead 66-48 and Argyle 66-48.

They won their first game in the opening round of their first Holiday Invitational, a 53-39 win over what turned out to be a very fine Kennedy team. Eventual Holiday Invitational winner Fertile-Beltrami beat the Prowlers 53-39 in the eight-team tournament semifinals, with Thief River Falls bouncing back to beat Marshall County Central 47-45 for third place.

Rest of the Prowlers' mid-season showing included wins over Crookston 45-44 in overtime and 58-54, Mahnomen 50-33 and Middle River 48-35. During that stretch they lost to Bemidji 84-39, Marshall County Central 42-40, East Grand Forks 55-48, Warren 64-54 and Fergus Falls 43-38.

That season-ending five-game losing streak included regular season setbacks at the hands of Bemidji 70-54, Park Rapids 39-38, East Grand Forks 77-40 and Warren 40-34, plus a 65-34 opening round North Sub-Region 8AA tournament loss to Bemidji.

Prowlers Lose First Matches

Season-opening match for the 1984 Lincoln high school tennis team Monday at the Grand Forks Tennis Center saw the Prowlers lose both portions of their triangular assignment against Crookston and Detroit Lakes.

Crookston wound up with identical 4-1 wins over Thief River Falls and Detroit Lakes, while the Lakers edged the Prowlers 3-2. That left Crookston as the triangular winner with 8 points, followed by Detroit Lakes with 4 and Thief River Falls 3.

Thief River Falls' lone win against Crookston came at No. 1 singles, where sophomore Al Erickson outlasted Jeff Claassen 3-6, 7-6, 7-6. He won the second-set tie-breaker 7-1 and took the third-set tie-breaker 8-6.

Against Detroit Lakes, the youthful Prowlers had winners in junior Dan Imgrund by a 6-3, 6-3 margin over Jim Poehl at No. 2 singles, and by junior Jeff Vanyo by a 6-4, 6-0 score over Andy Thomas at No. 3 singles.

"I was happy with the way our singles played," reported Thief River Falls coach Whitey Olson. "They played reasonably well, and if they will go on from there and improve they'll be all right."

Thief River Falls' next outing will be Thursday with a 3:15 p.m. triangular in East Grand Forks, where the Prowlers and Green Wave will be joined by Moorhead.

Prowlers' Track Season To Open Friday Indoors

Both Lincoln high school track teams will visit the Winter Shows Building in Crookston Friday for a 4 p.m. invitational meet.

It will be the 1984 season opener for the Lincoln boys. The Lincoln girls began their schedule last Friday at the same site, trailing a five-team field that was headed by host Crookston with 79 points, followed by East Grand Forks with 35, Bagley 34, Park Rapids 30 and Thief River Falls 27.

Fourteen of the 25 Lincoln boys out for track this spring are juniors. There are only four seniors, four sophomores and three freshmen out for the sport. The small numbers in the lower grades is a major concern for head coach Tim Olson.

"Team-wise, it may be a struggle to get points," admitted Olson, "but we've got some individuals who should do well for us."

Among the individuals showing early season promise are senior Randy Swenson, who is expected to excell in the 300-meter hurdles; junior Chris Helle, who has a great deal of potential as a pole vaulter; and a group of weightmen that includes juniors Shannon Kezar, Gus Miller and Jeff Johnson, plus sophomore Dave Gobell.

Olson says the Prowlers should also be able to put together a strong sprint medley relay unit.

Rest of the current roster includes seniors Kevin Kezar, Tom Walker and Jeff Langan; juniors Scott Fowler, Roger Gonsorowski, Tim Peterson, Troy Skime, Dave Dalager, Paul Helgeland, Kraig Kainz, Steve Rendulich, Dave Olson and Kurt Phillip; sophomores Dan Iverson, John Tranby and Bruce Paulson; and freshmen Brian Stark, Paul Brandt and Jim Parnham.

Thief River Falls will be back in the Winter Shows Building Tuesday for another 4 p.m. indoor meet. First outdoor meet of the season is scheduled to be held Thursday, April 19, at Roseau. Thief River Falls' Quentin Jones Invitational is scheduled Tuesday, May 1, and the Thief River Falls Invitational will be held Tuesday, May 8. Both of those events will feature competition for boys and girls.

NCC Baseball, Softball Openers Set This Week

Baseball and softball teams at Northland community college are scheduled to open their 1984 schedules this week.

Northland baseball opener was scheduled today (Wednesday), with a 1 p.m. doubleheader in Grand Forks against the University of North Dakota junior varsity.

Softball opener for the Northwomen will be Saturday when they participate in an eight-team invitational tournament at Inver Hills community college in the Twin Cities area.

Softball

Lack of a proven battery combination — a pitcher and a catcher — may create problems for the 1984 Northland softball squad.

"They're enthusiastic," reported Northland coach Deb Jacobson. "They seem to have good speed, and their fielding and throwing is improving."

But without an experienced pitcher and catcher in fast pitch softball, you have an uphill battle on your hands.

Lynette Huot, a Lincoln high school graduate who is attending the area vocational-technical institute (AVTI) is expected to tackle the pitching chores, and the search continues for a catcher, said Jacobson.

Three sophomores are back from last year, including Kim Phillips, Lancaster; Gwen Nylen, Thief River Falls; and MaryAnn Smith, Red Lake. A first-year sophomore on the roster is Paula Nelson, Middle River.

Freshmen on hand include Brenda Dahl, Newfolden; Kathy Pietruszewski, East Grand Forks; Mary Josephson, Red Lake Falls; Connie Sauve, Red Lake Falls; Jenyne Beehler, Finlayson; and Kari Skoglund, Middle River; plus AVTI student Jenee Frolander, Warroad.

Northland will follow its Inver Hills trip with Northwest Division doubleheaders at Brainerd April 18 and at Fergus Falls April 25 before the home opener for the Northwomen is played Friday, April 27, vs. the University of Minnesota-Crookston, a 3 p.m. divisional twinbill.

NCC Softball

Sat., April 14 — at Inver Hills Invitational; Wed., April 18 — at Brainerd, 3 p.m.; Wed., April 25 — at Fergus Falls, 3 p.m.; Fri., April 27 — vs. UMC, 3 p.m.; Sat., May 5 — vs. Brainerd, 1 p.m.; Mon., May 7 — vs. Mesabi, 1 p.m.; Wed., May 9 — vs. Fergus Falls, 3 p.m.; Thurs., May 10 — at UMC, 3 p.m.; Fri., May 11 — vs. Rainy River, 5 p.m.; Sat., May 12 — at UMC Invitational.

Baseball

Northland enjoyed one of its best baseball seasons over in 1983 when the Northmen were the host team for the Region 13 tournament and were contenders for a Northwest Division title that would have also brought the Minnesota Community College Conference (MCCC) state tournament to Thief River Falls.

But with just two sophomores back from that team, Northland isn't likely to match that kind of success in 1984.

Kevin Sanders of Thief River Falls and Keith Huerd of Warroad, a pair of pitchers, are the veterans on hand from a year ago. In addition to graduation losses, two other front-line sophomores transferred closer to their Fargo homes after the winter quarter when versatile football - hockey - baseball players Bob Rockwood and Ladd Bjugson enrolled at Moorhead State and North Dakota State, respectively.

Northland coach Chet Engelman knows the Northmen will have their hands full trying to win some games this spring. The losses of Rockwood and Bjugson, both former Fargo American Legion baseball standouts, will be keenly felt, he said. "We'll just have to do the best we can with what we have," he offered.

Rest of the squad members include sophomore Wade Hruby of Thief River Falls; along with freshmen Todd Gschwend, East Grand Forks; Bruce Nephew, Fertile; Darris Dahl, Bagley; Alan Melvie, Newfolden; Jerry Bjerke, Thief River Falls; Steve Lien, Bagley; Chris Dahlmann, Warren; Ken Porter, Warren; Mike Bellanger, Waubun; and Tony Holcomb, Fairbault.

Northland will begin Northwest Division play a week from today, with a Wednesday, April 18, doubleheader at the University of Minnesota - Crookston. The Northmen are scheduled to play four road doubleheaders before their home opener arrives Saturday, May 5, vs. UMC.

DNR NEWS

Bear Permit Drawing

Monday, April 16 is the final day for hunters who want to enter the drawing that will allocate 3,680 licenses to hunt bear in Minnesota this fall, the Department of Natural Resources reminded.

Application blanks for the drawing are available from state license agents.

Season starts Sept. 1 and ends Oct. 14 with a limit of one adult bear per licensed hunter.

Either firearms or bow and arrow may be used. The license fee is $15 for residents and $100 for non-residents, plus a 75 cent issuing fee.

For those who wish to hunt together in a group, their applications must be placed in the same envelope and it will be treated as one application in the drawing. No more than four persons may apply together in a group.

Perference in the drawing will be given to those who applied unsuccessfully in previous years — providing they have their driver's license number or Public Safety ID number.

Officials said the numbering system is the only means the DNR has of keeping a record of those who have applied in past years.

Free Tree Seedlings

Communities, schools and non-profit civic organizations can still obtain free tree seedlings from the Department of Natural Resources for Arbor Day planting.

DNR's Forestry Division said orders will be accepted until April 13. Seedling requests should be made to the nearest DNR Area of District Forestry Office. Persons seeking additional information on obtaining seedlings may call (612) 296-5958.

By state law, the seedlings must be used to establish or reforest woodlots, windbreaks and shelterbelts or used for erosion control, soil and water conservation or permanent food and cover for wildlife.

Among the tree species available are Norway pine, white pine, jack pine, scotch pie, soft maple and caragena.

Ice, Runoff Dangers

Recent warm weather has caused many Minnesota rivers to begin flowing and has deteriorated the ice conditions on the state's lakes. This can be a potential problem — especially to children, late season ice fisherman and early season canoeists, according to the Department of Natural Resources.

Kim Elverum, DNR Boat and Water Safety Coordinator, noted that ice conditions have varied considerably, but only one person was listed as a water fatality this past winter compared to 20 the previous year.

He warned, however, that the spring runoff on rivers and streams presents hazards for canoeists and rafters.

"Each year in the United States, canoeists die in accidents in the cold, fast waters," said Elverum.

"Spring canoeing is not for the beginner. The strong runoff current increases the difficulty of avoiding objects and can even capsize a skillful canoeist. It is essential that proper training be received and that a personal flotation devide (life preserver) be worn before any river attempts are made."

Elverum also warned of the dangers of lowhead dams which are found on many popular canoeing streams. "These dams have claimed 26 people in the past 10 years in the state. The most recent case occurred near Austin this spring."

There is a powerful recirculating current below the dam which can trap and hold victims as well as canoes and boats. The best advice, according to Elverum, is to keep well upstream or downstream of these structures.

Conservation Officer Jobs

Department of Natural Resources has announced that the agency is seeking applications for the position of Conservation Officer.

Conservation Officers enforce laws and regulations under DNR jurisdiction such as game and fish regulations, snowmobile regulations, water laws, and regulations governing use of state parks, state trails, state forests, campgrounds, wild and scenic rivers and scientific and natural areas.

Applicants must, at a minimum, be currently enrolled in the last year of academic instruction in a law enforcement curriculum and must possess, or be eligible to receive, a valid license as a full-time Minnesota peace officer prior to appointment as a Conservation Officer.

Questions regarding the license requirements should be directed to the Minnesota Peace Officer Standards and Training (POST) Board (612) 296-2620.

Examination will consist of an experience and training rating and possibly a multiple choice written test. There will also be an oral examination, physical strength and agility test, psychological evaluation, medical examination and background investigation.

Positions are open in both the metropolitan and outstate areas. The current list of eligible applicants will be abolished and the new eligible list will be in effect two years unless eligible applicants are notified otherwise.

Exam was last given in March, 1982. There were 172 applicants and 20 new officers were hired.

Further information and applications may be obtained at area offices of the State Job Service or the Minnesota Department of Employee Relations, third floor, Space Center, 444 Lafayette Road, St. Paul, MN 55101.

Trout Streams

Department of Natural Resources has announced that special fishing regulations will be in effect on portions of three Minnesota trout streams this spring.

Streams affected are Trout Run Creek and South Branch of the Root River in southeastern Minnesota and the Knife River on the North Shore of Lake Superior in northeastern Minnesota.

For 1.3 miles on Trout Run Creek in Winona county below County Highway 43, only artificial lures with a single hook and flies with a single hook may be used for angling, and all trout larger than 11 inches in total length must be immediately returned to the stream. The daily and possession limit of trout smaller than 11 inches is five.

On a 1.6 mile section of the South Branch Root River in Fillmore county upstream from Highway 12, only artificial lures with a single hook and flies with a single hook may be used for angling and all trout must be immediately returned to the river. This Section of water lies entirely within the boundaries of Forestville State Park.

"The special regulations in southeastern Minnesota are intended to provide a diversity of fishing opportunities, increase the size of brown trout available to the angler and allow larger fish to be caught more than one time," said DNR Fisheries Chief Richard Hassinger.

Those stream sections having special resulations will be posted.

"Support for the rule changes was shown at public meetings held in Preston and Chatfield on March 5 and 6," said Hassinger. "The three miles of stream in which these regulations will be in effect represent less than one per cent of the 345 miles of trout waters in southeastern Minnesota."

On those portions of the Knife River in Lake and St. Louis counties upstream from County Road 9 the open fishing season shall run from May 15 to September 30, compared to an April 14th opener for other state trout streams. Below this posted boundary the season shall be continuous, as in the past.

Daily and possession limit of rainbow trout will be five, with a minimum size of 10 inches. Not more than one rainbow trout may be over 16 inches in total length.

From February 15 until May 15 of each year a special zone has been established (which will be posted) at the mouth of the Knife River. In this posted area only one rainbow trout over 16 inches in total length can be in possession while fishing either from shore or a boat. On other streams, three fish over 16 inches are allowed.

Special regulations on the Knife River are designed to protect spawning steelhead rainbow trout and allow these fish to be caught more than one time, Hassinger explained. A public meeting to discuss experimental regulations was held at Two Harbors on February 8.

Season for fishing stream trout runs from April 14 to September 30, except below posted boundaries on tributaries to Lake Superior where the season is continuous. Anglers are reminded that except for changes made by special regulations, other state fishing laws are still in effect.

New Vikings Coach Hails From Oklee

Newest member of the Minnesota Vikings' coaching staff in the National Football League is a Oklee native.

Bud Bjornaraa, a physical education instructor, track coach, girls gymnastics coach, football coach, strength and conditioning coach and head trainer at Apple Valley high school since the school opened in 1976, has joined the Vikings' staff as strength coach.

Bjornaraa was born and raised in the Oklee area. He attended grade school and high school in Oklee, attended the University of Minnesota and graduated from the University of North Dakota. He is the son of Thorwald and Geline Bjornaraa and the brother of Mrs. Twyla Fore of Oklee.

Bjornaraa is a clinician on strength training, nutrition and conditioning. He is also an associate editor of the National Strength and Conditioning Association Journal and is the author of a widely used text on strength training, nutrition and conditioning, "Weight Training Systematized".

Bjornaraa says that caring for people, being persistant and having faith in humanity are some of the aspects of being a successful coach. "You have to be consistant and stay with your work schedule. Sometimes I wish there were 36 hours in a day," he says. "Time management is something we should all work on. I am goal-oriented and like to finish what I start."

According to Bjornaraa, being named the strength coach for the Vikings is something that has been in the back of his mind since the team was formed.

As far as Bjornaraa's goals for the Vikings, he says he wants to upgrade the team by making them stronger, so they can out-muscle opponents physically, while still retaining quickness. "All the players will have to have a common goal, so that we can perform only short of miracles and can't see failures. We all need to be geared to success," he said.

There is a verse that Bjornaraa says he likes to use, "Good, better, best. Never let it rest, until the good get better and the better get best," he says. "I have the ability to fall asleep anywhere, so that is maybe why I don't stop," he says.

Bjornaraa graduated from UND in 1961 with a major in physical education. He also started and supervised the first off-season weight training and conditioning program at the school while a student there. Since then he has been involved in education and coaching for 23 years at five different schools in Minnesota and Wisconsin. He has also worked with the U.S. Olympic track and hockey teams. He is known nationally for the expertise in strength and conditioning, and speaks at coaches clinics throughout the country.

Bud and his wife, Lauria, have three daughters: Jackie, 23; Jaynie, 22; and Jill, 14; plus a four-month-old granddaughter, Briget Marie.

New Manitoba Fish Regulations Will Be Observed During 1984

Province of Manitoba has introduced new fishing regulations to protect the fragile, slow-growing environments of its lakes from overfishing and from the introduction of foreign biota, note Manitoba officials.

In 1982, the government introduced maximum size limits for northern pike, walleye and lake trout. Under this regulation, an angler is allowed to keep only one fish larger than the length designated in the booklet "Sports Fishing Guide". The rest of the catch must consist of smaller, eating fish. One of the main reasons for this regulation is that the larger fish are the most prolific spawners and also, through the process of selection, the most hardy and desirable breeding stock.

Another initiative, started in 1982, is the high-quality management of certain remote lakes where the lodge industry is a major user of fish resources. This regulation designates "trophy lakes" and incorporates reduced creel limits in addition to the maximum size limits, with the objective of maintaining and enhancing high-quality fishing for all anglers. The special limits are four walleye, four pike and one lake trout. The designated lakes are Sickle, Chicken, Ghost, Lasthope, Hunter, Willis, Allen, Black Trout, Rushford, Max, Gunisao, Nueltin, South Knife, Bain, Otter, Maria and North Knife. These regulations were in fact requested by lodge operators onn the lakes in question, following a test period when anglers adhered to the intent of the regulations on a voluntary basis.

In 1984 the government introduced other new management principles to improve the quality of angling in Manitoba. These include the restriction on importation of waterdogs, leeches, crayfish and live mannows, in order to prevent the introduction into Manitoba waters of potentially harmful biota.

And because smallmouth bass and hatchery-raised trout are found in relatively few lakes in Manitoba, the limit for bass has been decreased from eight in 1983 to four in 1984 (daily and possession), and for stocked brook, brown and rainbow trout, and splake, from six to three. "The special husbandry of these species gives anglers a variety of fishing opportunities found in few places in North America," says Bob Bridge, director of Marketing for Travel Manitoba, the tourism branch of the Department of Business Development and tourism. "The pressure on Manitoba lakes has increased year by year," Bridge says. "Waters situated within an easy drive of major metropolitan regions simply cannot withstand the encroachment which has moved steadily farther and farther north every season. A 20-pound pike can be 25 years old, and is much too valuable, because of its capability as a breeding fish, to be routinely caught and killed for eating."

Another program, called "Go Barbless," was launched in 1979 to encourage fishermen to return trophy-sized fish to the water. The promotional campaign, in which Travel Manitoba co-operates with the Department of Natural Resources, encourages the practice of snipping off or pinching closed with pliers the barbs on hooks to allow easier release of game fish.

"The "Go Barbless" campaign recognizes that fishermen will want to keep a few good eating fish, or a trophy fish for mounting," says George Nelson, sport fishing representative in the Department of Natural Resources. "But uninjured small fish and excess trophy fish should be returned to the water to live and spawn so that Manitoba's 100,000 lakes will continue to constitute the finest freshwater sport fishing area in North America. It takes only a few minutes to pull a trophy fish from the water; but it takes nature many more years to grow one."

Nelson adds that the idea of regulations is not to frighten people away from fishing; it is merely to promote and encourage practices already adopted by many sportminded fishermen.

Shooting Range Opens For 1st Match Sunday

Pennington County Sportsmen's club announced its schedule of metallic silhouette matches for the summer, starting with an open match this Sunday.

This should offer interested shooters a chance to get the kinks out of their systems from winter inactivity. International Handgun Metallic Silhouette Association (IHMSA) events, both centerfire and rimfire, will be offered. In addition, NRA events in smallbore rifle and hunter's pistol will be available.

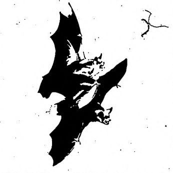
Entry fee will be $2 per event or $8 for all events, as time permits. Range opens at 10 a.m. This match is unsanctioned and open to any shooter. Awards will be ribbons.

Sanctioned IHMSA and NRA matches are scheduled for May 19-20; June 16-17; July 14-15; and August 18-19.

Entry fees will be $6 per event in IHMSA centerfire; and $5 per event in IHMSA rimfire and NRA events. IHMSA rules require that a shooter must be a member of IHMSA in order to enter their second match.

Pennington county Sportsmen's club range is located on the east side of the Thief River, three miles north of town on Dewey Avenue.

Overnight camping (primitive) is available by pre-notification of arrival time. For further information contact: Irving Swanson, 812 N. Duluth Ave., Thief River Falls, MN., 56701; phone (218-681-1049.



OFTEN FEARED and misunderstood, bats are actually beneficial mammals which eat large numbers of mosquitoes, according to officials of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources nongame wildlife program who recently completed the state's first large-scale investigation of the animal.

Nongame Wildlife Study Done On Bats

Natural caves and abandoned mines in eastern Minnesota provide important habitat for four of the seven bat species native to the state. This finding is the result of Minnesota's first large-scale investigation on the distribution and abundance of bats.

Most exciting find has been the discovery of the largest known winter concentration of Keen's Myotis in North America. Hibernating in the deep caverns of an abandoned iron ore mine, the population may number into the hundreds of thousands. Keen's Myotis is similar in appearance to Minnesota's most common species, the Little Brown Bat, but has larger ears and more silky fur. A rare species, it has been documented only from a small number of localities.

Another uncommon species, the Eastern Pipistrelle, has been found in small numbers at several localities. Restricted to the southeastern corner of the state, the Pipistrelle inhabits limestone caves and inactive sand mines. To date, only winter roost sites have been identified. Researchers are still puzzled by the absence of any known breeding colonies in the state.

Bats are among the most misunderstood animals in Minnesota. Myths and legends abound. Although they can become a pest when they take up residence in homes and buildings, bats' voracious appetites for flying insects including mosquitoes provide important benefits to humans. A big brown bat, for instance, can eat from 3,000 to 7,000 mosquitoes per night.

One of the principal goals of the study is to gain a better understanding of these poorly understood species. Directed by Dr. Elmer C. Birney of the Bell Museum of Natural History, the project is funded from donations to the nongame wildlife tax checkoff.

Swim Lessons Will Be Offered At Florian Park

Plans are already underway for the summer swimming lessons that will be offered at Florian Park.

Swimming lessons will be offered July 9-27, with program officials allowing 10 days for instruction, two days for testing and three days for bad weather.

Beginners, advanced beginners, intermediate, swimmers, junior lifesaving and advanced lifesaving (for ages 15-and-over) lessons will be offered, and an adult class will also be available if there is enough interest.

Swimming registration will be held Wednesday, June 27, at 1 p.m. at the park. Officials urge participants to preregister by sending a check for $10 to Janice Borowicz, Route 2, Box 93, Strandquist, MN 56758. Swimmers should include their name, parent's names, address, age, telephone number, school and the swimming class they would like to enroll in with their registration fee.

It is important to preregister, explained Borowicz, so all of the classes can be set up before the first day of lessons. Questions about the lessons can be answered by calling 478-2487. Program officials will try to run the class schedule so that communities that have buses coming in will not have to wait all afternoon. A definite time will be posted later.

There will be five Water Safety Instructors teaching in the program this summer. Last year the program featured 219 participants. While lessons are being conducted there will be two lifeguards on duty to supervise the children that are in the "free swimming area," set up for those not taking the lessons at that time who may want to practice their skills.

WANTON WASTE is the charge faced by an eastern Marshall county family who reportedly legally killed and tagged these three bucks during last fall's hunting season, then hung them up and allowed them to remain unprocessed through the fall, winter and spring. Minnesota conservation officers have brought the wanton waste charge and the case will be heard in Marshall county court in Warren. With the onset of warm spring weather the decomposition of the carcasses became more evident. Conservation officer supervisor Craig Backer of Thief River Falls encouraged citizens who are aware of violations of the state's game and fish laws to report them. "Utilization of the state's resources through hunting and fishing is a privilege," Backer said, "and those who abuse the privilege should be held accountable for their actions."

National Wildlife Federation News Release

For more than 20 years, most climbs up the Himalayan mountains looked like Cecil B. DeMille productions, with hundreds of climbers, porters and porters for the porters.

Now the trend is toward smaller expeditions of four to six people — a return to the earliest foreign climbs of the Himalayas, according to the current issue of International Wildlife, a bimonthly publication of the National Wildlife Federation.

Himalayas, in Nepal on the northeast border of India, were not open to foreign climbers until 1949. Those early climbs were daring and solitary, usually with fewer than 10 climbers.

Himalayas gradually became a popular place for climbers from all over the world, especially after Sr. Edmund Hillary climbed Mount Everest in the late '50s. The sport became so commercial that some climbers began to carry and endorse products, generating lucrative book, television and equipment-advertising tie-ins.

An example of the extravagance of these climbs was a 1973 climb of Mount Everest by an Italian team which included 44 climbers, 70 Sherpas (Nepalese high-altitude porters), two helicopters with 10 crewmen, five radio technicians and hundreds of porters.

These overstaffed expeditions were so outrageous that Sir Hillary said, "For God's sake, leave the poor mountain alone."

By the mid '70s, a few hardcore European and American mountaineers began doing some solo ascents of the biggest peaks of the Himalayas, including two men who went up the mountain without oxygen and another who climbed Mount Everest alone from the Tibetan side.

Though two climbers vanished on solo climbs, these mountaineers encouraged a new breed of climber to try the sport. Instead of looking at the climb as a commercial conquest of a peak, they have embarked on a personal challenge, with few barriers between them and the mountain, according to International Wildlife.

Now it is typical for less than half a dozen climbers to make a climb, with eighty low-altitude porters carrying several weeks' worth of food and fuel to the base camp. The climbers themselves carry the food and fuel between the high camps on the mountain; once past base camp, they are on their own.

As one climber says, "Small expeditions like ours are best. Everyone knows everyone else, their strengths, limitations, habits. It is a great advantage. . ."

With additional peaks opening up every year, and the Chinese opening up more and more of Tibet to foreign climbers, the Himalayas seem "practically endless." And they are sure to remain a test of personal conquest and challenge.

German Studies Students From LHS Recognized

Students from Lincoln high school were recognized for their work in German studies by Concordia college, Moorhead, during German scholars days held February 9 to 11.

Students from high schools in Iowa, Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin were invited to participate in the three-day event which was sponsored by the International Language Villages and the department of German at Concordia.

Intent of the weekend was to give students an in-depth view of the college's one-year intensive program in German studies at the International Language Village near Bemidji. The program also brought students to the Concordia campus to discuss the liberal arts program, including studies in German. In addition, the scholars were featured guests at a recognition luncheon with Concordia president, Dr. Paul Dovre and state language specialist, Suzanne Jebe.

German scholars days participants were eligible for scholarships to attend the institute for German studies during the 1984-85 academic year.

Institute, initiated in the fall of 1983, provides a round-the-clock German environment in which students are immersed in the culture as well as in the language. By attending both semesters students can earn a German major in one year.

Concordia College is a four year liberal arts institution of the American Lutheran church with an enrollment of 2,500 students. It offers majors in 36 areas of study and coursework in 15 pre-professional programs.

Badger Team Is Knowledge Bowl Winner

Quality of the competition is indicated by the team totals which show that 46 of the 60 questions in the championship round were answered correctly.

The contest involves questions asked orally with three four-member teams competing against one another at one time. As soon as a team member believes he or she knows the answer to a question, he or she pushes a contact tape which signals a computer. Fifteen seconds is then allowed for the team to arrive at an answer.

If the answer given is correct, the team receives one point. If the answer is incorrect, the second team to respond has a chance to answer. If that team is unable to answer correctly, the question is repeated in its entirety and the third team may answer. Fifteen second response time is allowed in each case.

Teams often anticipate the full question and activate the signal before the full question has been read. In those instances, the person reading the question stops when the signal is activated. Because the questions often take a turn before they are completed, anticipating is a calculated risk.

For instance, one question Monday was: "Australia may be called 'nature's attic' because of the number of primitive forms of life there that have died out in other parts of the world. Of these five native Australian animals — the bandicoot, the dingo, the koala, the wallaby and the wombat — only one is a placental mammal. Which one is it?"

The Badger team correctly answered "the dingo" before reading of the list of animals was completed.

To illustrate the versatility of the questions in the final round, here are some examples:

(1) Battle maidens of Scandinavian mythology are called:

(3) What basic unit of weight corresponds to one sixteenth of the average weight of the oxygen atom?

(5) What verb tense is used in the following statement: "She had been planning to go to college before her grades arrived."?

(8) The following techniques are all used for what purpose in art: superposition, shadowing, vanishing point, convergence, texture gradient?

(11) The breaking down of rock due to exposure to the atmosphere is called:

(15) Name the Indian tribe who adopted Daniel Boone.

(18) Parathormone regulates the body's calcium level and is produced in what gland?

(19) Who formulated the periodic law and the periodic table of the elements?

(24) This animal according to American Indian legend is a cultural hero and trickster of the West. Its name in American slang means a contemptible person. What is the common name of the canis latrans of North America, noted for its loud prolonged nocturnal howling?

(30) LaTraviata and Rigoletto were two of the operas written by:

(33) The eohippus is probably an ancestor of what present-day animal?

(38) If I spend one-third of my money, lose two-thirds of the remainder and have $4 left, how much did I have to start with?

(42) When Cortes invaded Mexico he had to conquer the Indian emperor Montezuma. What Spanish leader, in order to gain his objective, had to conquer the Indian emperior Atahualpa?

(43) $2,500 earned $87.50 interest in six months. At what rate was it invested?

(51) If a circle is divided into a number of equal arcs, the tangents at their ends form what kind of polygon?

(60) The smallest particle that can exist as an element is:

Answers: (1) Valkyries; (3) atomic weight; (5) past perfect; (8) to create an illusion of depth or perspective; (11) weathering; (15) Shawnee) (18) parathyroid; (19) Mendeleev; (24) coyote; (30) Giuseppe Verdi; (33) horse; (38) $18; (42) Pizarro; (43) seven per cent; (51) regular; (60) an atom.

Order of finish of teams in the competition and their point totals through the first five qualifying rounds include the following:

Blackduck 146; Greenbush 132; Badger 119; Blackduck 118; Warroad, 109; Roseau, 106; Baudette, 106; McIntosh, 104; Lancaster, 101; Grygla, 100; Karlstad, 100; Hallock, 99; Argyle, 98; Middle River, 94; Baudette, 93; Middle River, 90; Halstad, 89; Stephen, 83; and Roseau, 81.

Council Hears Questions On Improvements

streets, about whether they would be charged additional costs for heavier construction. They were assured that they would be charged the same rate of $4.26 per front foot as residents of other streets, in an attempt to be fair to both. Although they have somewhat better streets, they also must live with heavier traffic noted engineer David Kildahl. Since those streets also receive more use from the public, a larger percentage of their cost is picked up with public funds allocated by the state. About $272,000 worth of state aid funds will be spent on the project.

While most of the project will involve repairs and an overlay of approximately one-and-a-half inches of blacktop, excavating and backfilling will be required in some areas, including a new access road to be built between the city sports arena and Highway 59.

Some of the major expenses involved in the project include: $285,000 for water main replacement; $13,700 for insulation and replacement of selected sections of water service lines; $403,936 for bituminous paving overlay on various streets; $30,000 for miscellaneous street and curb and gutter repair; $31,000 for widening and construction of new curb and gutter on Spruce Avenue between Gulf and First streets; with approximately $41,000 to be spent to overlay parking lots.

Mike Mongoven of the park and recreation department noted that a request to dredge a boat channel in the Kingsbury Park area had been turned down by the Minnesota department of natural resources. That area was reported to have become a mosquito problem due to gradual filling in of the channel.

Ted Storck, who lives in the neighborhood requested that council call for a hearing on the permit. Storck said that he had gotten the impression, in talking with the area hydrologist, that the project would be approved if they "asked for everything," meaning putting the channel all the way through to the river on both ends. Although the cost of installing a 48 inch culvert, which they had originally requested, was estimated at $2,500, Storck said he hadn't thought about the cost for the larger project. The park department had budgeted for that original project. Noting that it would not obligate the city to any immediate action on the project, council moved to request the department of natural resources to hold a hearing on the matter.

In other business, the council:

— Authorized placing of the signal light at the intersection of First Street and Horace Avenue on a flashing condition, 24 hours per day, seven days a week;

— Authorized the utilities department to enter an advertising campaign to counteract "misleading" advertising being done by Inter-City Gas, and also authorized the department to initiate a rebate program offering $200 for households which convert to dual heating systems including off-peak electric heat;

— Passed a resolution in opposition to a bill in the state legislature requiring them to publish the minutes of their meetings. (Alderman Ken Murphy voted in opposition to the resolution.);

— Passed a resolution in opposition to another bill which would forbid setting residency requirements for city employees;

— Granted another four-month purchase option on the Carnegie Library building to Gerald Mundt, for $500. Mundt is studying a $500,000 proposal to renovate and add onto the building as an office complex;

— Authorized Northwestern Hospital to participate in a municipal revenue bond program for replacement of major equipment, with no apparent obligation to the city. Bonding would be done through the city of Duluth, with Northwestern Hospital expecting to receive about $790,000 of a $14 million bond issue.

— Authorized purchase of a crane-dragline from the Minnesota department of surplus property at a cost of $17,500;

— Noted that a number of legal suits had been filed against the city, including one from property owners objecting to the Gunderson property rezoning.

Legal Notices

NOTICE
NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS — Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be received at the office of the Middle River Snake River Watershed District, 122 West Johnson Avenue, Warren, Minnesota until 4:00 P.M. o'clock on April 26, 1984 for the rental of fully operated excavation equipment. Proposals are being requested for dozers and crawler mounted draglines or backhoes. The draglines and backhoes may range from ¾ cubic yards and larger and must be equipped with a boom, bucket and counter weights appropriately matched for the type of machine. All equipment must be equipped with a Servis Recorder.

The works to be done consist of but is not limited to the clearing and disposal of trees and brush and the removal of sediment from drainage channels, disposal of rocks and the leveling of spoilbanks. The work required and the locations of the work will be designated by the engineer of the district.

The equipment must be modern and in good operating condition and furnished with capable and experienced operators. Deficient operations or maintenance which results in reduced production or poor workmanship will be cause for contract cancellation.

All equipment proposed will be considered and evaluated based on many factors including but not limited to the following: price, horsepower, machine rating, machine weight, track length, track width, track gauge, buckets available, boom lengths available and counterweights available.

Work will be paid by the hour and payment will be based on the time recorded on the Servis Recorder discs which must be turned over to the Engineer. Payments will be made on a monthly basis. The minimum hours per week will be 40 unless delayed by weather or equipment operating problems.

In addition to the payment for hourly work, the contractor will be eligible for a demobilization payment. The amount will be equivalent to 5 hours rental rate for each type of equipment authorized for use by the Engineer.

Demobilization payment will be included in the last payment for hourly work satisfactorily completed.

The District may cancel the contract at any time without cause by paying the demobilization payment.

The contractor may cancel the contract at any time without cause but forfeits the demobilization payment.

The type of equipment best suited for this project is dependent on the weather and other unknown job conditions. The district intends to rent equipment which in its opinion, will perform the required work at the least cost. Its evaluation factors will depend on conditions expected and the encountered which will likely change along the course of the work. The District will release and rent different equipment from time to time as it deems necessary to economically perform the required work.

The contractor, in making this proposal, promises to furnish the equipment listed for the prices shown subject to its availability. He does not promise to make or keep the equipment available to the district. He understands, however, the equipment availability may be a factor in the district's evaluation of equipment.

The contractor will be required to furnish certificates showing that he has workmans compensation insurance and liability insurance.

The Middle River-Snake River Watershed District reserves the right to reject any and all bids and to award contracts to other than the apparent low bidder.

Prairie Public TV Membership Drive Finished

Prairie Public Television surpassed a $303,248 goal in its tenth annual March membership drive, "Festival 84."

The 18-day event ended with $276,623 in pledges made to the six-stations non-commercial network. Pledge breaks in four movies — "Cat Ballou," "The Anderson Tapes," "Casino Royale," and "Lawrence of Arabia" on the following weekends pushed the total to $305,006, a record in PPTV's ten years of on-air fund-raising.

"Although we had to extend "Festival 84" slightly, we have a great feeling of appreciation toward the 4,382 viewers who pledged," said Prairie Public Television General Manager Dennis Falk. "Our goal of $303,248 was ambitious, but our viewers really came through as we explained that our goal was exactly what we needed to keep up going through the summer months," Falk added.

Prairie Public Television was one of 132 public television operations that conducted membership drives in a nationally-coordinated effort to raise funds for local public television stations. Nationwide, stations recorded a record level of dollars pledged — 634,193 callers pledged $30,613,800 to their local stations.

"It is very heartening to see this national outpouring of support for public television," said Michael Soper, PBS Director of Development and marketing. "The record figure for this year's shows that viewers agree with the theme: TV Worth Watching is TV Worth Paying For."

Hog Producer Inventory Is Down By 7%

Minnesota hog producers had an inventory of 3,950,000 hogs and pigs on March 1, down five per cent from a year earlier and seven per cent below the Dec. 1, 1983 inventory, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service. Of these, 530,000 were breeding hogs, down 10 per cent from a year earlier and 3,420,000 were market hogs and pigs, down four per cent.

Market hogs in the under-60-pound weight group were down 13 per cent from last year. Those in the 60 to 119-pound weihght group were down seven per cent. The 120 to 179-pound weight group was up 13 per cent while the number in the 180-pound-and-over group was down two per cent.

Minnesota's December-February pig crop totaled 1,425,000 head, 19 per cent below a year ago and 22 per cent below the September-November pig crop. The 190,000 sows that farrowed averaged 7.50 pigs per litter compared with 7.80 a year earlier.

Hog producers in Minnesota intend to farrow 240,000 sows during March-May. This would be 13 per cent below the number farrowed a year earlier. June-August farrowings are expected to total 205,000, an 11 per cent decrease.

Inventory of all hogs and pigs on March 1 in the 10 states conducting quarterly hog surveys is estimated at 39.5 million head, five per cent below last March. This is three per cent below March of 1962 and the lowest March inventory since 1976.

Breeding inventory, at 5.35 million head, was 10 per cent less than a year ago and four per cent less than March 1982. This is the lowest March breeding herd inventory since 1973 when estimates for these comparable 10 states became available. Market hog inventory, at 34.2 million head, was five per cent below last year and two per cent below two years ago.

A parade, a luncheon, a fashion show, the crowning of a queen, the annual ball — all part of the elaborate Cherry Blossom Festival soon to take place in Washington. But will there be a single cherry tree in bloom?

Have you ever seriously considered the uncertainties that so often hide certainty? Sure, nobody knows when the Tidal Basin will wear its wreath of blossoms. But everybody knows it will!

The mysteries of religion are like that. Do church bells call men to wonder . . . or to worship? Is faith the answer to every theological riddle . . . or is it simply trust in God?

It makes more sense to concentrate on a spiritual Certainty than to speculate about uncertainties. Trust in God. He will allay your doubts.

These fruit-filled Blueberry-Banana Muffins are sure to please kids. And who could resist the chocolaty goodness of these Brownie Meltaways? With a new game and a special treat, kids will be wearing big smiles even on the wettest spring afternoon.

Clark Actions Favored

Following editorial is from the Grand Forks Herald:

We like what we're hearing from William Clark, the successor to James Watt as secretary of the interior.

Specifically, we like the positive signals that Clark is sending on protection of wetlands.

He has supported increasing Duck Stamp fees to buy lands that would help offset the 500,000-acre yearly loss of national wetlands. Roughly one-tenth of that draining, filling and burning is taking place in North Dakota and Minnesota.

He has signed a major deal with a highly successful private wildlife organization, Ducks Unlimited, to enhance the management of public wetlands in the United States.

Ducks Unlimited has so far concentrated its efforts in Canadian waterfowl breeding areas; its new interest in U.S. lands is welcome. It will help make up for difficulties the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has had in adequately staffing and maintaining its waterfowl resources.

Secretary Clark also is trying hard to sell Duck Stamps to people besides hunters. The Federal government should have been doing a better job of promoting this stamp all along, for it probably is the easiest, most direct way of raising wetlands protection money from millions of conservation-minded non-hunters. Better advertising of the $7.50 migratory waterfowl stamp, a collector's item featuring some of the nation's finest wildlife art each year, is needed at post offices and refuges.

Typically hunters buy 90 per cent of the Duck Stamps. But there is no reason, given the broad values that wetlands have for many kinds of birds, animals and plant-life; for pollution and runoff control; and for natural beauty, that non-hunting Americans could not buy just as many as hunters. These stamps could be considered a wildlife version of Easter Seals or UNICEF Christmas cards.

So Interior Secretary Clark seems off to a good start on behalf of people who value wetlands. One hopes a little of his positive spirit will rub off on the many North Dakotans who still think federal wetlands buyers and biologists don't belong in farming country.

Saving The Historical Society

Following editorial was written by Elmer L. Andersen, former governor of Minnesota and member of the state historical society board, in the Princeton Union-Eagle which he publishes:

'When Alexander Ramsey, Minnesota's first territorial governor, made his inaugural address to the first territorial legislature in 1849, he urged the formation of an historical society and a university, emphasizing the importance of both to the development of the great state he envisioned Minnesota would become.

When Cass Gilbert designed the present capitol building, he laid out a plan for future development placing an historical society building on one side of the capitol and a courts building on the other. The supreme court decided it preferred to be in the capitol but the state provided a building for the Minnesota Historical society in the location Cass Gilbert suggested.

For nearly 75 years, under the direction of a series of distinguished historians and administrators, the Minnesota Historical society has served and grown. It has been a depository for the tangible evidence of our heritage, a publisher of periodicals and books, a resource for information and material, the protector and manager of historic sites throughout the state, and the state archivist to preserve and organize the records of actions of official agencies. And for some, most importantly, it has become alongside the capitol, a focal point for thousands of school children and other visitors learning the link between government and history through excellent informative exhibits and tours.

For years, the present structure has been too small and the society has studied options for expansion, waiting patiently for the best plan to develop and the funds to be available.

Meanwhile, space has been acquired in several locations pending fruition of long-range plans. The St. Paul school board's release of the Mechanic Arts high school building, located directly behind the society, became the obvious solution to the society's need to bring all its activities together, provide needed additional display space and enable it to serve the future as it has the past.

In a most careful and comprehensive way, the society has proceeded with its planning. It cleared with all interested agencies (the supreme court indicated the society development would not inhibit the court's own plans), obtained the support of Governor Perpich and the 1983 legislature, instituted a well-organized competitive program for architect selection, now approaching a final stage, and construction money was included in the governor's budget for final approval and appropriation at this session.

Suddenly, a few legislators in the House of Representatives have come up with the idea that the historical society building would be a good place for the new appeals court and Mayor Latimer has leaped in to suggest that the historical society be put in a building extending over the highway 94 freeway, unworkable for many reasons.

This historical society, under the direction of Russell Fridley, is one of the most respected institutions of its type in the country. Its carefully developed plans should not suddenly be set aside for a proposal that would endanger its mission, reduce its effectiveness, and break the link between government and history.

The new appeals court was established to expedite justice and accommodate litigants and lawyers. That function might be better served at a location most convenient for those the court serves.

It is important that citizens throughout the state communicate with legislators to urge protection of the Minnesota historical society from the rash action of a few legislators who have not taken time to study the long historical background, the complicated web of services carried on by the society and the importance of not disturbing a carefully-laid plan that promises great benefit in the future.

Something To Think About

Need a little mental stimulus to get the grey matter functioning? Try these questions as a starter. Answers are listed below — but don't peek until you give the quiz an honest effort:

(1) You wake up in a pitch-black room in a hunting lodge, and there's no light handy. In your duffel bag there are six black socks and six white ones, all mixed together. You want to pick out a matching pair. What is the smallest number of socks you can take out of the bag and be sure of getting a pair of the same color?

(2) A bass plug and some touch-up paint cost a total of $2.50. The plug costs $2 more than the paint. What is the cost of each?

(3) A deep-sea fishing boat is lying in the harbor. Over its side hangs a rope ladder, with its end just touching the water. Rungs of the ladder are one foot apart. The tide rises at the rate of eight inches an hour. At the end of six hours how many of the rungs will be covered?

(4) How much dirt is there in a hole 1 ft. by 1 ft. by 1 ft.?

(5) A camp cook wanted to measure four ounces of syrup out of a jug but he had only a five-oz. and a three-oz. bottle. How did he manage it?

(Answers)

(1) Three. Of any three socks taken out of the duffel bag, two must be the same color.

(2) Plug, $2.25; paint 25 cents.

(3) None, because the boat rises with the tide.

(4) None.

(5) He filled the three-ounce bottle and poured it into the five. Then he filled it again and poured it into the five until the five was full. That left one ounce in the three. Then he emptied the five back into the jug, and poured the one ounce that was in the three into the five. Then he filled the three and poured it into the five — making four ounces.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Young boy to friend studying a bathroom scale: "I don't know what it is but it must hurt. You should hear my Mom groan when she steps on it!"

---

The business executive was watching a psychologist interview applicants for a job as the executive's secretary. "What's 2 and 2?" the psychologist asked the first. "Four," she replied immediately. "It is 22," the second answered. "It could be either four or 22," the third replied. The psychologist turned to the executive. "The first girl has a very practical mind," he said. "The second has alertness and imagination. The third has both imagination and practicality. Which one are you going to hire?" "The one in the tight sweater," the executive smiled.

U.S. Senator
Rudy Boschwitz
reports to Minnesota

It wasn't too long ago that our faltering economy ate away at paychecks and profits of American workers and businesses. Perhaps more damaging, it eroded their confidence in our ability to do something about it.

Who could blame them? They watched double-digit inflation push costs way beyond their wages or profits. Their efforts to save or invest were thwarted by onerous taxes and inefficient controls by a large government bureaucracy. On top of that, interest rates were at record levels and the level of unemployment crept into double digits.

I'm proud to say it has all changed for the better. Today we're experiencing the most robust economic growth in 20 years. Inflation has shrunk from 12½ per cent to a little more than three per cent in just one year. Interest rates have dropped dramatically, with the prime down to half what it was. Taxes were cut in the first meaningful way since John Kennedy's administration. And unemployment has declined steadily, as businesses get back on their feet.

The housing industry has posted its best year in a long time, car sales are up substantially, retail business is beginning to hum, and fueling all this is increased consumer purchasing power.

Although this trend promises to continue, we must work to ensure long-term prosperity. We must press for policies that will put a solid foundation under our economic recovery — and we need to do it now. The pursuit of such a program is among my top priorities here in the Senate.

But it would be truly wrong to sit back and be satisfied with our progress. Because there is a different, much darker side of the picture. And you probably have guessed I'm speaking of deficits.

You've probably heard so much about deficits this year, as political parties square off to determine "whose fault they are," that you may grow cynical about them.

The problems of deficits are real, and the time to do something about them is now. David Stockman told those of us on the Senate Budget Committee last year that unless we changed the way we dealt with the budget — unless we got serious about getting our economic affairs in order — we would be seeing "$200 billion deficits as far as the eye can see."

This is as disturbing as it is unacceptable.

As you probably know, I've spent much of my five years in the Senate trying to control government spending. This year I proposed my "Fair Play Budget," a plan that would balance the budget in five years by allowing every function of the budget to grow at the same rate (five per cent) over five years. Early indications tell me it will have some positive impact, even in this election year.

I believe a responsible budget will grow from a groundswell of public support, so I've spent a lot of time describing my budget to anyone who will listen. My conclusion: people everywhere — in corporate boardrooms or mainstreet cafes — are concerned about deficits, and they want Congress to do something about them. I've taken my Fair Play Budget to newspaper editorial boards all across the country, from San Francisco to New York; I've used it as the topic for speaking engagements nationwide; and I've hawked it to most every group in Minnesota that I can fit into my schedule — and it is almost always well-received.

Why? Because it's simple, equitable, and bottom-line oriented (it balances the budget!)

(I've written a rather lengthy newsletter on the deficit and my Fair Play Budget. If you haven't received it yet, please let me know. If you have received it, I'd enjoy getting your response to it.)

Clark Actions Favored

Following editorial is from the Grand Forks Herald:

We like what we're hearing from William Clark, the successor to James Watt as secretary of the interior.

Specifically, we like the positive signals that Clark is sending on protection of wetlands.

He has supported increasing Duck Stamp fees to buy lands that would help offset the 500,000-acre yearly loss of national wetlands. Roughly one-tenth of that draining, filling and burning is taking place in North Dakota and Minnesota.

He has signed a major deal with a highly successful private wildlife organization, Ducks Unlimited, to enhance the management of public wetlands in the United States.

Ducks Unlimited has so far concentrated its efforts in Canadian waterfowl breeding areas; its new interest in U.S. lands is welcome. It will help make up for difficulties the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has had in adequately staffing and maintaining its waterfowl resources.

Secretary Clark also is trying hard to sell Duck Stamps to people besides hunters. The Federal government should have been doing a better job of promoting this stamp all along, for it probably is the easiest, most direct way of raising wetlands protection money from millions of conservation-minded non-hunters. Better advertising of the $7.50 migratory waterfowl stamp, a collector's item featuring some of the nation's finest wildlife art each year, is needed at post offices and refuges.

Typically hunters buy 90 per cent of the Duck Stamps. But there is no reason, given the broad values that wetlands have for many kinds of birds, animals and plant-life; for pollution and runoff control; and for natural beauty, that non-hunting Americans could not buy just as many as hunters. These stamps could be considered a wildlife version of Easter Seals or UNICEF Christmas cards.

So Interior Secretary Clark seems off to a good start on behalf of people who value wetlands. One hopes a little of his positive spirit will rub off on the many North Dakotans who still think federal wetlands buyers and biologists don't belong in farming country.

Saving The Historical Society

Following editorial was written by Elmer L. Andersen, former governor of Minnesota and member of the state historical society board, in the Princeton Union-Eagle which he publishes:

When Alexander Ramsey, Minnesota's first territorial governor, made his inaugural address to the first territorial legislature in 1849, he urged the formation of an historical society and a university, emphasizing the importance of both to the development of the great state he envisioned Minnesota would become.

When Cass Gilbert designed the present capitol building, he laid out a plan for future development placing an historical society building on one side of the capitol and a courts building on the other. The supreme court decided it preferred to be in the capitol but the state provided a building for the Minnesota Historical society in the location Cass Gilbert suggested.

For nearly 75 years, under the direction of a series of distinguished historians and administrators, the Minnesota Historical society has served and grown. It has been a depository for the tangible evidence of our heritage, a publisher of periodicals and books, a resource for information and material, the protector and manager of historic sites throughout the state, and the state archivist to preserve and organize the records of actions of official agencies. And for some, most importantly, it has become alongside the capitol, a focal point for thousands of school children and other visitors learning the link between government and history through excellent informative exhibits and tours.

For years, the present structure has been too small and the society has studied options for expansion, waiting patiently for the best plan to develop and the funds to be available.

Meanwhile, space has been acquired in several locations pending fruition of long-range plans. The St. Paul school board's release of the Mechanic Arts high school building, located directly behind the society, became the obvious solution to the society's need to bring all its activities together, provide needed additional display space and enable it to serve the future as it has the past.

In a most careful and comprehensive way, the society has proceeded with its planning. It cleared with all interested agencies (the supreme court indicated the society development would not inhibit the court's own plans), obtained the support of Governor Perpich and the 1983 legislature, instituted a well-organized competitive program for architect selection; now approaching a final stage, and construction money was included in the governor's budget for final approval and appropriation at this session.

Suddenly, a few legislators in the House of Representatives have come up with the idea that the historical society building would be a good place for the new appeals court and Mayor Latimer has leaped in to suggest that the historical society be put in a building extending over the highway 94 freeway, unworkable for many reasons.

This historical society, under the direction of Russell Fridley, is one of the most respected institutions of its type in the country. Its carefully developed plans should not suddenly be set aside for a proposal that would endanger its mission, reduce its effectiveness, and break the link between government and history.

The new appeals court was established to expedite justice and accommodate litigants and lawyers. That function might be better served at a location most convenient for those the court serves.

It is important that citizens throughout the state communicate with legislators to urge protection of the Minnesota historical society from the rash action of a few legislators who have not taken time to study the long historical background, the complicated web of services carried on by the society and the importance of not disturbing a carefully-laid plan that promises great benefit in the future.

Something To Think About

Need a little mental stimulus to get the grey matter functioning? Try these questions as a starter. Answers are listed below — but don't peek until you give the quiz an honest effort:

(1) You wake up in a pitch-black room in a hunting lodge, and there's no light handy. In your duffel bag there are six black socks and six white ones, all mixed together. You want to pick out a matching pair. What is the smallest number of socks you can take out of the bag and be sure of getting a pair of the same color?

(2) A bass plug and some touch-up paint cost a total of $2.50. The plug costs $2 more than the paint. What is the cost of each?

(3) A deep-sea fishing boat is lying in the harbor. Over its side hangs a rope ladder, with its end just touching the water. Rungs of the ladder are one foot apart. The tide rises at the rate of eight inches an hour. At the end of six hours how many of the rungs will be covered?

(4) How much dirt is there in a hole 1 ft. by 1 ft. by 1 ft.?

(5) A camp cook wanted to measure four ounces of syrup out of a jug but he had only a five-oz. and a three-oz. bottle. How did he manage it?

(Answers)

(1) Three. Of any three socks taken out of the duffel bag, two must be the same color.

(2) Plug, $2.25; paint 25 cents.

(3) None, because the boat rises with the tide.

(4) None.

(5) He filled the three-ounce bottle and poured it into the five. Then he filled it again and poured it into the five until the five was full. That left one ounce in the three. Then he emptied the five back into the jug, and poured the one ounce that was in the three into the five. Then he filled the three and poured it into the five — making four ounces.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Young boy to friend studying a bathroom scale: "I don't know what it is but it must hurt. You should hear my Mom groan when she steps on it!"

---

The business executive was watching a psychologist interview applicants for a job as the executive's secretary. "What's 2 and 2?" the psychologist asked the first. "Four," she replied immediately. "It is 22," the second answered. "It could be either four or 22," the third replied. The psychologist turned to the executive. "The first girl has a very practical mind," he said. "The second has alertness and imagination. The third has both imagination and practicality. Which one are you going to hire?" "The one in the tight sweater," the executive smiled.

U.S. Senator Rudy Boschwitz reports to Minnesota

It wasn't too long ago that our faltering economy ate away at paychecks and profits of American workers and businesses. Perhaps more damaging, it eroded their confidence in our ability to do something about it.

Who could blame them? They watched double-digit inflation push costs way beyond their wages or profits. Their efforts to save or invest were thwarted by onerous taxes and inefficient controls by a large government bureaucracy. On top of that, interest rates were at record levels and the level of unemployment crept into double digits.

I'm proud to say it has all changed for the better. Today we're experiencing the most robust economic growth in 20 years. Inflation has shrunk from 12½ per cent to a little more than three per cent in just one year. Interest rates have dropped dramatically, with the prime down to half what it was. Taxes were cut in the first meaningful way since John Kennedy's administration. And unemployment has declined steadily, as businesses get back on their feet.

The housing industry has posted its best year in a long time, car sales are up substantially, retail business is beginning to hum, and fueling all this is increased consumer purchasing power.

Although this trend promises to continue, we must work to ensure long-term prosperity. We must press for policies that will put a solid foundation under our economic recovery — and we need to do it now. The pursuit of such a program is among my top priorities here in the Senate.

But it would be truly wrong to sit back and be satisfied with our progress. Because there is a different, much darker side of the picture. And you probably have guessed I'm speaking of deficits.

You've probably heard so much about deficits this year, as political parties square off to determine "whose fault they are," that you may grow cynical about them.

The problems of deficits are real, and the time to do something about them is now. David Stockman told those of us on the Senate Budget Committee last year that unless we changed the way we dealt with the budget — unless we got serious about getting our economic affairs in order — we would be seeing "$200 billion deficits as far as the eye can see."

This is as disturbing as it is unacceptable.

As you probably know, I've spent much of my five years in the Senate trying to control government spending. This year I proposed my "Fair Play Budget," a plan that would balance the budget in five years by allowing every function of the budget to grow at the same rate (five per cent) over five years. Early indications tell me it will have some positive impact, even in this election year.

I believe a responsible budget will grow from a groundswell of public support, so I've spent a lot of time describing my budget to anyone who will listen. My conclusion: people everywhere — in corporate boardrooms or mainstreet cafes — are concerned about deficits, and they want Congress to do something about them. I've taken my Fair Play Budget to newspaper editorial boards all across the country, from San Francisco to New York; I've used it as the topic for speaking engagements nationwide; and I've hawked it to most every group in Minnesota that I can fit into my schedule — and it is almost always well-received.

Why? Because it's simple, equitable, and bottom-line oriented (it balances the budget!)

(I've written a rather lengthy newsletter on the deficit and my Fair Play Budget. If you haven't received it yet, please let me know. If you have received it, I'd enjoy getting your response to it.)

CAPITOL FACTS
THANKS FOR THE WALKMAN, TONY!
DENVER
HEY, TEACH — I'D LIKE TO DISCUSS MY GRADE

QUALITY EDUCATION IS AN IMPORTANT ISSUE IN AMERICA TODAY. SAFETY AND ORDER IN THE CLASSROOM ARE ESSENTIAL CONDITIONS FOR LEARNING, ACCORDING TO SENATOR STROM THURMOND (R-SC). SOME REASONS FOR CONCERN...

ON A TYPICAL MONTH, ABOUT 24 MILLION SECONDARY SCHOOL STUDENTS HAVE SOMETHING STOLEN, 282,000 ARE ATTACKED, AND 800,000 STAY HOME FROM SCHOOL BECAUSE THEY'RE AFRAID.

OF THE 3,000,000 SECONDARY STUDENTS WHO ARE VICTIMS OF ASSAULT, ROBBERY, OR THEFT EACH MONTH HELD HANDS, THEY WOULD FORM A HUMAN CHAIN FROM WASHINGTON, D.C. TO THE MOUNTAINS BEYOND DENVER, CO.

EACH MONTH, IN AMERICA'S SECONDARY SCHOOLS 1,000 TEACHERS ARE ASSAULTED SERIOUSLY ENOUGH TO REQUIRE MEDICAL ATTENTION.

Three out of four people over 35 have gum disease. You can't brush that off.

You could have gum disease right now and not know it. Even if you brush and floss faithfully. Because only your dentist can detect and treat gum disease. Which, if left untreated, can result in significant tooth loss. So make an appointment before it's too late.

A Childhood Favorite Meets Adults' Special Needs

Canned ready to serve low sodium chicken with noodles soup takes on an Oriental touch.

Canned ready to serve low sodium chicken with noodles soup is available for people limiting their sodium intake. Being on a sodium modified diet doesn't mean meals have to be ho-hum. This quick-to-fix stir-fry, for example, makes enough to serve four with only 100 calories and 38 mg. of sodium per serving.

It's comforting to know that your longtime favorite soup is still helping to keep you warm and healthy.

COOP Yield & Profit Boosters.
UREA.
A growing source of N.

No other solid fertilizer gives you more actual nitrogen per pound than CO-OP urea, or works so well for you throughout the growing season.
CO-OP urea is 46% nitrogen, yet it is a dry material that blends well with most other dry fertilizers. It is ideal for topdressing wheat or pasture in the winter or early spring. And it is equally good for spring preplant applications that are incorporated in the soil.
Urea not only gives your crops an early boost in the spring, but has season-long feeding power as well. As the soil warms, the urea nitrogen changes to ammonium nitrogen, which is gradually converted to the nitrate form of nitrogen so readily taken up by the plant.
We can provide complete information about this great dry nitrogen fertilizer which is rapidly gaining popularity. Let's explore with you where it may best fit into your fertility program. Come see us. We're ready when you are.

Nutrition Tip

Does olive oil conjure up visions of veal parmigiana, stuffed peppers, eggplant rollatini, luscious pastas. . .? It's indispensable for all those Italian favorites, of course, but did you know that it also adds that special something to all-American broiled fish, sauteed chicken, herb-based sauces, vegetable dishes and salads galore?

In other words this unique ingredient, prized for centuries and surrounded by colorful legend and lore, also qualifies as a health food! Contrary to the popular myth, it contains absolutely no cholesterol. And clear, golden Bertolli, world's best-loved olive oil, lends its distinctively light, delicate flavor, its smooth, blendable consistency to a wide variety of tasty recipes that are "legal" — even if you're dieting.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wilkens, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Boucher and Mrs. Dorothy Myhre were among those who attended the smelt fry in Plummer on Saturday evening.

On Friday evening a group of ladies from the meal site surprised Mrs. Kenneth Moen on her birthday. Those who came there were Elsie Berggren, Mabel Hanson, Ruth Martin, Bertha Tunheim, Mayme McLaughlin, Bertha Ordahl, Jenny Lokken and Amy Lind. They all enjoyed coffee and a nice time. Happy birthday.

Edward Johnson came up to visit at the Floyd Nelson home last Sunday evening.

Average Police Officer Does Not Prefer Violence

by Deane Morrison
'U' M News Service

Images of police turning dogs loose on civil rights marchers and beating anti-war demonstrators with night sticks at the 1968 Democratic national convention fixed the phrase "police brutality" indelibly in the American vocabulary.

Richard Sykes heard the charge many times, mostly from minority citizens, during the civil rights campaigns of the 1950s and 1960s. Sykes, a speech - communication professor at the University of Minnesota, decided to see for himself whether there was truth to the charges and to document the daily workings of uniformed police officers.

"I didn't try to prove either the brutality of the innocence of police — I wanted a third perspective," Sykes said. "I also wanted to see if it was possible to make quantative observations of the behavior of police at work, and analyze the data mathematically."

By the time he and several colleagues had spent three years riding with police in a major Midwestern metropolitan area — which he declined to name — Sykes had observed about 5,000 encounters between officers and citizens. With co-author Edward E. Brent, he published his findings last year in a book titled "Policing: A Social Behaviorist Perspective" (Rutgers University Press). In an interview he discussed his observations.

"Police occasionally do use excessive violence; I have seen it," he said. "But the frequence in most departments is immeasurably low — I would estimate perhaps once in a thousand encounters."

He explained that it is extremely difficult to eradicate a behavior that occurs so seldom. However, a strong police chief can control excessive violence by making it clear that such behavior is intolerable and by maintaining an internal affairs unit that makes life miserable for officers who consistently display brutality or poor judgment. No other control measure is likely to work, he said.

"I saw a '60 Minutes' episode about a town in California with a high incidence of police homicide and brutality. It seems to me that the chief must be either sympathetic to those officers or weak," Sykes said.

This is not to suggest that police naturally tend toward violence, he added. When police officers being their careers they have personality traits much like their peers in other jobs, but the longer they are on the force and the more they take on the values of their occupation.

Normally, uniformed police spend most of their time driving their beat. Sykes estimated that officers spend only 10 to 15 per cent of their time interacting with citizens and about three per cent dealing with clear violations of the law. Most interactions require officers to take reports, comfort victims of crime, perform services or mediate disputes.

Although many disputes — such as domestic or barroom quarrels — involve no legal violation, officers often must mediate or arbitrate to prevent violence. In his book Sykes stressed that the main tool of the police is persuasion. They should be practiced in the arts of negotiation, acting and the skilled use of threat. For example, officers sometimes use their uniforms to "invent" authority with which to persuade and caution people to head off a serious incident. But police cannot intervene in a legal sense, said Sykes, until an illegal act has been committed. Nor can they arrest for a misdemeanor — a threat, for instance — unless they witness the activity.

"There's the story of a woman who called the police to complain that her boyfriend was threatening to beat her up and they told her to call back when he hit her," Sykes said.

He warned that our society must be aware of becoming overly legalized. For one thing, officers should be prudent when deciding whether to make an arrest because the criminal justice system may not benefit people who are not chronically or seriously violent.

"I don't think jail is a panacea for occasional minor offenses," he said. "I have no problem with jailing a chronic violent offender, but officers should use discretion and informal means such as mediation, arbitration or referring to a counselor in some cases. This might work better, say, when a husband and wife are both drunk and having a fight. But I think some male officers have abused their discretionary powers by not arresting, for example, the chronic wife beater."

Sykes said that female officers might be better than males at handling some disputes, but he could not say whether there was any sex difference in methods or results. Statistics show that height doesn't confer any particular advantage, he said, but he has seen many situations where strength and agility do. For example, when police answer silent burglar alarm calls from warehouses, they often arrive to find that the grounds are fenced in. Officers occasionally must scale the fences in order to catch the burglar. However, he added, there are plenty of out-of-shape male officers who could not rise to such a demand.

Sykes noticed a paradox in male officers' dealings with citizens: younger, well-spoken officers got into more fights than did older ones whose private language often is riddled with ethnic slurs. These older officers changed from a private to a public persona upon stepping out of the squad car.

"But there seems to be a contest for dominance when young male citizens and young officers interact," he said. "It has to do with underlying tensions — the participants are behaving not as citizen and police but simply as two young males."

Sykes has noticed a national trend toward more education for officers. Historically, he said, the average cop learned what he knew of law from other cops on the street. Most formal training concerned how to fill out report forms. But now, Minnesota requires new peace officers to have courses in subjects such as firearms and constitutional rights. He also has noticed increases in police administration and in a tendency toward using arrests and jail as deterrents to crime.

He agreed with the idea that the certainty of punishment, not the severity, is a better deterrent.

"Just look at the faculty members who consistently get ticketed for parking in certain areas around the university," he said. "Soon they don't do it anymore."

IN THE LAST CENTURY SURGERY WAS HAZARDOUS BECAUSE OF FATAL SEPTIC POISONINS. NOT UNTIL 1865 WHEN DR. JOSEPH LISTER INTRODUCED "LISTERISM", THE USE OF ANTISEPTICS, DID SURGERY BECOME A SAFER MEDICAL PRACTICE.
IN THE 1870'S IN ST. LOUIS, DR. JOSEPH LAWRENCE BEGAN WORK IN HIS LABORATORY TO FIND A FORMULA THAT WAS AS POTENT AS LISTER'S... AND SAFE TO USE. ASSISTED BY JORDAN LAMBERT, A PHARMACIST, THEIR EFFORT WAS SUCCESSFUL.
LAMBERT VISITED LONDON IN 1879 TO TELL LISTER ABOUT THE FORMULA AND THAT IT WAS HARMLESS TO DELICATE TISSUES... EVEN THOSE FOUND IN THE MOUTH.
CALLED "LISTERINE" IN HONOR OF LISTER'S WORK, IT HAS BECOME ONE OF THE MOST EXTENSIVELY RESEARCHED PRODUCTS IN AMERICA.
OVER THE LAST 100 YEARS, LISTERINE HAS BEEN PROVEN EFFECTIVE AS AN ANTISEPTIC AND BREATH FRESHNER. NOW A REMARKABLE NEW USE HAS BEEN ANNOUNCED. CLINICAL RESEARCH HAS SHOWN THAT LISTERINE KILLS GERMS THAT CAUSE PLAQUE FORMATION ON TEETH... RINSING WITH LISTERINE, IN ADDITION TO USUAL ORAL HYGIENE, CAN REDUCE PLAQUE BUILD-UP AS MUCH AS 50%.

Support Given For Transfer Of Excise Tax

Local highway projects will have a much better chance of being completed if the legislature approves the transfer of funds from auto and truck excise taxes into the state's highway construction fund, State Representative Wally Sparby, District 1B, said recently.

A bill to accomplish that end was approved recently by the House transportation committee.

"The transfer of funds gives the legislature a chance to improve the state economy and many segments of the construction industry while making much needed repairs on Minnesota roads," Sparby said.

"It is time we recognize that a healthy transit system means a healthier economy," Sparby added. "At least 91 road projects are dependent on this transfer of funds."

The funds were to have been transferred last year, but the legislature postponed the transfer until July 1, 1985, with the understanding that the date would be moved ahead if the state's general fund improved. The bill passed recently moves the transfer date up to July 1, 1984.

"Budget projections indicate there will be a substantial increase in revenues this fiscal year. We want to move ahead at the earliest possible date, this session to fulfill the promise we made that when times got better, we would transfer the funds," Sparby said.

Sparby went on to say that the transfer is necessary because "we can't achieve any consistency in construction unless we have some stability in the funding."

According to Sparby, the transfer of funds would improve the state economy by putting people back to work, providing a found infrastructure for farmers and industries and providing tourists with better, more efficient roadways.

The transfer of funds will provide a continuous, reliable source of income for roadways, without levying an additional tax.

One Cure For Slipped Disc Has No Surgery

This year about a million and a half Americans will experience "slipped," or herniated, discs in their lower backs. The pain that follows probably will keep them out of work and curtail their activities so that even a simple walk around the block might be out of the question.

For some of those people all that will change without undergoing back surgery thanks to a new procedure with a substance called chymopapain (chi-mo-pah-pane), an enzyme derived from papayas.

Chymopapain is injected into the jelly-like nucleus of the disc. The procedure is called chemonucleolysis. It is an alternative to laminectomy, the traditional back surgery for a slipped disc, and is used only when the injured disc has not responded to more conservative methods of treatment, such as bed rest or traction.

According to Dr. Zarling, between 75 and 80 per cent of the patients treated with chymopapain injection experience sufficient symptom relief and avoid surgical removal of the affected disc.

Discs are pads of cartilage between each vertebra that absorb shock and keep vertebra from rubbing together. When a disc ruptures, the teaspoon or so of jelly-like substance in its center bulges. The bulging presses a nerve, causing pain in the back, buttock and legs. Chymppapain dries up the nucleus, taking pressure off the nerve and relieving the pain.

Dr. Zarling stresses that chymopapain is not a panacea for everyone with back pain, "It is only an effective alternative to a laminectomy for a herniated disc," he points out.

Chymopapain was used in this country from the mid-1960s to 1970s but was withdrawn as an investigational drug by the U.S. Food and Drug administration in 1975 for further testing. In November of 1982 it won FDA approval for use in hospitals by orthopedic surgeons or neurological surgeons trained to do the procedure.

Recovery period is shorter with chymopapain, saving on hospital costs and lost time from work for the patient. In most cases patients are only in the hospital for 24 hours after the procedure, compared with five days for a laminectomy. In Canada, where the procedure has been used for years, some patients leave the hospital the same day.

The drug's major drawback is the possibility of a severe allergic reaction. Less than one per cent of men and two per cent of women are expected to have this reaction, Dr. Zarling says. There are two deaths in every 1,600 cases, about the same as for laminectomy.

Patients who have undergone the procedure say they feel some pain for several days after the procedure, caused by the needle used to inject the drug. But most see through the discomfort to the day they can get back to normal activities free of pain and spasms.

Tips Offered For Building Child Esteem

In order to lead happy and productive lives, children need to develop a positive self-image, the feeling that "I am somebody." Two articles in the March issue of "PTA Today", the National PTA's magazine, offer suggestions for how parents can help their children develop self-esteem.

According to Thomas Coleman, a fellow of the American academy of pediatrics, and author of the first article, the following ideas can help foster self-esteem in children:

—Level with children. Don't talk down to a young person; instead, put yourself at eye level with a child. It can often minimize a problem, as well as make the child feel equal.

— Let children make decisions. For example, early participation in health care decisions such as, "Do you want liquid medicine or tablets?," lessens a child's feeling of powerlessness, and can foster an intelligent consumer attitude in children.

—Value rules. The purpose of rules is to help people get along with each other and in turn, feel good about themselves. The best rules are written during calm times with the participation of the child.

— Show child you understand. — Share — your childhood memories with your child. "Children need to know that their parents had trouble learning things too." By showing understanding, you will help your child grow in confidence.

— Develop your own self-esteem. "Parents need to feel valued and self-confident before they can help their children develop self-esteem." Parents should try to show their children that "you don't have to have it all together all the time to feel good about yourself."

Children need to feel that they are special in school and out, says another article in the March "PTA Today". Parents have the advantage at home, because they can tailor the environment to what the child needs and wants. The following activities, from the "Survival Guide for Busy Parents", (an exerpt of which appears in the magazine; will help create some memorable one-on-one times between a parent and his or he child:

— Keep a note pad handy to jot down ideas of special things to do with each of your children;

— Take your young child to the grocery store. Talk about prices, and let him or her pick out one thing to buy;

— Help your child make a scrapbook of a trip or of something that he or she enjoys;

— Sit with your child and discuss how you and he or she can make this day or this weekend better. Focus on your child's strengths, not weaknesses;

— Help your child plan, plant, and be responsible for his or her own space in the garden or in several pots on the windowsill.

Electronic Fish Locators Have Become Man's Best Friend

A few years ago, when fish locators were first introduced, they were the first real breakthrough in structure fishing. While structure fishing has always produced the best catches, it sometimes took days to locate and map out the fish-holding areas.

The early models of fish locators were rather simple sonar units that indicated mostly depth and large changes in structure such as weed beds, islands, etc. Today the picture has drastically changed. The new sophisticated models available now are able to literally "paint you a picture" of everything that exists below the water's surface.

For the occasional fisherman who does not want to get too involved, the simple models are still a great fishing tool. On the other hand the serious angler who enjoys working at the hobby can now choose a sonar device that will best suit practically any fishing situation, whether you fish smaller lakes, large lakes and impoundments, or the vast areas of the great lakes.

Whatever your preference and style of fishing, the electronic fish locator has become man's best friend and will greatly improve your fishing success.

In today's world of computers, electronic aids and rapidly changing technology, you can easily increase your enjoyment of life, and let's face it, what is more enjoyable than catching fish!

SHAKESPEARE FISHING RODS are AMERICA'S CHOICE!

Picking The Perfect Rod

With the phenomenal number of choices a modern day angler has when it comes to choosing a fishing rod, making the right choice can be a challenge. Here are some tips that, hopefully, will make that choice easier.

MATERIALS

Boron

Here is the ultimate in performance and cost. Boron is the lightest of all fishing rod materials and, for its weight, is unbelievably strong. Boron, along with graphite, has given the modern day fisherman a brand new "feel", so to speak. The slightest nudge is felt throughout the entire rod; and on those days when the fish just give your bait a nibble, you know exactly when to set the hook.

Graphite

Until just the past four or five years graphite rods were in a price range that only the pros or the wealthy were willing to pay. Today, fishermen have a wide choice of graphite rods from which to choose for as little as $25. Graphite is very light, yet has the strength to set a hook in even the toughest of fish. Great recovery speed allows you to cast farther with less effort, and as the pros will tell you, more accurately as well. Dollars to performance, the graphite rod of today is a real winner.

Fiberglass

Until now, fiberglass has been the standard when it comes to fishing rods. While graphite and boron have somewhat stolen the limelight, tens of thousands of fish are caught every year on fiberglass rods. Another consideration is the composite rod which features the utilization of both fiberglass and graphite. Sturdy and tough, these rods are a great choice for the occasional fisherman or for youngsters.

Length

Today's fishing rods come in lengths anywhere from 4½ to 8 feet. If you're going to be doing more trolling than casting, the shorter rod is an advantage. A five to five and a half foot rod works very well.

If the majority of your fishing is casting, the longer the rod the farther and the easier it is going to cast. This is particularly true when it comes to fishing with lighter lures such as jigs or small artificials. For the most part, the longer the rod the heavier it is and the harder it's going to be to set the hook. It is a good idea when selecting a longer rod to find one with what is referred to as a soft tip. That is, the tip of the rod is softer allowing you to cast with ease; yet the center and bottom section have enough clout to get the job done when it comes to setting the hook.

Weight

Most of today's manufacturers print on the rod the recommended lure weights for a particular rod. Think about what you're going to be using in the way of lures and carefully select a rod that falls within the category of your needs.

Cosmetics

Here is where you can save some money. Many manufacturers will use the same blank on several different rods. The difference in the price of the rod is simply the amount of finish that is put on the rod and the intricacy of the wrappings. You can save yourself lots of dollars and still fish with the very best by taking the time to compare.

Boat Access Maps for Minnesota Lakes

As of last summer there were maps showing boat access sites to Minnesota lakes in 55 counties available from the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources.

The maps are free and show the location of nearly 2,000 sites where trailered boats may be launched into public waters.

An order form for the map may be received by calling the Minnesota Travel Information Center at (612) 296-5029. Interested persons outside the Twin Cities metro area should call the toll-free number 1-800-652-9747 and ask for "Travel Information". Maps may also be requested by writing: DNR Trails and Waterways, Box 52, Centennial Building, St. Paul, MN 55155. A maximum of five maps can be ordered by an individual.

Location of access sites on lakes within the seven country metro area are all included on one map, and can be ordered in the manner stated above.

Don't Let Big Ones Get Away

You're out fishing your favorite walleye hole knowing it just has to produce. Sure enough, a walleye very aggressively grabs your leech. You drop your rod tip and set the hook with a powerful snap. If feels heavy, in fact, it feels stronger and stronger as it nears the surface. Up rolls a beautiful ten pound walleye! After all this work, the moment of truth is at hand. How can you get him into the boat? Can you land him yourself? Is the net big enough? Will your partner knock him off the hook?

All of these questions and more are racing through your mind. Time is something you had plenty of before this fish hit, but now every second counts. The excitement grows as you try to untangle the net from the oar locks. Meanwhile, back on your line, that walleye is doing its best to shake the small #8 hook stuck firmly in its mouth. Your mind is now confused between getting the net ready and keeping your eyes from popping out at the sight of the battling walleye. What next? How do you net the fish properly?

If you have another person to net your fish, try to talk in a very calm manner. Don't over-excite your partner about how big the fish is. Instead give him plain and simple instructions. Your netter's job is simple — try not to make a big deal about it. Have him ready the net and await your instructions.

You should battle the fish until it is well within range of the net. The fish must be ON THE SURFACE before you instruct the netter to scoop it up off the water. Never make any deep water attacks at your prize with the net. DO NOT put the net in the water before the fish is ready to be netted. Your partner should scoop the fish off the surface head first and continue to push the net towards the tail until the dorsal fin is inside the net's hoop. Then continue to follow-through, lifting the net upwards and directly back into the boat. Do not hold the fish over the side of the boat to admire it.

Always keep your net in a tangle-free position. Then, if you are alone, remember to ready the net for the fish and fight it by lifting the rod tip higher and higher. This will give you more time to react to a possible sudden run of the fish. Take up the net in your strongest hand. It's very important that you take the fish ONLY WHEN IT IS READY. Then, as it lays on the surface, scoop the fish head first with one continuous motion. It is important that you don't reach out or stab your net at the fish until you have control over it.

Use as large a net as you can comfortably store in your boat. You will be surprised, however, how big a fish can be tucked into a small net when it is executed properly. Cloth mesh nets should be replaced regularly to prevent fish being lost as they swim through the old netting. Rubber nets are fine for bass, but if you plan on landing a long fish, nylon or a cloth type net is better. Use nets with fairly long handles; it gives you an opportunity to make a bigger sweep in the water. This will help you land bigger fish.

Do not skimp on your landing net. It is an important piece of equipment. When you do hook that ten pound walleye, that net of yours will be priceless.

Take Better Fish Pictures

After a successful day of fishing, it's always nice to take a picture of your catch so you have a momento of the day. Here are a few major points to remember when taking a fish picture.

First, make sure you get all of the fish and the person in the picture. Chopping off the angler's head or the fish's tail can really spoil a good photo.

Second, take the time to make sure the lucky fisherman looks good. If it's a nice fish, you can bet every person will see the photo. Is your subject's hat on straight? How about the shirt? Should it be tucked in or buttoned up? Remove their sunglasses. Remember, good eye contact in a photo gives it more impact and expression.

Three, be sure you have the right amount of light for the picture. Shadows from hats or bad sunlight can really ruin a photograph. One basic rule is, make sure the face is not in shadow anywhere. You can be almost positive that any size shadow on someone's face will come out black in the picture. Don't be afraid to tell someone to tip their hat back just a bit, turn the boat, or even take the time to move to a position where the sun is over your shoulder. Be aware of your own shadow at the same time.

Fourth, when holding the fish, keep the fingers on the back side of the fish as much as possible. Rather than holding the fish straight up and down or in a horizontal position, tilt it at approximately a 30 degree angle. The back side of the fish will make it appear much larger and more impressive compared to a picture of a fish's belly. This holds true for stringer shots also. Take the time to get the backs of the fish pointed towards the camera for best results. Don't hold the fish way out to the camera. Instead, keep the fish fairly close to the body so people can really appreciate the true size of the fish.

Keep It Sweet and Savory

First you hook up your gas tank to your motor. Next, you pump the gas up to the motor, then you set all the adjustments, start the motor and take off to your favorite fishing spot. About the first thing you do when you get there is to select a big juicy leech and transfer all that gasoline and oil odor to the leech. Since walleyes do not operate on gas and oil, they will probably take one good whiff of your bait and leave.

Your best bet to increase your catch is to wash your hands before handling your bait or lure. Get rid of the gasoline, insect repellent, suntan lotion and the like. It is equally advisable to use a no-scent soap which you can find in most tackle stores. A highly scented soap could be equally obnoxious to those fastidious fish with a keen sense of smell.

Washing your hands to remove all the man-made substances that we all accept as routine, is another way of saying, "Think like a fish." You wouldn't rub gasoline on your chocolate bar, and Mr. Walleye prefers his tid-bits on the sweet side too.

Fishing the pH Factor for Bass

Of great influence on the feeding behavior of bass is the pH factor or the acidity/alkalinity of the water. The pH scale runs from zero (acid) to 14 (alkaline). Thus, a reading of 7.5 means that the water is "neutral", neither acidic nor alkaline. Research has established that bass are present in greatest numbers and are most active when the pH level ranges from 7.5 to 7.9. Bass will stop feeding and even leave an area where the pH level falls below 6.5.

Because pH levels vary from day to day some technology-minded anglers are using commercial pH meters to locate the most productive water conditions and are able to eliminate unproductive habitat. If you are a scientific type angler here is just another technological tool for you.

Lake Michigan — A Cinderella Story For Anglers

Just 25 years ago the fisheries resource of the Great Lakes was in chaos. Lake Trout populations had all but been eliminated in Michigan and Superior, and alewife (a low value herring species) had virtually overtaken the Great Lakes. In addition the sea lamprey, a vicious predator of game fish, were growing in numbers.

Once the lamprey problem had been brought under control, it was decided to begin a search for a suitable predator species to offset the propagation of the alewife.

Coho Salmon were first planted in the Michigan waters of Lake Michigan and Lake Superior in 1966. Just one year later, approximately 26,000 three year old coho, averaging 12 pounds, were taken.

The first planting of Chinook Salmonin the Great Lakes reached three years of age in 1969. Amazingly, these fish averaged over 20 pounds and quickly stole the glamour and attention of sportsmen.

The phenomenal success of the Salmon in the Great Lakes is now recognized as the greatest fisheries management achievement ever. At the present time, the annual harvest of Chinook Salmon from Lake Michigan exceeds five million pounds a year. In Michigan alone, the present day sport fisheries industry is a whopping 350 million dollars a year.

The story of the Great Lakes sport fisheries industry is indeed one of rags to riches. In less than fifteen years, what once was a barren wasteland to sport fishermen has now become what many believe to be the greatest fresh water fishery in the entire world.

Cinderella's godmother would be proud.

What's New in Fishing Reels

The past several years have seen some dramatic changes in the fishing reel industry. During the past few years, fishing reels have gotten more and more elaborate; but, are they really better? The answer is, yes. Today's reels are, first of all, a lot more comfortable to fish with. Lighter materials, such as graphite, along with reels designed to fit your hand — not the box they came in — are positive improvements.

While a lot of manufacturers, particularly those in the free spool casting reel business, are claiming the backlash is a thing of the past; there is some question as to the validity of their claim. The fancy new V-spool casting reels, along with various magnetic backlash eliminators, aren't as simple as they seem. When you use magnetic force to slow down the overrun or spool or a reel, you are creating friction. The more friction, the shorter the cast. While there is little question the new reels are less prone to backlash than their predecessors, remember that you're still going to have to learn to thumb the line in order to become a truly efficient and effective caster.

Spinning reels have also gotten more sophisticated. Some of the spin cast folks have now developed twist free mechanisms and the open-faced reels now have several models featuring single-hand operation.

Regardless of which reel you choose, remember that the best reel in the world will not perform without proper line. Follow the manufacturer's instructions as to test and capacity, and the odds are, you will find your new fishing reel performs far better than your old one did.

The Number One Reason Fish Get Away

Ever notice that a small minority of fishermen seem to catch most of the fish? The main difference between success and failure is knowing just when to set the hook.

When fishing live bait for Walleyes, whether it be minnows, leeches, or night crawlers, the very best thing to do when you feel a bite is to let the line go. That fish is going to be intent on consuming the bait and the very best thing you can do is give him a chance to do it.

After waiting for anywhere from one to five seconds (depending on the size of the bait) close the bail in the reel and very, very slowly lift the rod tip. Once you know the fish is on the other end of the line, lower the rod tip and rear back and set that hook. Oftentimes a fish will move toward the boat after taking the bait and the fisherman winds up setting the hook into slack line. It takes a little practice to learn how and when to set the hook but the results make it more than worthwhile to take the time to do it right.

Getting Rid of Coil or Set in Monofilament Fishing Line

If you have left your monofilament line on your reel since your last fishing trip (and most of us do), it will dry on the reel and tend to take a "set" in that coiled position. Your first few casts will encounter the memory of the nylon and will retain the memory of the nylon resulting in snarls, birdnests and probably a series of stiff coils in the line. New line off a spool will often present the same problems. DuPont, makers of Stren* fishing line, suggests you soak the line for an hour or so before your first fishing trip. Just drop your line and spool in a bucket of water, or you can let the line pay off the reel and tow it behind your boat on your way to your favorite fishing spot.

Tension can also remove coils in the line — Tie your line to a tree and back off the distance of a long cast. Use your rod to put strain on the line, just as though you were setting the hook; hard. Apply this pressure, just short of breaking point in the line, a dozen or so times.

Bass Bugging — Spelled S.P.O.R.T.

The usual concept of surface fishing for bass is tossing out a big chunk of plastic, fitted with treble hooks, metal lips, and oversized propellers. Pinpoint your spot, and make your cast. In goes the plug, landing on the water with a mighty "splat" that sounds as though you were throwing rocks at the fish. A lot of bass are caught on surface lures and it certainly is a fun way to catch them. The sudden swirl or breaking of the water's surface when they strike is extremely exciting. When you add sight and sound to the feel of the strike you enjoy the ultimate in sensations.

There may be a better way of fishing topwater. Namely, bass-bugging with a fly rod. Requiring more patience and subtleness than plug-casting, this method does provide more anticipation, and to many anglers, a high sense of emotion.

When surface-plugging, the bait must move fairly rapid to obtain the swimming, splashing, wobbling action to resemble live bait. Even the molded rubber frogs must be moved around to create any semblence of live action. Not so with a bass bug — it drops on the water very lightly and lies there with all those fine rubber legs and hairs quivering as though a live bug dropped on the water and is trying to get his breath back, but seemingly very much alive. Remember a bass bug is supposed to resemble a bug and not a thrashing, splashing small animal.

Let it lie there quivering for several minutes, then flick it slightly, moving it a mere few inches, then allow it to quiver some more. Here is where your patience enters the picture, and if you have dropped that bug where you "just know" there is a bass lurking, your anticipation will start the adrenalin flowing.

Don't try your lightweight trout rod for bass-bugging. You need an 8½ foot rod for an 8-weight line. The graphite bass fly rod is an excellent choice, although some prefer the fiberglass rods. The graphite's quick reaction to a strike allows you to set that single popper hook into the bony mouth of a big bass.

The small mouth bass, ignored as it is in the Upper Midwest, is extremely abundant in the area. On the end of a fly rod a small mouth is no slouch of a battler, either.

Lure Color Does Make a Difference!

A fisherman goes out one day and decides to tie on perhaps a green lure. He also happens to be out on one of those very rare days when the fish are all suicide minded and would hit anything. So they hit the green plug and he has a great day.

The next day, out the fisherman goes with his green plug, uses it all day and maybe catches a couple. The third day he gets skunked but the fourth day he nets 4 or 5 fish. In all this time he never varies from green colored lures. He feels his average is pretty good and blames his poor days on various conditions. He knows green plugs catch fish and he will return again and again, even years later, to green colored lures.

Don't lock yourself into this pattern. Be open minded and adaptable. Study the conditions: Clarity of the water, depth at where the fish are holding, wind conditions, overcast or sunny skies, and other factors that govern the art of fishing. Be versatile, try changing colors. You may be having good success with a white lure in the morning, but when the sky clouds up in the afternoon, change to a slightly darker color. Don't go to very dark colors, just try the yellows or pinks. If the wind comes up and silts up the water, perhaps drop another step down the color ladder and tie on that famous green lure. In other words, be versatile. It's a good idea not to "tell" the fish what they want, it's always better to "ask" them. Fish are pretty good at telling you.

All fishermen who spend a lot of time out in the sun should carry along a supply of hand lotion, suntan lotion and chapstick to protect their skin. You can find these items at your nearby Holiday Stationstores.

Bass Haven't Changed, Only the Fishermen

Elsewhere in this publication is an article on "Flippin for Bass". That article elaborates on the so called "new" method of getting your bait to those shallow water "loner" bass. While we are all for progress and modern methods used to catch bass, we are also reminded that many "new" methods are just old methods using new up-dated equipment.

Take the case of "Flippin". Before the advent of this "new" method there were a few "old timer" fishermen catching a lot of bass, and big ones, by using a cane pole, a piece of fish line and a bucket of frogs. They called it "dunking", "frogging", "skittering" and a lot of other names, depending on what part of the country you were in.

First find yourself a good old-fashioned cane pole, 20 feet or so in length, and tie about 25 feet of line to the tip. This is about the length you will need to bring old "bucketmouth" bass to the boat so that you can net or hand-land him. If you want, you can wind on a few lines guides and tape a casting reel on the butt. They aren't really needed however, because you can control the length of line by twisting or untwisting the line around the tip. Depending on the depth you are fishing you may need a small sinker. Tie on your hook, then bait it with a live frog. Do not overweight the frog. Let your bait swim around naturally.

OK, you have your rig. Now, where do you fish? Look for dead trees that have fallen into the water, weed beds (especially the reed type weeds), openings in thick lily pad areas, around docks and just about any fish cover that you cannot cast into. Next just "dunk" that frog around this natural bass cover. Let your bait drop, raise it up, let it swim around and just generally move it around back into those "unfishable" spots. You'll probably be surprised at what lurks there.

This method is deadly in the early bass season when the winter hibernating frogs make their annual migration to the shore. This method is also productive all summer long when big bass seek a refuge from the summer sun in an isolated, shady and private area. This method is especially good when bass are essentially inactive and are seeking shade and comfortable relief from the sun and heat. Fish spots that are 3 to 8 feet deep and you may discover a whole "new" way of fishing.

Timely Tip

How to Treat a Leech

The most common method of rigging up a leech is to hook them on a plain hook (#6 is about right). Some fishermen believe hooking the leech behind a jig or spinner adds extra attraction, but it seems there is little difference in results.

Which end of the leech to hook depends on how you intend to fish. If you are still fishing or slow trolling, hook through the larger sucker end — If you intend to troll at a faster rate, hook through the smaller end or the head — Leeches swim head first so you can easily determine which end to hook by whether you allow the bait to work itself or whether you are moving it. If you hook the sucker end and move it at a rapid rate, the leech will "ball up" on the hook. When bouncing a jig off the bottom or drifting with a lindy rig you are probably better off hooking through the head. Ribbon leech is the leech most effective for walleyes and will remain effective throughout the season. Your biggest problem is being able to buy them. Since they are so popular they are usually in rather short supply. Leeches are, however, very easy to keep so buy them when and where you can. They will stay alive all summer even without food. Just keep them in a foam chest or minnow bucket and change the water often — If you notice a milky film on the water, you need to change immediately. Simply put, keep leeches cold and clean.

Timely Tip

Northern pike are sight feeders and rarely feed at night. By using lures of sparkle, you'll attract more pike.

Fish Lake Michigan For Under $50

The trophy fishing of Lake Michigan is becoming standard conversation when most folks talk fishing these days. Anyone that ever picked up a rod or reel would enjoy having a chance to do battle with big Brown, or Rainbow Trout as well as the giant King Salmon. The drawback; big fish caught in big water cost big money. You're going to spend thousands of dollars on even a small boat equipped to fish the big lake safely and effectively. Not everyone's budget can afford a charter boat trip that's going to cost in the area of fifty dollars for a half day outing. But hold on, every single day folks are catching big fish, the Browns, Rainbows or even Salmon right from shore. For less than fifty dollars you can purchase everything you need to tangle with any sport fish the big lake has to offer.

Most of the major towns and cities on Lake Michigan have boat harbors, and where you find a boat harbor, you're going to find a pier. The Coast Guard maintains these structures and they are open to the public without charge. The required gear is pretty simple; a 7 or 7½ foot spinning rod, a few slip sinkers, hooks, bait, a big landing net and you're on your way. When selecting a reel, make sure you can load it up with plenty of line. In the spring, 6 to 12 lb. test will do the job. However, later on when the big Salmon move in, be ready to switch to 14 to 20 pound test. If you prefer to fish live bait, a spawn sack (most local bait stores will have them) attached to a plain hook is the first choice. You're seldom, if ever, going to be fishing more than fifteen feet of water; so all you need to do is toss out your offering and wait.

If you prefer casting, choose between Cleo's, Crocodiles, or Mr. Champs; when it comes to lures, they are all proven producers. From early April through mid June, Brown and Rainbows provide most of the action. Mid-August through the last of September, the big King Salmon move closer to shore as they get ready to spawn.

The best time of day to pier fish is the first few hours of daylight and the last hour in the evening. Darker water brings the fish closer to shore and that means action.

In case you're wondering how good pier fishing can be, ask three guys stationed at the Coast Guard facility just outside Sturgeon Bay, Wisconsin. The smallest fish they caught weighed 21 pounds.

Electric Fishing Motors Are Fisherman's "Silent Partner"

Imagine you've drifted onto a hot fishing bed. You've had a couple of good strikes, but the current keeps pulling you downstream. Frustrating? You bet. Now imagine that instead of cranking up your big outboard to get back upstream, you simply turn a switch. All you hear is the click of the speed control, and you glide back into position. Silently. Without spooking fish.

That's one big reason why fishermen all across the country are saying that if you fish from a boat, you should be using an electric fishing motor.

Electric motors allow fishermen to move their boats effortlessly from one location to another. Without moving fish. Use your heavy outboard to get you to your location, then let the electric outboard take you to where the fish are. Troll, work a shoreline, or hold your position in strong crosswinds and choppy water. Variable speed control allows you to master any situation, whether it's navigating strong river currents or gliding from one fishing bed to another.

Fitting the right electric fishing motor to your boat is important. Although electric motors are rated by "thrust", not "horsepower", a simple system matches the weight of your boat to the minimum electric motor thrust range. This system (see chart) serves as an easy first-time guide for potential electric motor buyers. A boat weighing 400 pounds, for example, demands an electric motor with at least 6-9 pounds of thrust. A boat weighing 1400 pounds, on the other hand, requires 15-18 pounds of thrust or more to assure easy handling.

SOME FAVORITE and TRUSTED KNOTS

Trilene® Knot

1. Run end of line through eye of hook or lure and double back through the eye a second time
2. Loop around standing part of line 5 or 6 times
3. Thread tag end back between the eye and the coils as shown
4. Pull up tight and trim tag end.

Palomar Knot

1. Double the line and form a loop three to four inches long. Pass the end of the loop through hook's eye.
2. Holding standing line between thumb and finger, grasp loop with free hand and form a simple overhand knot.
3. Pass hook through loop and draw line while guiding loop over top of eyelet.
4. Pull tag end of line to tighten knot snugly and trim tag end to about ⅛".

Improved Blood Knot

1. Overlap the ends of your two strands that are to be joined and twist them together about 10 turns.
2. Separate one of the center twists and thrust the two ends through the space as illustrated.
3. Pull knot together and trim off the short ends.

Uni-Knot

1. Run the line through the eye for at least 6 inches. Fold it back to form a double line and make a circle back toward the hook or lure with the tag end.
2. Make six turns with the tag end around the double line and through the circle. Holding the double line at the point where it passes through the eye, pull the tag end, as indicated by arrow, until the six turns are snugged into a tight barrel.
3. Now grasp the standing part of the line and pull (see arrow) to slide the knot up against the eye.
4. Continue to pull standing line until knot is tight. You can trim the tag end flush with the closest coil of the knot, because the Uni-Knot doesn't allow line slippage. To tie a small loop into the eye of a lure or fly, giving it free movement in the water, tie the same knot, up to the point where the turns are snugged up around the standing line.
5. Next, slide the knot toward the eye of the lure, by pulling on the standing line, until the size loop desired is reached. Use tacklebox pliers to hold the knot at this point, pulling the tag end to maximum tightness. Under normal casting and retrieving the loop will hold. Once the fish is hooked, the knot will slide tight against the eye for better security.

Two Hotspots For Giant Bluegills

More folks spend more time fishing for Bluegills than any other specie and for the record, more Bluegills are caught than any other fish. While the average Sunny will go two or three to a pound, there are those few choice spots that will produce Sunnies the size of a saucer. These fish weigh as much as 2 pounds apiece. We can't guarantee your success, but the record shows that two lakes have earned their reputation as being great choices for truly big Bluegills.

Pelican Lake, Orr, Minnesota

Here is a lake that thousands of folks drive by on their way to Canada each and every summer. Pelican is located on Highway 372 adjacent to the town of Orr, Minnesota. There are lots of resorts and campgrounds that will give you up-to-date information on the lake.

Iron Lake, Wisconsin

This tiny jewel is without a doubt Wisconsin's finest Bluegill lake. Just 247 acres in size, Iron Lake produces Bluegills weighing over a pound with great regularity. It also boasts the state record Bluegill caught in 1982, which tipped the scales at a whopping 2 lb. 6¾ ounces. The lake is located 2 miles southwest of Iron River, Wisconsin, on Highway #2. Iron River is approximately 40 miles north of Hayward.

Iron Lake is privately owned. However, there is a resort which provides access to the public. Top-O-The-Morn resort is operated by a fella named Sam Gurtner. For just $1.50 you can launch your boat from Sam's resort. Boat and motor rental are available, as is live bait, and of course, advice on where to fish. Sam Gurtner has made one major change on the lake by imposing a daily limit on his giant Bluegills of 15 per day, rather than the state's limit of fifty fish per person. Sam Gurtner is proud of his lake, as well he should be.

Can't Reach that Spot? Try "Flippin"

A recent method of getting your bait where those big "loner" bass are lurking is known as "Flippin". It's a sure-fire way to reach those unapproachable large-mouth who just love to hide in heavy cover. Flippin is a semi-vertical presentation of the lure, which is flipped out with a fixed length of line on a long rod to those small and equally uncastable spots. You can literally hit a bass on the nose with this method.

Locate those usually passed-up areas that you cannot possibly get to by casting. No matter what the season or time of day, you'll find those "loner" largemouth bass lurking under the vertical structure of a fallen log, standing tree, submerged brush, dock piers and open spots in dense vegetation.

Jigs will produce the best results. Either plain or tipped with a minnow or pork-rind strip. (A gob of worms is good also). Any difference in the feel or fall of the jig calls for an immediate strike, so watch your line. Use a heavy mono line (20 to 25-lb. test): Remember, you are fishing areas filled with obstacles.

Use a long 7½-ft. rod. That length facilitates flippin and aids in hoisting old "bucketmouth" out of all that junk. Don't forget, you are fishing very small and very "junky" spots.

Start the jig out in front of you on about 14-ft. of line. Lift the rod tip sharply as you grasp the line just behind the first guide with your off hand, extending the line out to an arm's length. The lure will begin to swing back and forth on about 7-ft. of line.

As the jig swings back, lower your rod until it points directly at the target. This permits more back swing and prepares for the forward movement.

As the jig starts forward, raise the tip, move the rod forward and let the line in your off hand be restored to its place at the first guide. At the end of the swing, give the tip a gentle upward flip.

As the jig moves toward the target, brake the forward movement evenly, causing the jig to stop about an inch above the surface over the target and drop quietly into the water. Immediately release the line in your off hand and take firm hold on the grip in preparation for a strike. Lower the tip as the lure sinks into the structure. Avoid a handful of slack line.

There are many good lures for "Flippin". The Blue Fox "Flippin Fool", designed and tested by Roland Martin is a proven performer. It's a weedless wonder.
